On the 12th inst., at Jemison, Mr. Langford in his ninetieth year passed on to a high and holy life, after having lived in the Methodist Church about seventy years. He was buried by his masonic brothers. Mr. Langford's spotless character claimed the admiration of all. He now awaits his friends as they shall go on up one by one.

Old farmers say a dry May for good crops. Well, we have had that, next good rains. If seasons continue, the toiling farmer who feeds every other industrial class, will once more rejoice in plenty.

Mr. Ira Campbell is driving his bees into the Dixie gum. He got 40 pounds out of one old gum.

Rev. Mr. Powel passed through Jemison last week, accompanied by his bride. He preached an excellent sermon while here.

Our last accounts from the sick list at Jemison was favorable. A MOTHER.

Jemison Lodge, No. 411 A. F. & A. M., elected the following officers for the masonic year of 1890-91: J. R. Hill, W. M.; Jere Gibson, S. W.; H. T. Caffey, J. W.; I. N. Langston, Tr.; J. P. VanDerveer, Sec'y; J. A. Skaggs, S. D.; Albert Patterson, J. D.; S. G. Whatley, Tiler.

Dr. Myles J. Greene, Grand Sec'y of the Grand Lodge of Alabama, A. F. & A. M., will deliver an address at the annual celebration of Jemison Lodge, No. 411, on the 24th inst.

Rev. A. E. Burns has gone to attend the Baptist Theological Institute at East Lake, and will be absent several weeks.

Cadet E. G. Givhan, of Howard College, has returned home.

Mrs. Montgomery and Miss Dedie Maull, of Benton, are visiting friends in Jemison.

Cadet Wells is visiting Mrs. M. Allen his sister.

Mr. Vaughan Cain, a prospective M. D. of Uniontown, is visiting relatives here.

Mrs. Givhan & Mrs. Gilliam, of Brewton, are visiting Mr. Allen Givhan's family.

Cooper's Station.

We have had refreshing rains which is making grass come forth in abundance.

Rev. W. J. Ruddick filled his regular appointment at Chestnut Creek Church last Saturday and Sunday, and preached some excellent sermons. Bro. Ruddick is a faithful worker.

Misses Ida and Annie Pinson, of Mountain Creek, visited friends at Coopers last Sunday, which made some of the boys look very pleasing.

Mr. Elijah Thomas had the misfortune to get his horse crippled by falling through the county bridge at Cooper's. If the horse is permanently injured Mr. Thomas may sue the county for damages.

The postoffice has changed hands at Cooper's, and Mr. Doll Downs is in charge now.

Mr. P. C. Dennis has recovered from a severe spell of sickness. M.

Verbena Views.

Mr. Streety, of Hayneville, paid us a short visit this week.

Mr. Furness, of Camden, came up to secure rooms for himself and family at the Clifton Hotel for the summer months.

Our fellow townsmen, Mr. B. S. Williams and Mr. McCord left together this morning for Stanton. Mr. Williams will return with Mrs. Williams by his side. And from the signs or rumors it will not be long before another "rib" will be taken by one whose name is one of the original colors.

Miss Sadie Bell Bentley, of Rockford, is visiting Miss Lilla Gulledge.

Miss Emma Jackson after a pleasant visit to friends here, has returned home in Montgomery.

Dr. O. J. Brooks, of Wetumpka, is visiting his mother, Mrs. A. J. Brooks.

Capt. C. L. Brown, of Bozeman, and Dr. D. A. Brown, of Chipley, Fla., have been visiting the family of Hon. G. A. Northington.

Nice peaches are selling on the street for twenty cents a dozen. The black berry crop is good. The plum is a failure.

Mr. F. A. Gulledge has sold two droves of mules here this year. The farmers should do like Mr. J. H. Bostwick and Mr. Sam Scott, two of our most prosperous farmers. They are raising their horses and mules. Mr. Bostwick has two beautiful horse colts, he has refused 100 dollars for his six months old colt. Mr. Sam Scott has two beautiful mules that he drives to his wagon that he raised.

Let us give the VIEW a boom. Let each subscriber and reader try and get one new subscriber to the VIEW. That is the way to let the editor know how we appreciate his paper. Let us make him feel good this warm weather.

We have had good rains and the crops are looking well.

South Chilton Items.

I am very glad indeed to see that the suggestion of Rev. B. M. Hunter has awakened an interest S. S. matters. I notice in your paper June 11th under "Verbena Views," that my name with others had been suggested to act as a committee. I would (by permission) suggest that Rev. C. W. Gavin be placed on said committee to co-operate with us in this good work. Bro. Gavin has several churches in this county, and under his care I further suggest Friday before the 5th Sunday in August (28th) at Ebeneezer Church, Stanton, Chilton county, Ala., to be the place for said committee to meet.

Plenty of rain and crop prospects are very good.

On the 24th of June there will be a public installation of officers of Masonic Lodge No. 483 and a public address by the Grand Master.

P. M. MOORE.

Lily Dots.

The rain has fallen at last. We had a young storm here last Friday, we have good crops on Mulbery.

We had a few hot days last week.

Miss Florence Deshazo visited Mrs. S. A. Douglass last week.

Miss Roberta Johnson, one of our most prominent young ladies has gone to the commencment at Rome, Georgia.

Mrs. S. A. Douglass visited her friend Miss Florence Deshazo recently.

Mrs. G. W. Jones will take a trip to Wetumpka in a few days.

Hapeville Dots.

The Methodist pulpit was filled on the 7th inst., by Rev. Mr. West, who preach a most excellent sermon in the interest of the Summerfield Orphan's Asylum.

We had a most delightful rain last Thursday, a long felt need which greatly enlivened crops and gardens.

Miss Kate Todd and her brother Edward have been on a visit to Mrs. Crumpton.

Mr. K. Martin is on a business trip to Selma.

Mr. B. F. Glover is on a business trip to Uniontown.

A Helpful Farmer's Daughter.

Farmer's daughters are coming to the front as well as farmers. Down in Pittsfield, Maine, the liberal publisher, Mr. Charles B. Haskel, of the Advertiser, one of our best exchanges, offered an elegant gold watch and chain to be voted the most popular young lady. The final ballot showed that Miss Cora E. Hubbaid, of Canaan, had won the coveted prize by a vote of 10,031. "She is," the Advertiser says, "a typical farmer's daughter, capable of successfully undertaking anything pertaining to a woman's work about the farm. Indeed she has been known to help the men folks during hay-time by driving the horse rake and otherwise helping along the out-door work." And this smart girl for domestic work is also a good student and a popular school teacher, and won the watch in competition with the belles and beauties of all that section of Maine. This shows that a young lady, however well educated and refined, need not be ashamed to help her mother in the kitchen or her father in the hay field or in the cotton patch. Honest labor hurts no one, and there would be fewer bankrupt farmers in the south if there were more daughters like Miss Hubbard. The fathers of such noble, helpful girls seldom complain that farming don't pay, for in such homes there are no drones, no extravagance.—Maj. Sidney Herbert, in Atlanta Journal.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India Missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this recipe in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. Noyes, 820 Powers' Blk, Rochester, N. Y. apr16-y

Hypocritical People.

People who suspect everybody are very unhappy, and we know of no remedy for their discomfort except self-improvement. Let them root out of themselves whatever vicious propensity they suppose to have its counterpart in the breast of all mankind, and their opinions of their fellow men will at once change for the better.

People who have no faith in their kind are dangerous persons to deal with. Taking it for granted that everybody with whom they come in contact in business is bent on overreaching them, their object is to spike the enemy's artillery by being the first to overreach. Candor is lost upon them, and they consider it refined hypocricy. Favors they look upon as cunningly devised lures, intended to lead them into a trap, and while receiving them willingly, chuckle inwardly at the thought that they are old birds and cannot be caught by any such devices.

Nobody will lose anything by avoiding such people.—Ledger.

Birdeye Graham was arrested Monday for forging a bill on the pay train, and while on his way to Columbiana jail Monday night under the charge of constable Charlie Hale he made his escape. There is a $25 reward for him.

Editorial Advice.

In a recent issue of the New York Journalist that paper fairly the grounds that the shears are quite as important at times as the quill. The following is what it says:

"A good many people don't know that an editor's selections from his contemporaries are quite often the best test of his editorial ability, and that the functions of the scissors is not merely to fill up vacant spaces, but to reproduce the brightest and best thoughts and the most attractive news from all sources at the editor's command. There are times when the editor opens his exchanges and finds a feast for eye, heart and soul. The thoughts of his contemporaries glow with life. He wishes his readers to enjoy the feast, and he lovingly takes up the scissors and clips, and clips and sighs to think that his space is inadequate to contain all the treasurers so prodigally spread before him. After all, the true test of a newspaper's real value is not the amount of original matter it contains, but the average quality of all the matter appearing in its columns whether original or selected.

Justice in China.

A remarkable decision is reported from Canton, in China. A gambler forged a number of notes for $1,000 each on another's bank and put them into circulation. When these notes were presented at the bank the forgery was discovered and payment was refused; whereupon the enraged holder, storming the place, dragged the manager before the magistrate. The latter held that, the writing and marks of the false notes were like those of the regular notes that ordinary people could not distinguish between them, the bank must have to honor, and he accordingly gave an order to this effect. As a result of this decision the bank has been obliged to suspend payment, while the author of the mischief escapes punishment.

Be Careful of Your Eyesight.

It is a well known fact that the eyesight—most delicate of our senses—may be easily destroyed by the use of glasses not suited to the eyes, or of poor quality.

It is the greatest foolishness to purchase eye glasses from unreliable dealers. The time taken in doing this is a thousand times better than the small amount saved.

With the above in view, Mr. A. K. Hawkes, well known throughout the country as a leading optician, has established a factory in Atlanta, where are prepared perfect glasses of any shade of strength. Hawkes' Crystallized Lenses have a national reputation and are endorsed by thousands of the best citizens of the United States, whose names will be given on application.

Druggists and merchants find these crystallized lenses the best paying part of their stock, because the people want them, and will have them. These spectacles are sold in nearly every town in America, and every pair is warranted. They are not supplied to peddlers, remember.

Mr. A. K. Hawkes is the only manufacturer of these Crystallized Lenses, and makes a specialty of filling oculists' prescriptions. Address all orders 12 Whitehall St., Atlanta, Ga.

Proof of Popularity.

THE LOWELL DIAMOND SAFETY BICYCLE FACTORY KEPT RUNNING TWENTY-FOUR HOURS A DAY TO SUPPLY THE DEMAND.

Passengers on the ghost train which whizzed through Worcester in the small hours of the morning have noticed of late a factory which never seems to close, and from whose windows no bright light streams all night long. It is the factory of the John P. Lowell Arms Company of Boston, and it is running literally twenty-four hours a day, with two complete sets of men, from the foreman down. This activity is due to the extraordinary popularity of the new eighty-five-dollar Lovell diamond safety bicycle, a machine which is giving the very best of satisfaction.—Boston Herald.

Deafness Can't be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

REV. DR. TALMAGE

THE BROOKLYN DIVINE'S SUNDAY SERMON.

SUBJECT:—"The Burden Bearer."

TEXT: "Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and He shall sustain thee."—Psalm lv. 22.

David was here taking his own medicine. If anybody had on him heavy weights, David had them, and yet out of his own experience he advises you and me as to the best way of getting rid of burdens. This is a world of burden bearing. Coming into the house of prayer there may be no sign of sadness or sorrow, but where is the man who has not a conflict? Where is the soul that has not a struggle? And there is not a day of all the year when my text is not gloriously appropriate, and there is never an audience assembled on the planet where the text does not fit the occasion: "Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and He shall sustain thee." In the far east wells of water are so infrequent that when a man owns a well he has a property of very great value, and sometimes battles have been fought for the possession of one well of water; but there is one well that every man owns—a deep well, a perennial well, a well of tears. If a man has not a burden on this shoulder, he has a burden on the other shoulder.

The day I left home to look after myself and for myself, in the wagon my father sat driving, and he said that day something which has kept with me all my life: "De Witt, it is always safe to trust God. I have many a time come to a crisis of difficulty. You may know that, having been sick for fifteen years, it was no easy thing for me to support a family; but always God came to the rescue. I remember the time," he said, "when I didn't know what to do, and I saw a man on horseback riding up the farm lane, and he announced to me that I had been nominated for the most lucrative office in the gift of the people of the county, and to that office I was elected, and God in that way met all my wants, and I tell you it is always safe to trust Him.

Oh, my friends, what we want is a practical religion! The religion people have is so high up you cannot reach it. In the Straits of Magellan, I have been told, there is a place where whichever way a captain puts his ship he finds the wind against him, and there are men who all their lives have been running in the teeth of wind, and which way to turn they do not know. Some of them may be here this morning, and I address them face to face, not perfunctorily, but as one brother talks to another brother, "Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and He shall sustain thee."

First—There are a great many men who have business burdens. When we see a man harried and perplexed and annoyed in business life we are apt to say: "He ought not to have attempted to carry so much." Ah, that man may not be to blame at all! When a man plants a business he does not know what will be its outgrowths, what will be its roots, what will be its branches. There is many a man with keen foresight and large business faculty who has been flung into the dust by unforeseen circumstances springing upon him from ambush. When to buy, when to sell, when to trust and to what amount of credit, what will be the effect of this new invention of machinery, what will be the effect of that loss of crop and a thousand other questions perplex business men until the hair is silvered and deep wrinkles are plowed in the cheek, and the stocks go up by the mountains and go down by the valleys, and they are at their wits' ends and stagger like drunken men.

There never has been a time when there have been such rivalries in business as now. It is hardware against hardware, books against books, chandlery against chandlery, imported article against imported article. A thousand stores in combat with another thousand stores. Never such an advantage of light, never such a variety of assortment, never so much splendor of show window, never so much adroitness of salesmen, never so much acuteness of advertising, and amid all the severities of rivalry in business how many men break down! Oh, the burden on the shoulder! Oh, the burden on the heart! You hear that it is avarice which drives these men of business through the street, and that is the commonly accepted idea. I do not believe a word of it.

Ah! my friend, do you say that God does not care anything about your worldly business? I tell you God knows more about it than you do. He knows all your perplexities; He knows what mortgages is about to foreclose; He knows what note you cannot pay; He knows what unsalable goods you have on your shelves; He knows all your trials, from the day you took hold of the first yardstick down to the sale of the last yard of ribbon, and the God who helped David to be king, and who helped Daniel to be prime minister, and who helped Havelock to be a soldier, will help you to discharge all your duties. He is going to see you through. When loss comes, and you find your property going, just take this Book and put it down by your ledger, and read of the eternal possessions that will come to you through our Lord Jesus Christ. And when your business partner betrays you, and your friends turn against you, just take the insulting letter, put it down on the table, put your Bible beside the insulting letter, and then read of the friendship of Him who "sticketh closer than a brother."

A young accountant in New York City got his accounts entangled. He knew he was honest, and yet he could not make his accounts come out right, and he toiled at them day and night until he was nearly frenzied. It seemed by those books that something had been misappropriated, and he knew before God he was honest. The last day came. He knew if he could not that day make his accounts come out right he would go into disgrace and go into banishment from the business establishment. He went over there very early, before there was anybody in the place, and he knelt down at the desk and said: "Oh, Lord, Thou knowest I have tried to be honest, but I cannot make these things come out right! Help me to-day—help me this morning!"

The young man arose and hardly knowing why he did so opened a book that lay on the desk, and there was a leaf containing a line of figures which explained everything. In other words, he cast his burden upon the Lord and the Lord sustained him. Young man, do you hear that? Oh, yes; God has a sympathy with anybody that is in any kind of toil! He knows how heavy is the hod of bricks that the workman carries up the ladder of the wall. He hears the pickax of the miner down the coal shaft; He knows how strong the tempest strikes the sailor at masthead; He sees the factory girl among the spindles and knows how her arms ache; He sees the sewing woman in the fourth story and knows how few pence she gets for making a garment; and louder than all the din and roar of the city comes the voice of a sympathetic God, "Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and He shall sustain thee."

Second—There are a great many who have a weight of persecution and abuse upon them. Sometimes society gets a grudge against a man. All his motives are misinterpreted, and his good deeds are depreciated. With more virtue than some of the honored and applauded, he runs only against raillery and sharp criticism. When a man begins to go down he has not only the force of natural gravitation, but a hundred hands to help him in the precipitation. Men are persecuted for their virtues and their successes. Germanicus said he had just as many bitter antagonists as he had adornments. The character sometimes is so lustrous that the weak eyes of envy and jealousy cannot bear to look at it. It was their integrity that put Joseph in the pit, and Daniel in the den, and Shadrach in the fire, and sent John the Evangelist to desolate Patmos, and Calvin to the castle of persecution, and John Hus to the stake, and Korah after Moses, and Saul after David, and Herod after Christ. Be sure if you have anything to do for church or state, and you attempt it with all your soul, the lightning will strike you.

The world always had had a cross between two thieves for the one who comes to save it. High and holy enterprise has always been followed by abuse. The most sublime tragedy of self sacrifice has come to burlesque. The graceful gait of virtue is always followed by grimace and travesty. The sweetest strain of poetry ever written has come to ridiculous parody, and so long as there are virtue and righteousness in the world, there will be something for iniquity to grin at. All along the line of the ages and in all lands, the cry has been: "Not this man, but Barabbas. Now, Barabbas was a robber."

And what makes the persecutions of the world is that they come from people whom you have helped, from those to whom you have loaned money or have defended in hard suits, or from men for whom you have done favors. Oh, the ingratitude of the world! Joseph's brethren sold him into Egypt. Peter denied his Lord. Judas betrayed Him with a kiss. Paul was deserted by well nigh all the churches. Demas forsook him, having loved this world. Alexander the coppersmith did him much evil. Hymenæus and Philetus overthrew the faith of some. Diotrephes cast out of the church those whom Paul loved. Others were puffed up, and many waxed proud. Talk about persecution! Talk about slander and misrepresentation! Talk about falsehood and villainy! Why, it has been the history of the world ever since it was peopled. What is opposition? Search it is over! Did not the Lord Jesus Christ Himself have to endure the contradiction of sinners against Himself? Did not some people believe? Are you surprised that the other day that great New York preacher said the other day that great wealth was the curse of the city churches. They gave their money freely, but it was like buying indulgences to commit sin. Their hearts were not in the prayers nor the preaching, nor in the Christian work, but were shut up in their pockets. When he tried to interest them the substance of their reply was: "How much money do you want?"

Now, if the plutocracy will do that much for the poor, we will let them off. Let the preachers go to them, and keep going, and plead for charity. It is a bigger thing than trying Dr. Briggs for heresy, or Dr. Woodrow, or any other doctor. There is no time for abstruse theology now. It is the day of practical Christianity, such as was preached and taught and acted by the friend of humanity. Friends, countrymen, north and south, let us awake to the long-smothered cry of the poor.

Plutus was the ancient god of wealth. He was a very mean sort of a god, for he distributed his gifts without regard to merit. In fact, he didn't like to give at all, but Jupiter forced him to divide out his money as fast as it accumulated. When he approached a person to make a gift he was lame and slow-footed, but when he left him to go back to his treasures he unfolded a pair of hidden wings and flew away.

Some of our plutocrats are well named, for it is like drawing their eyeteeth to get any charity out of them. But after all, there is something to be said in the average rich man's favor. None of them are misers, that I know of. They do not hoard and hide and keep their money to count and look at. The Astors build more houses to rent and that makes rent cheaper. Jay Gould builds more railroads and pushes them farther and farther into the wilderness, and that opens up new territory for the emigrant, the miners and the cattlemen. I never knew a community but what begged for a railroad, and I never knew one but what made war upon it as soon as they got it. There are many plutocrats in Atlanta and Chicago, but my observation is their money is always doing good work. It is building houses or railroads, or invested in ironworks or manufactories of some kind, and giving employment to labor. If there were no rich men, there would be no progress. It certainly is no sin to get rich if it is done fairly. Every man would get rich if he could, I would I know. I've got a gold lot, so-called, that I have owned for thirty years, and if I could sell it for $10,000 it seems to me that I would be quite happy. In fact, I would rejoice to get $5,000—and rather than break a trade $500 would make me feel calm and serene. There are thousands of rich men who came by their money honestly. Elias Howe invented the sewing machine after years of thought and experiment and the sacrifice of every dollar's worth of his property. It proved a blessing to the world and $5,000,000 in his pocket. McCormick did the same thing with his reaper. In both cases the world got value received and has no right to begrudge them their money. Some men get rich by good luck. I know a man who used to be poor and hard run, but his father-in-law left him twelve acres of poor, marshy land in the suburbs of the old Birmingham. It was thought to be worth $1,000 at that time, but he sold it a few years ago on the bulge of the boom for $250,000. There is nothing wrong about that, is there? And yet he is now a plutocrat. Moore and March and the Kiser and Keely and Chamberlin and High and Scott and Van Winkle and many others have worked hard and long and gotten rich, but who dares say they are not entitled to their earnings? Put yourself in their places and say. It is only the money obtained by fraud that should excite our indignation. Then again there is a big pile of money made by the bulls and the bears off of each other. They say that more than half of Jay Gould's fortune was made off of the millionaires who tried to corner him and failed. That does not concern us except for the bad example. If half a dozen gamblers play poker in a room and one of them win all the stakes it doesn't matter—the outsiders are no poorer. Fortunes are sometimes inherited and there is nothing wrong about that. And so before we make a sweeping condemnation against the rich let us inquire how the money came. This cry of "down with plutocracy" is an insidious, incendiary, revolutionary sentiment and feeds the baser passions of mankind. The plutocrats may love money for money's sake, and that is a sin, but the envy and covetousness that would rob them are worse sins.

But after all it is better, safer and nobler for a rich man to divide out before he dies. George Peabody and Peter Cooper are in heaven and their memories are enshrined in the hearts of their countrymen, but if Jay Gould or Astor were to die to-morrow nobody would care—outside of their kindred. They have made no name yet that will endure but it is not too late. Maybe they will.

BILL ARP.

A Lucky Man.

Colonel Samuel Daskam, first Selectman of Norwalk, Conn., and one of its most prominent citizens, paid a visit to New York recently and returned $2,000 richer than when he left home. In 1853 Mr. Daskam was engaged in the jewelry business in Troy, N. Y., and had as an apprentice, a young man named Peter Sheridan. In 1855 Mr. Daskam sold out and went to New York and shortly thereafter opened a store in Maiden Lane. Sheridan accompanied him to the metropolis and through Mr. Daskam's influence secured a good position.

Being desirous of starting in business for himself, Sheridan induced Daskam to lease a store at the corner of Sixth Avenue and Twelfth Street and stock it with goods, putting Sheridan in full possession. One morning the store was not opened as usual, and it was discovered that Sheridan had decamped, taking almost all the stock. The police were notified, but nothing was heard of Sheridan for six months, when it was reported that he was dead.

Sheridan had a half brother who went to California, where he acquired a moderate fortune, and a short time ago returned to New York. He learned from Sheridan's sister of his scurvy treatment of Daskam. The girl was dying of consumption and said that she could not die in peace until the wrong had been righted.

Joseph Sheridan, the half brother, went to Norwalk and had a talk with Mr. Daskam, and arranged a meeting at the Astor House in New York. The meeting occurred, but previous to leaving Norwalk Mr. Daskam deposited all the valuables usually carried about his person in the Norwalk Town Clerk's safe, as he was somewhat afraid of being bunkoed. He then proceeded to New York, and before he had been five minutes in Mr. Sheridan's company twenty one-hundred-dollar bills were handed him by that gentleman. Even then Mr. Daskam thought the bills were counterfeits until he walked into a bank and secured a certificate of deposit for $2,000.—[New York Times.

Life of a Submarine Cable.

A submarine cable has a life of ten or twelve years. If a cable breaks in deep water after it is ten years old it cannot be lifted for repairs, as it will break of its own weight. On this account cable companies are prepared to put aside a large reserve fund in order that they may be prepared to replace the cables every ten years. The action of the sea eats the iron away so completely as to turn the outside coating to dust or sediment while the core is still intact. The breakage of an ocean cable is a very costly accident, owing to the difficulties to be encountered in repairing it. It often becomes necessary in case of a break to [illegible] per day [illegible] attempting to lift the cable from the

THE POOR OPERATIVES.

The Women and Children Employed in Factories.

Bill Arp Writes of Them—The Crowded Workshops and Poisonous Atmosphere—The Third Party.

The pictures in last week's Youth Companion—May 21st, of the poor sewing women of Boston, are not so bad as the Georgia factory girls in The Century, but the description of their miserable condition is worse and arouses the most intense pity and indignation in the mind of every reader. Is it possible that such inhumanity to helpless women and children is allowed in a Christian land? We do not know Fletcher Osgood, but he seems to be well accredited by the publishers of that great Boston paper, and as the scene is laid in Boston we take it for granted that he has not overdrawn the painful picture. The head line says "Starved and Hopeless Lives." Mr. Osgood has been investigating and tells us of sixty contract shops in Boston that are operated by Russians or Polish Jews in the manufacture of ready-made clothing. Their workrooms are in the cheapest old buildings that can be found in the worst sections of the city. Some of the shops are reached by six or more flights of stairs, and are invariably foul with accumulated litter and dirt. The rooms are crowded with toiling women and girls, with here and there a boy. The atmosphere is fetid and fatal to health. The workers have an air of suppression about them such as characterizes a gang of prisoners. The majority of these workers are Americans, their ages from seventeen to thirty, but there were some women of fifty-five and some girls not over twelve. They were poorly dressed, many of the faces drawn and haggard, and the expression hard and sad. The work hours are from 7 o'clock in the morning to 6 in the evening, with forty-five minutes for lunch at noon. The most expert girls earn as much as $5 a week in the busiest season, but their average wages are from $3 to $4 a week. The exacting oversight of the bosses forces these workers to an unnatural tension, and then there is the fetid air, the abounding dirt, the forced association of girls with men of unclean habits and filthy speech, and the lowering of the moral tone of the females. No girl is free to look up from her work," and a minute late loses her half a day. But the girls can't stop, not for a day, to look for a better place. If they do they are boycotted, and can't get work anywhere. Some of the bosses have a way of "slowing" the clock so as to get extra time out of the girls. The foreladies are all filthy and use bad language, and the girls cannot escape it. Some of the girls won't tell where they live. They are ashamed to. They find rooms in old dusty attics in bad localities. They can't keep up but a few years at most, and then they die of overwork and destitution.

This is an abstract of Mr. Osgood's sketch—of these starved and hopeless lives—these human machines, whose daily work is killing the body and starving the soul—these creatures of God from whom "hope has withering fled and mercy sighed farewell." Sixty factories in Boston—how many more in New York and Brooklyn and Chicago and Cincinnati? Will history keep on repeating itself? It is less than fifty years since Tom Hood wrote "The Song of The Shirt," and now in cultured Boston it fits the time and the place as well as when he said:

Stitch, stitch, stitch,
In poverty, hunger and dirt,
* * *
Sewing at once with a double thread,
A shroud as well as a shirt.
Oh God! that bread should be so dear,
And flesh and blood so cheap.

Women and children working as prisoners work for crime, and no hope of a better time coming. When farmers feel that they are oppressed they cry aloud, and their wail is heard from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean. But the poor and friendless are too weak to cry. They can't be heard as far as the nearest church. Compared with these wretched women and children the poorest farmer in Bartow county is a prince, for he always has enough to eat—

And the sky is above his head
And the grass beneath his feet.

He is a freeman, and cringes not beneath the tyranny of any man, much less under the frown of a Russian or a Polish Jew. Friends, Americans, countrymen, can such things be and we be silent? It matters not where such suffering and misery are found—whether in the workshops of Boston or the factories of the north or of the south—let our philanthropic men and women seek it out and cry aloud and spare not. Georgia has her trusted agents, who are always guarding and protecting her prisoners from inhumanity, but who is to protect those who have committed no crime? It takes a great heart to do it, for it is an assault upon capital—an accusation, an arraignment of the rich at the bar of public opinion. It is said that Vanderbilt once exclaimed, "The public be d—d," but the public won't be d—d. Public opinion is a mighty river, and sometimes overflows its banks and sweeps everything before it.

Illiteracy is not the question before us now. It is never the question with the poor and oppressed. Slow, pitiless, wasting death that stares one in the face every day is not concerned about reading or writing. Bread is the first thing. Good food, good clothing, good shelter, some fresh, pure air to breathe, some medicine for the sick and a decent burial for the dead comes before books. If many of these poor girls need reform in their morals, begin with their temporal wants. Hunger and rags won't hear preaching. A hospital is a good thing for the forlorn and desperate cases, the sick and the dying, but the great work is to do away with the necessity of the hospital. Healthy work and fair wages and comfortable homes will do it. God said to Cain: "The voice of thy brother's blood cries unto me from the ground." And it seems to me that the wrongs of the suffering poor and every death in their miserable homes cry unto God against us. Then let the investigation go on, the search, the arraignment and the reform. It is a lonely, princely task. Not one man in all England was found who would dare visit the prisons and cry out for reform. But John Howard did it, and he reformed them all and brought blessings to thousands of the oppressed. Our people read the paper eagerly to see the last big advertisement of cheap goods. Cheaper and cheaper they go every week, especially clothing for men and women. Fine linen-bosom shirts for 49 cents! How cheap! we all exclaim—we must buy some—how can they afford them at that price! These sewing women can tell you. I never see one of these displayed advertisements, but what I feel a pain, a shadow and anguish verse of Hood's song comes over me:

Oh, men with sisters dear,
O men with mothers and wives,
It is not linen you are wearing out,
But human creatures' lives.

The newspapers tell us there is to be a third party and its watch-word will be, "Down with plutocracy." Do us that mean relief for the poor and friendless—the sewing women, the factory girls, the starved and hopeless in the slums of the great cities—or is it just for the farmers and the politicians? Who are the plutocrats, anyhow. Am I one? Are you one? I am rich, compared with Cobe. Maybe I am a plutocrat. My neighbor Munford is mine and Joe Brown is his and Jay Gould is Joe Brown's. Every man is a plutocrat to somebody. When the downing begins I reckon we will all go to wrestling and try to down somebody. I'll give Cobe a powerful tussle before he shall down me, but I'm afraid to tackle Munford. I think I will let him keep what he has got, if he will promise not to get any more.

Now, if the new party will put these poor toilers and bread-winners on the middle plank in their platform and provide honest work for them and good wages, I will join it. There are even 2,000,000 of people who live by the day and have no comforts, no spare time, no rest, no medicine, no delicacies when sick, no privileges when well. Tariff reform and free coinage of silver are nothing to them—but every cent that is added to the price of cotton or wheat or corn or potatoes is pinching to them. It makes their food and their clothing cost just that much more. Six months ago corn was 50 cents a bushel—now it is 61, and the poor are paying it. But I reckon they are not angry with it as much as they are with the farmers who get a big price and don't pay a little back. The [illegible] to do something for [illegible]

THE COTTON CROP.

Report of the Agricultural Department For June.

The report of the statistician of the department of agriculture at Washington for June makes the acreage in cotton 97.7 per cent of the area of 1890, and the average condition 85.7. The reduction of the area is attributed in some districts to the concerted contraction on account of low prices, but it is evident that it is mainly due to the unfavorable conditions for planting and germination. The record of planting in the May report is quite accurately the history of the crop to the present time. Planting was delayed by early rains, drought in the latter half of April, followed by continued drought in May. Germination arrested, replanting active, defective stands corrected are feature of the record frequently and almost universally reported. These conditions were less general and controlling in Texas than in any other state. The areas as compared with last year are given as follows: Virginia, 96; North Carolina, 94; South Carolina, 96; Georgia, 95; Florida, 99; Alabama, 96; Mississippi, 98; Louisiana, 96; Texas 105; Arkansas, 96; Tennessee, 95.

The general condition is the lowest for June since 1874, though it is a fraction lower than that of 1888 and 1889, the latter was of good yield through favorable later conditions. The state averages of condition are: Virginia 78; North Carolina, 75; South Carolina, 80; Georgia, 80; Florida, 90; Alabama, 89; Mississippi, 88; Louisiana, 88; Texas, 91; Arkansas, 89; Tennessee, 78. The temperature of May was quite too low for cotton, the cool nights checking germination and retarding growth. Of course these conditions make the crop late in development, in some places a few days, in others a week or two later than in the seasons of early development. There is frequent mention of bad stands, but constant replanting will reduce the vacancies to a minimum. Cultivation is necessarily late, and fields grassy, with the usual variations resulting from differences in soil, amount of replanting and relative promptness and efficiency of plantation managers.

Promoter-General Handy, who has done such efficient work through his department for the exposition, has been partially rewarded by an increase of salary from $5,000 to $7,500. It was intended to keep this action of the board a secret, but in a moment of enthusiasm one of Major Handy's assistants told a New York reporter of his chief's good luck.

Some more rare old family relics were offered to officials of the exposition a few days ago at panic prices. A woman in Virginia agreed to part with a continental note of the revolution of 1776 for the trifling sum of $50,000. This generous offer was made to vice-President Bryan in a letter as follows: "In the New York World of Sunday, May 17, 1891, is an account given of an offer of $25,000 made for the first draft of the emancipation proclamation. This induces me to write to you in the hope that you may be able to suggest a purchaser, who will be willing to give double this amount for a continental note of the revolution of 1776, hallowed to me by the associations and struggles of my heroic ancestors, and which no amount of money could purchase from me except for my poverty."

WORKING FOR THE THIRD PARTY.

Five of the seven members of the executive committee of the people's party met at St. Louis a few days ago. Those present were: H. E. Taubeneck, of Illinois, George F. Washburn, of Massachusetts; J. B. Weaver, of Iowa; A. O. Wilhite, of Kansas, and M. C. Rankin, of Indiana. Ignatius Donnelly, of Minnesota, and Mr. Davis, the seventh member of the committee were absent. Reports were received from gentlemen representing different parts of the country as to the outlook in their section. General J. B. Weaver, of Iowa; G. A. Shuford, of Alabama; C. H. Smith, of Kentucky; M. W. Wilkins, of Kansas, and Mr. W. J. Kline, of Illinois, and others, reported that the prospect for success in their states is most favorable. In Kentucky and Ohio a special fight will be made, and the active work of preparing for the campaign is left in the hands of Taubeneck and Robert Schilling, the secretary. The secretary was instructed to establish a literary bureau to furnish items of interest to the reform press, which now numbers between 600 and 700 papers. A weekly letter is to be prepared and published by those papers. A medal was ordered to be struck, commemorative of the party's convention at Cincinnati on May 19th. The medal is to be made of aluminum, and is to be distributed to different alliances to be sold, the proceeds to be devoted to campaign purposes next year. A constitution was adopted for the people's party clubs. The committee agreed to and instructed the chairman and secretary to prepare an address to the people of the United States. The following resolution is the most important action taken by the party, in view of the fact that it is the first declaration of where the party stands, and is in a great measure a refutation of the charges of dickering, which were so freely made during the Cincinnati convention: "Resolved, That the national executive committee is unalterably opposed to a fusion with any other political party, and will not recognize any individual committee that proposes or enters into such union, as affiliated with the people's party." After the adoption of this resolution the members entered into a general discussion of the best campaign policy to be pursued during 1892. The concensus of opinion was that the principal issues to be contended for will be a subtreasury plank, opposition to banks of issue, and to advocate government control or ownership of telegraph and railroads, and to uphold the interest of wage earners.

OREGON TO ORGANIZE.

The Alliance is booming in Oregon, as the following official proclamation issued by President Polk, shows: "Whereas information having been filed in this office through legally constituted authority, that a sufficient number of county organizations have been effected in the State of Oregon to form a State organization, under the constitution and laws of the National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union, Therefore I, L. L. Polk, by virtue of authority vested in me as president of the National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union, by the constitution of the same, do issue this, my official proclamation, designating Portland, Oregon, as the place, and Wednesday, the 8th day of July, 1891, at 10 o'clock a. m., as the time, at which the legal and properly accredited delegates of the various county organizations aforesaid shall assemble, for the purpose of adopting a constitution and the election of officers for the said State organization. * * * When the body thus constituted shall have adopted a State constitution, and shall have elected officers in conformity to the constitution of the National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union, and shall have adopted the secret work of the said order, the said State organization shall be entitled to a charter from the National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union, and to all the rights and privileges appertaining thereto.

THE WHOLE TRUTH.

The Montgomery, Ala., Daily Journal has the following editorial notice on the farmers' movement: "The mistake that some of the Journal's esteemed contemporaries make in their criticisms of the farmers' movement and its leaders is that the causes that have brought it about are not merely local. They are wide spread, ever spreading and growing in importance everywhere. Polk and Macune, Kolb and Adams, and hundreds of presidents of county and district alliances, have little to do with the threatened storm which may follow the terrible and ominous clouds now above the horizon. If each and every one of these central and conspicuous figures were dead, the clouds would continue to gather, continue to grow more portentious, and the longer the storm broods before it breaks the more irresistible will be its forces. How long they will continue to grow, how portentious they will become no one can foresee. But, as Hon. J. Phelps truly says in the North American Review for May, 'there is no government or institutions under our system that is not within the ultimate reach of the numerical majority.' When the farmers, so long the most conservative element in American political and social life, become at once the most radical, it can not be said that it is without reason."

THE SUB-TREASURY AND THE THIRD PARTY.

The Progressive Farmer, (Raleigh, N. C.) under the caption of "Some Troublous Things—How to get Rid of Them," says: "The sub-treasury bill harms the politicians and the friends of money power. They ought to get rid of it. They might to remove it from the domain of party politics. They should not allow it to become a disturbing element in parties and in communities. They should kill it. How? The easiest thing in the world, the simplest kind of a thing to do. Just let them offer something better and the people will drop the sub-treasury bill and jump at it. Try it, friends of plutocracy, and you will see how quickly you can kill it. The ghostly presence of a People's Party hovers over the pillows of certain people and they can't sleep. How will you get rid of it? Simply give the people a fair, square showing in the race of life. Give them parties and a government which recognizes their interests and their just rights—which will not dwarf and ignore the rights of persons and unduly magnify the rights of money. But these things will continue to trouble our politicians until the just demands of our suffering millions are respected. The leaders of the two old political parties may thank themselves and no one else for these troublesome things.

The Southern Mercury (Dallas, Tex.,) says: "A statement is going the rounds of the partisan press to the effect that only about 17,000 legal voters belong to the Texas Farmers' Alliance. When this false report was set on foot over forty counties had not sent in their semi-annual reports. The most of them happened to be the strongest alliance counties in the State. Since this report was started, which was in February last, 136 new sub alliances have been organized, 605 defunct alliances resuscitated, besides four new county alliances have been chartered since the Waco conference. Reports from all parts of the State are that great numbers of the best farmers who have heretofore held aloof, waiting to see what the alliance intended to do, are coming into the order, having become satisfied it means business. Besides, for the first time in three years, every officer in every department of the State Alliance and the official organ are in perfect accord, and every one of these officers is doing everything in their power to build up the order.

The San Miguel, (Cal.) Messenger, commenting on President Polk's proclamation on membership duty, says: "President Polk has issued an official manifesto in which he empatically states that no paper which has been constituted an Alliance organ, and no man who retains membership in the Alliance, has the right to assail Alliance principles or members of the Alliance publicly. The president says that the fullest discussion of all matters is invited and urged in Alliance councils, but the will of the majority is the law of the order, and if any one feels that he cannot acquiesce in the decision of the majority, and feels that he is conscientiously impelled to go before the public and assail our principles, he should first divest himself of all Alliance uniform. The president holds that any paper vested with authority to represent the order, which assails Alliance principles should be promptly repudiated; and that any member who assails another publicly, while both are Alliance members violates his obligation, and such an offense merits expulsion."

The McComb City (Ark.) Enterprise contains the following in refutation of charges that sub-treasury money will be taxed: "The sub-treasury plan is the only plan yet given out that requires no taxation for the emission of money. The idea that money issued through the sub-treasury is first taxed from one class of the people before it is loaned to another is absurd, and discloses the ignorance or mendacity of every one that makes the assertion. The third and fourth sections of that bill when read will exhibit the mean, underhand war certain selfish partisans are guilty of waging against the bill. Every farmer, mechanic and laborer should read the sub-treasury bill for himself and not be guided by partisan [illegible]

Secretaries of sub and county alliances and all other members are warned against sending or giving names of their officers and members except through official channels. We learn that literature is being sent out to members of the alliance as alliance literature which is written expressly for the enemies of our order to circulate among the members of our organization. Brethren watch your enemy, while you pray to be delivered from their oppression. See that those who are placed in office are true devoted followers of our order. What I said unto you brother secretaries, I say unto all, watch! —Rural Home, Wilson, N. C.

The Reveille, published at Hill City, Kan., says: "The members of the Alliance should constantly keep in mind that this is the year for them to study and acquaint themselves with the great issues that are being discussed. This is the educational year in that respect with us, and we must improve every opportunity to become familiar with our principles and demands, in order for them to avail us anything. We can not afford to stand still. 'Let us then be up and doing,' and always employ our best efforts to further our cause."

The Southern Alliance Farmer (Atlanta, Ga.) says: "So soon as farmers lay by their crops, there will be Alliance revivals held all over Georgia. Our brethren are starting even now. We are glad to hear of Alliance rallies, for they do our cause great good. They bring the members together, speeches are made and zeal and enthusiasm are worked up. The farmers can't have too many of them. We have a splendid corps of lecturers now in the field, and they are always at the service of our members."

THE CROP BULLETIN.

General Condition for the Week Just Passed.

The signal service weather crop bulletin for the week says: The temperature has been below normal in all districts except in the lake region, New England and the gulf states, where it has been normal and only slightly above. The greatest departure from the normal has been 6 degrees in Virginia, Iowa, Kansas and on the north Pacific coast. Copious rains have broken the drought in the east and middle gulf states. Maximum rainfalls are reported as follows: Waynesboro, Ga., 5.1 inches; Gainesville and Toccoa, Ga., 4.2 inches; Augusta, Ga., 3.83 inches. The only portions of the country where no rain has fallen are the middle New England coasts, middle plateau region, and in south California. The rainfall was one inch below normal in Wisconsin and Iowa, and two inches above normal in Tennessee, and in the northern portions of Alabama and Georgia.

GENERAL REMARKS.

Arkansas—Crop prospects materially improved during the week. Corn delayed by late planting. Cotton looks well. Oats and wheat, now being harvested, show better results than anticipated.

Texas—Cotton and corn very promising. The wheat crop best ever grown. Other crops good, except suffering from a lack of rain along the gulf coast.

Louisiana—Drought broken. Cotton, corn and sugarcane backward, but now growing rapidly. Rains too late for gardens. Rice crop small on account of dry weather.

Mississippi—As anticipated last week, the drought was broken by copious rains. All the conditions are more favorable than for the month. Crop small and late, but taking rapid growth.

Alabama—Rains beneficial to corn, cotton and oats. Gardens doing well.

Tennessee—Crops greatly improved. Wheat harvesting delayed by rain and wind. Cotton prospects improved, but still poor. Tobacco promising.

South Carolina—Plentiful rainfall, well distributed, has been beneficial to all crops. The lack of sunshine has been slightly injurious in cotton. In some localities hail has damaged crops, compelling replanting.

North Carolina—Weather decidedly cool and unfavorable to cotton, which is reported quite poor. An abundant wheat harvest began; many crops overrun with weeds.

Virginia—Crop conditions good. Corn in excellent condition. Rust is reported in some wheat fields. Fruits in good condition.

Throughout the winter grain section and western corn belt the conditions are reported variably. The weather's too dry in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York and New England for everything but winter grain, which promises well. Corn also suffering some, but average well.

ALABAMA DOTS.

Newsy Notes Paragraphically Presented.

The State fair catalogues are nearly ready to go to press. They will probably be out by July 1.

Work is progressing on the foundation of the Dallas cotton mill at Huntsville, which, under the contract, is to be completed by July 1.

Joseph M. Cary of Alabama was president of the senior class that has just graduated in the law department of the Georgetown university. It was quite an honor and worthily worn. Alabama makes a practice of getting there.

President J. L. Conley, of the United Mine Workers, has called a convention of miners to meet in Birmingham on June 27, to elect officers and for other important business. He urges that every mine in the state send at least one delegate, and that all meet at the Alabama Sentinel office on the morning of the convention.

Rev. J. N. Montgomery, a prominent Baptist minister residing at Vincent, Shelby county, Ala., committed suicide Monday afternoon by blowing his brains out with a double barrel shotgun. Mr. Montgomery attended church on Sunday and seemed in good spirits, but upon returning home complained of a pain in his head. He had suffered before from mental aberration. He then returned to his study, when the report of the gun was heard. He leaves a wife and four children.

Many elaborate notices of Mr. William A. Steeve's plans to build a great cotton factory, first at Pell City and afterward at Riverside, have appeared in the press. It turns out that Steeve has been playing fast and loose with everybody in Pell City who would lend him money or sell him anything. He was escorted out of the place a few days ago by fifty citizens, and warned not to return. He ventured back and was arrested on the charge of obtaining money under false pretenses.

The Chattanooga Southern railway is completed. The last rail has been laid and the last spike driven. The line, which runs from Gadsden to Chattanooga, opens up a new agricultural, cotton and mineral country. From Gadsden it is proposed to extend the line to Columbus, Ga., to connect with the independent lines, giving a new route to Florida and coast points. The new line is of vast local imporance and its completion is hailed with delight by both the citizens of Chattanooga and Gadsden.

At Birmingham, several days ago, Judge Porter made his decision in the matter of working the convicts. He decided that it would be much better for Jefferson county and the prosecution of crime to hire them to the coal operators. The board of commissioners stood: Thomas and McAdory for working on the county roads and Hickman and Brow for the coal mines. Judge Porter made his decision and the convicts were leased to the Sloss Iron and Steel Company at Coalburg for $9 per head per month.

On October 1st next the old law providing for a school superintendent in each township is displaced by the new law passed by the last legislature, requiring the appointment of three township trustees. These trustees shall be both freeholders and householders in their township, and shall be appointed by the county superintendent of education. The appointments are to be made between now and October 1st, when the trustees will enter on the discharge of their duties. In a circular Superintendent Harris urges that only the very best men be appointed.

The recent fire at Dothan was a very destructive one. At one time it was thought that the whole town was doomed. Those burned out were: J. G. Guilford, merchant; J. A. Balkmer, merchant; Watson & Baker, merchants; B. T. Moody, merchant; H. G. Pithman, merchant; Powell & Kirkland, merchants; C. W. Reeves, merchant; Brantley & Co., merchants; Robert Evans, merchant; Bust's barber shop; Mrs. Murphree, millinery; Mitchell's confectionery. The fire commenced in Baker & Watson's, Robert Evans and B. T. Mood's store, caused no doubt by incendiary. The loss is about $50,000; the insurance about $30,000. Of the above losses, it is said that the Montgomery companies lose $1,250, of which $750 is in the Commercial and $1,500 in the Capital City, partly reinsured.

Hon. James H. Gilchrist, who suicided at Montgomery a few days ago by taking morphine, was a member of the last Alabama legislature, and was a son of Col. J. C. Gilchrist, one of the oldest and most prominent citizens of Montgomery county. He had an exceptionally lovable nature, and has for his unfortunate habit of occasionally getting on [illegible] and was an able debater, eloquent, earnest and logical. In his letter to his father he bade his father an affectionate good-bye and left a message for another friend. He gave as his reason for his act that he preferred death to the life he was leading. He had struggled in vain to quit drinking, and the habit still grew on him.

Favorable to a Sale.

An English syndicate has taken an option on 6,000 acres of coal land in the Coosa field, embracing the property of the Broken Arrow, No Business Creek and Trout Creek Mining companies. The price per acre ranges between $16 and $25, aggregating $125,000. A meeting was held in Pell City, several days ago, at which a majority of the stock of the three companies was represented. Those present were Judge John W. Inzer and Judge James T. Greene, of Ashville; Peyton Ronan of Jacksonville, Ala.; J. A. Montgomery of Birmingham; W. J. Gilmore of Lewisburg, Ala.; R. M. Alverson and G. W. Daughdrille of Coal City, and Jacob Haas, cashier of the Capital City bank, Atlanta, Ga. The action was favorable to the sale. The English people now have an expert examining the property.

A Test Case.

Mr. D. W. Rodgers, the prominent saw mill man of Talladega county, has been arrested on the charge of violating the law of Alabama, and his trial will test a matter in which a great many workingmen are interested. The company of which he is president, issues a sort of pay check representing different values, which the company honors, at its store, and which says on its face not good except among company employes. A young man claims to have worked for the company, to have received these in pay for it and to have been refused both cash and goods at the store for the checks when presented. He placed the checks with a justice for collection, who met with the same refusal. As attorney for his client and as a justice of the peace the latter concluded that the issuing of such change bills was a violation of section 4143 of the Alabama code, and to test the matter had the company's agent, Mr. Rogers, bound over in the sum of $100. The case will be heard before Judge Miller at the coming term of court, which begins the second Tuesday in July, and will excite considerable interest.

Jerre and the Judge.

Jerre Simpson and Judge Peffer of Kansas will attend the Alabama state fair at Birmingham on the four days to be devoted to the grange and the Farmers' Alliance. The contract between these two noted men and the management of the Alabama state fair has been formally signed, and there is no doubt of their coming. The days to be set apart for the grange and the alliance have not yet been definitely determined upon, but that is a minor detail. The fact that Jerre Simpson and Senator Peffer will be present is one of the biggest items in the great programme for Alabama's great state fair. They will in themselves be quite sufficient to draw thousands of visitors, for there is not a newspaper reader in Alabama who doesn't have a keen desire to see these two most conspicuous figures in the wonderful political campaign of last November. Simpson and Peffer represent something more than a passing fancy in the minds of men. They are the representatives of a movement which has startled the political world by its magnitude, and set statesmen and politicians of all parties to thinking, if not to scheming. These men come to Alabama to assist Alabamians to make the state fair a success, and they will receive more than a cordial welcome. Their presence will be hailed with enthusiasm.

BUSINESS OUTOOK.

Dun & Co.'s Report of Trade for the Past Week.

The weekly trade review of R. G. Dun & Co. is encouraging to the legitimate business interests, but says, "there is nothing rose-colored in our report as far as respects the chances of speculators and gamblers." The state of trade is well maintained, in spite of the large exports of gold. The iron market at Philadelphia is strengthened by western orders. Hides are quiet with cheering prospects, though the shoe trade is but fairly satisfactory; the paper trade is fair and hopeful; tobacco and drugs unchanged; paints dull and the liquor trade good. In groceries there is a dismal lack of speculation, but tea moves more largely than last year. Business men throughout the country regard the situation as favorable, and look upon the moderate shrinkage in trade as a natural result of last year's heavy crops.

DOWN TO DEATH

RAILROAD HORROR IN SWITZERLAND.

A Bridge Gives Way and [illegible] People are Killed.

A cablegram from Berne, Switzerland, says: A fearful accident occurred on the Moenchen, Stein and Bale railway Sunday through the collapse of a bridge beneath a heavily loaded excursion train. The train was crowded with people on the way to attend a musical fete. The engines and the first car plunged into the river. All the passengers in the cars were drowned. Two cars remained suspended from the bridge. All the trainmen were killed. Thirteen cars were saved.

Another dispatch from Berne, Switzerland, says: Further details received from the scene of the terrible railroad accident, which occurred Sunday at a village near Bale, on the Monchenstein and Bale railroad, show that two engines and the carriages, loaded with excursionists, fell into the stream which flowed beneath the iron bridge, which gave way and caused the disaster. The carriages and engines now form a shapeless mass of wreckage beneath the bridge structure, and by their own size prevented two other carriages which were suspended practically in the air, from falling, and still further increasing the number of killed and wounded.

The bridge, or viaduct, which collapsed and caused the accident, has only recently been built, and just before strengthened after sustaining damage from the rising of the river. The total number of people who lost their lives by the collapse of the railroad bridge is now placed at 120, with hundreds more or less injured, citizens of Bale and neighborhood. Engineers who have inspected the bridge since its collapse say that the iron work of the structure also gave way and that the masonry work was intact.

A CITY OF MOURNING.

Scenes which were truly heartrending were witnessed in Bale Monday when the bodies of a large number of victims were brought to the city from the place where the accident occurred, by the sorrowing relatives who had gone in search of missing husbands, fathers, or brothers, wives, mothers or sisters, as the case might be, for representatives of the majority of the best families of Bale left there to attend the musical festival. Wives brought home the bodies of their husbands, and husbands brought home the bodies of their wives and children. Several families are practically wiped entirely out of existence by the disaster, the full extent of which is not known even at this hour.

NINE HOURS A DAY

Has Been Decided Upon for Job Printers.

A Boston, Mass., dispatch says: At the convention of the International Typographical Union, Saturday, a telegram from Ottawa was read expressing the grateful thanks of Lady Macdonald for the message of sympathy sent by the union on account of the death of Sir John. The following, from the committee on fewer hours, was adopted by a vote of 100 to 9:

Resolved, That this convention heartily endorses the movement regulating the hours of labor in the book and job branches of the printing trade to be no more than nine hours per day, except Saturday, when not more than eight hours shall constitute a day's work throughout the jurisdiction of the International Typographical Union, and refer the matter to subordinate unions for ratification, the same to go into effect on October 1st, 1891.

In order to insure the enforcement of the law by printers, a tax was levied for the support of all members of the craft who may be obliged to strike, and a fine of $15 was imposed upon all printers who failed to obey the nine-hour rule of the International Typographical Union.

Anniston is going to try to entertain about 250 hungry editors for three days. We feel sorry for Anniston.

The railroad property in Alabama has increased in value from $8,000,000 to $46,000,000 in the past fourteen years, and, according to the Montgomery Advertiser, saves the people of the state $200,000 a year in taxes, which they otherwise would have to pay.

Drunkeness is the mother of misdemeanor, the matter that ministereth all mischief, the root of wretchedness, the vent of vice, the subverter of senses, the confounder of capacity; raising a storm of the tongue, billows in the body, and shipwreck in the soul; the loss of time, corrupter of conversation, the discredit of marriage, the infamy of honesty, the sink that swalloweth chasity, the infirmity whose physician is ignominy, and the madness whose medicine is misery.—St. Austin.

We read a great deal about the dollars of our daddies. The truth is, our daddies were far from being overburden with dollars. Any boy born not so many years ago, can well remember what a trial it was with all the influence and assistance of a good mother to make the raise necessary to ensure admission to the coming circus.

Pater familias affected to think such exhibitions demoralizing to a boy, and frowned upon the proposition, when the truth was, on counting noses and finding it required a matter of several dollars to carry the family through, it became a mattter of grave consideration. In those days a lawyer's fee for driving ten or fifteen miles to attend a case of a poisoned cow or hog trespass was $5, and cases not plentiful at that. The village doctor drove a like distance to see a patient afflicted with rheumatism or to set a broken leg for a fee of one dollar and a half or two dollars.

One could board at the village hotel where pure cream abounded and real chickens were served, good living enough for anybody, for the munificent sum of two dollars and fifty cents a week. Such were the earnings and expenses of our daddies.

A Delmonico lucnh of these times would take more dollars than our daddies earned in a week. Dollars were as large as cart wheels and it would make said paternals rise from their graves to hear the flippant talk about them. If we earned no more and had no heavier expenses than those dear old daddies of ours and took as good care of money we would be much better off and happier. Our parson's salary was $250 per annum and not all cash at that, and we got more hell fire for it than you get nowadays for the thousands paid our fashionable clergyman.

What a pity the good old days did not continue up to these times and we could get as much for our money as our ancestors did and we had their habits of economy. It is to be hoped they are not looking down upon us to see how we have degenerated and how irreverently we talk of their dollars, and wish we had as hard work to get them as they had. The question is, are our methods any improvement on theirs? Scarcely. We think ourselves a great deal smarter, perhaps we are, but are we as honest and square? Are we as good men? When we read of the frequet embezzlements dishonest proceedings of trusted men, it looks very much as if we were not.—N. Y. Globe.

Senator Peffer's Say.

Senator Peffer, the farmer politician of Kansas, the same that is rattling in about Ingalls' seat, was interviewed the other day in Washington. Among other things he was asked: "If there is a division among Southern white men, would it not give the Republican party control of the South? Isn't it better for all Alliance men in the South to stay in the Democratic party and avert so great a calamity?"

To this he replied: "We do not care anything about that. We want to destroy both old parties unless they will help us. We cannot concern ourselves with your politics." Then, again, on being asked if the Southern farmers were to join the movement would it not turn the South over to the negro party, he reptied: "It don't matter."

How do Southern farmers like this picture? How do they relish this dictum of the great Senatorial Mogul of the People's Party the party that Brother Gaither, the Alabama member, says the Southern Alliance men are expected to indorse and support. Mr. Peffer distinctly declares that it does not matter, in his opinion, whether the South is turned over to the negro or not, so long as he can succeed in his schemes. To him the prosperity of the South, and with it the prosperity of the Southern agricultural element, is a matter of supreme indifference compared with the accomplishment of his political schemes.

Can the Southern farmer sympathise with the Kansas Senator in his indifference? Does not the Southern Democratic famer know that Republican, or what is the same, negro denomination in the South means ruination to him and all his interests? If Senator Peffer talks this way there is no doubt about how the ex-carpet-bagger feels, he will soon discover that he is reckoning far wrong when he counts upon the support of the Southern Alliance. He will have to completely change his dictatorial tactics, if he expects his party to cut any figure in Southern politics.

He cannot look forward to any affiliation with him by any white Southern element, if he says that it doesn't matter to his party whether the South does come under negro control or not. The Third Party organization will have to come out most emphatically and without reservation in opposition to the negro equality doctrines of the Republicans if it wishes to receive any encouragement or support in the South. And if it attempts to win by relying upon dividing the North alone, it is doomed to certain failure from the outset.

The South cannot be with Peffer's party, for upon white rule in this section depends the very maintenance of Southern society and civilzation, which is para mount to all other considerations.

What will it profit the planter of the South if the Third Party marches triumphantly to victory if the South is turned over to the tender mercies of Radicalism?

Does Brother Gaither sympatize with Senator Peffer in in his wiew? We think not.—Birmingham News.

"Should women preach?" is the question Dr. Felton and Dr. Hawthorne are discussing over in Georgia. "Should they preach?" and "do they preach?" are entirely different proposition, and whatever conclusions is reached by the distinguished Geogians, women will continue to preach. The hour of services is generally immediately after her husband returns from his alleged lodge, during the night—sometimes it is in the early part of the evening, and sometimes in the early morning. That depends. --Montgy. Journal.

SHE WANTED THE NEWS.

A woman's Idea of What is Interesting in a Daily Newspaper.

Chicago Tribune.

"If there's any important news," said the news paper man's wife "wake me up when you come home and tell me about it."

And the next morning as he was walking home he hastily reviewed the news of the night and put himself in shape.

"Wake up," he said, when he got there. "There's a war with Italy on."

"About what?" She asked as she yawned and strethed her arms.

"Why, you know, in that New Orleans affair—"

"Oh, that old thing." she interrupted. "What else?"

"Well, at one of the Harrison meetings to-night—"

"Oh, yes, of course, Politics—always politics."

"Lyman Gage has refused—"

"Who cares? Give me some news."

"Chauncey Depew has been indicted by—"

"That railroad accident, of course."

"Well, then, the princess—"

"European scandal. There's one every day."

The newspapet man sighed, thought a moment, and then said:

"I don't think of anything more, except a little local paragraph about Mrs. Brown having left her husband."

"Oh!" [illegible]

Neighborhood News Gathered by Our Correspondents.

Stanton Notes.

Miss Leila Macon, of this place, and Mr. Williamson; of Verbena, were married here last Tuesday morning at 7 o'clock, Dr. W. C. Cleveland, of Montevallo performing the ceremony. The affair was very quiet, no attendence except near relatives. The happy couple left for the groom's home on the 8 o'clock a. m. train. A wedding is such an unusual occurrence in our town, it attracted considerable attention, especially among the widows and old maids, who under frivolous excuses were at the depot to witness the departure, of the hearts of two that beat as one.

In connection with the marriage a little joke was gotten off on a Stantonite who knew nothing of the affair. Dr. Cleveland had told him that he wanted to come down and attend the Stanton masonic lodge, and when the masonic brother received a letter from the Dr. telling him that he would spend Monday night with him, but failed to state his business, the good brother thought the Dr. had gotten mixed on the time of the lodge meeting and hastily dispatched him a letter, telling him not to come; and to put off his trip until the next Tuesday night. You can well imagine his embarrassment when the object of the doctor's visit was explained, and he found himself implicated in preventing a marriage ceremony.

Mr. Richard Coe is errecting a beautiful two-story house dwelling for Mrs. E. G. Gregory. The house when completed will be quite an ornament to our town.

Capt. D. Partrige, of Selma, spent yesterday in our town.

The masons will have a big dinner, and a public installation on the 24th of June, and a big time is expected and we would be pleased to have the editor of the VIEW present.

[The meeting of the Press Association in Anniston at the same time will prevent our accepting your kind invitation.—ED. VIEW.]

Lily Dots.

Mr. C. L. Lenoir, is on the sick list.

Mr. Clay Jones spent Sunday at Macedonia.

Little Annie White, of Verbena, is visiting her uncle Tom Lenoir.

Beginning with last Sunday, weekly prayer meeting will be held in the M. E. Church.

Mrs. Mary Woolley, who has been quite sick for sometime is slowly improving.

Mr. Will Deshazo and S. A. Douglass spent last Tuesday in Verbena on business.

Prof. G. L. Speer begins work at Greenleaf Academy again Monday morning.

Those who cried for rain, are now crying, quit.

During the recent dry spell, one of Lily's brightest lights was asked when it would rain. "Oh!" replied the B. L., "about the time this drought breaks up."

That fishing party has vaporized. No one went to the river this week.

Bluford Jones has completed his tax assessment and will now enjoy a much needed rest.

Prof. S. A. Douglass and wife are boarding at C. L. Lenoirs. Mrs. Douglass is not in good health, but we hope she will soon be perfectly well.

Miss Ora Johnson has returned from Rome, Ga. She is now a graduate of that institution and a most excellent and accomplished lady. Her many friends are glad to welcome her to her old home.

Mr. B. F. Hammond returned to Birmingham Monday, where he is sergeant at arms in a carpenter shop.

Quite a crowd of our people attended church services at Macedonia last Sabbath. During the day two young bloods of that place, becoming thoroughly "tanked" on "wild cat," profaned the day and place and disgraced themselves and the community by indulging in a fight. It is needless to say that our good people were disgusted by such conduct and can find no words too strong to express their comments.

A DREAM REALIZED,

A Stanton Man Bitten by the Snake He Dreamed Of.

A man gave your correspondent this snake story and swears it to be true.

He says that he was stopping with a friend and the next morning his friend told at the breakfast table a dream that he had the night previous. He said, "Bill and I dreamed last night that I saw a tremendous rattle snake, and in attempting to kill it the snake bit me in the face and I died from the bite."

After breakfast they went down below the horse lot and were engaged in moving some logs. They had rolled a few logs down and his friend remarked, excitedly, "Bill, here is that snake I saw in my dream," and going to the fence close by got a rail. Bill remonstrated with him asking that he be allowed to kill it as the other part might also be [illegible] and from the sudden stopage of the force it threw the man on his all fours with his head right at the rattler's mouth, which bit him twice in the face before he could get away. The man only survived a few minutes after he was bitten, thus fully realiged his dream. Possibly it is best not to tell a bad dream while at the breakfast table.

Mrs. McIntosh, of Camden, Ala., has been visiting the family of Mr. W. H. Foshee.

Mr. Frank Norris, of this place, attended the picnic at Mountain Creek Saturday last.

Mrs. O. G. Logan, of Verbena, visited her sisters, Miss Nannie and Delaney Duke Friday.

Rev. John Sampey, wife and lovely little daughter, of Louisville, returned home last week.

Mr. H. C. Holly, of Lowndes, a brother of Mr. T. B. Holly, of our city, visited Clanton the past week.

Cadet W. L. Crew, of Goodwater, is visiting his sisters, Mrs. O. P. Bentley and Mrs. W. B. Nolen, of this place.

Mr. Clem Mullins has returned from Mississippi, where he has been attending college for the past nine months.

Rev. A. J. Briggs with the assistance of Mr. T. H. Johnson is holding a protracted meeting at the Methodist Church.

Misses Nannie Callen, of Birmingham, and Vaugh Callen, of Selma, are visiting relatives in our town. They are neices of Judge H. J. Callen.

A drunken man on the streets Saturday morning created some excitement and comment. He was unceremoniously jailed by the Sheriff.

Mr. W. A. Candler reports cotton blooms on his place near Clanton as early as the 2d day of June, which is some days earlier than the cotton belt this year.

Mrs. J. M. Ponder and daughters have returned home from Tuskegee, where they went to be with Mrs. Lawson during her last hours. Mrs. Lawson was Mrs. Ponder's mother and Mrs. W. L. Sampey's grandmother.

Freeman House, colored porter on the accommodation train was arrested in Montgomery last Thursday and brought to Clanton Saturday by Sheriff Hayes, and was lodged in Clanton jail, charged with carrying concealed weapons.

The celebrated Hamilton-Brown Shoe Company's goods can be had at W. L. Sampey's store at reasonable prices. They are first class shoes and wear well.

Rev. A. J. Briggs and wife visited Coosada last week.

Tip Mullins has returned from Nashville, and will spend the summer with his father's family at Jumbo.

From every section of the county come encouraging reports of crop prospects. Rains have been copious.

The young people, of Clanton, had an enjoyable picnic at Kinchen, Ala., about 8 miles out in the country.

We learn that an enterprising citizen of Clanton contemplates establishing a shoe factory at this place at an early day.

Miss Katie Lane, the charming daughter of Judge Lane of Greenville, Butler county, has returned home after spending a pleasant visit with relatives here.

A TERRIBLE WARNING.

If a man doesn't pay the printer,
When his earthly life shall cease,
The devil will strike a spliufer
That will ketch fire slick as grease!

There was a recent rumor on the streets that a building boom would be inaugurated in Clanton right soon by a stock company. We are hoping and praying for that movement to "inaugurate."

We would call the attention of of our readers to the fact that Mr. W. H. Merritt is fully prepared to fill orders for undertakers supplies. He has goods of all grades in this line, and can be depended upon to fill orders promptly, and satisfactorily.

Mr. Anderson Baker whose farm is near Verbena, sent the VIEW the first cotton blooms. They were received last Wednesday just as our last week's edition was worked off. He sent about eight or ten blooms showing that they were plentiful on his place.

The Skipper Sunbeam Society of the Baptist Church elected the following offices Sunday evening: Mrs. E. A. Matthews, President; Mrs. John Chandler, Vice President; Mrs. T. G. Holt, Organist; Miss Mary Duke, asst. Organist; Miss Hattie Aldridge, Secretary; Otis Chandler, Treasurer.

Mr. B. M. Gentry, county tax collector, is again suffering from a snake bite received about ten years ago. Every summer Mr. G.'s hand on which he was bit becomes inflamed with the poison still remaining in the wound, and swells all the way to the shoulder. He also becomes as thin and sallow as if he had a spell of billious fever, until the inflamation subsides.

W. C. T. U.

Fifteen or twenty ladies met last Friday afternoon about 5 o'clock at the Baptist Church according to appointment to organize the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Clanton. Miss Griffin presided at the meeting. Mrs. T. G. Holt was elected President of the Union, Mrs. W. H. Lawrence, Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Dr. Matthews, Recording Secretary and Miss Belle Watts, Treasurer. Rev. R. M. Hunter closed the meeting ing with prayer. There were several gentlemen present. The time and place for the next meeting will be announced in due time. Every lady in Clanton will be welcomed into the Union.

Burglar Proof.

A funny story comes from Randolph, Ala.

In that section of Bibb county lawlessness has been prevalent a long time; has been so flagrant, indeed, that the people have at last risen en mass to put it down. Burglary came to be so common an occurrence that very little importance was attached to it.

Among the principal sufferers, probably the chiefest of them all, has been Dr. J. W. Brand, who keeps a store and runs the post-office in the same building.

The bold bad burglars went in and emptied his safe so often that he concluded to submit to the inevitable, and confine his attention to persuading them to let him off as light as possible.

So he got him a card and wrote the safe combination on it clearly and distinctly. Above this he wrote, "Do not blow open my safe. Below you will find the combination with directions how to open it."

His money he carried home, leaving only his books in the safe. After this the burglars would come, look around open the safe and sneak off.—Age-Herald.

Uncle Stephen, an old negro, had come to cut grass in the front yard, and as Colonel Winter started out to his office he stopped to greet the old man. "Well Stephen," said the Colonel, "I hear that you intend to give your son an education."

"Dat's what I does, sah. I knows what 'tis ter struggle erlong witdout larnin', an' I is 'termined dat my son sha'n't trabble bar'foot ober de same hard road dat I did."

"A noble resolution, Stephen. I wish all fathers felt as you do. Is your boy learning rapidly?"

"Ez fast ez er hoss kin trot, sah. Why, last week he wrote a letter to his aunt dat libs mo' dan twenty miles from yere, an' after while he gwine ter write ter his udder aunt dat libs fifty mile away."

"Why doesn't he write to her now?"

"Oh, he kaint write so fur yit. He ken write twenty miles first-rate, but I tole him not ter try ter write fifty mile till he got stronger wid his pen. But he's gwine to git dar, I tell you. Won't be mor'n er year fo' dat boy ken set down at one eend ob de gumbronment an' write er letter cl'ar ter de udder eend."—Exchange.

REV. DR. TALMAGE

THE BROOKLYN DIVINE'S SUNDAY SERMON.

SUBJECT.—"The Battle of Creeds."

TEXT: "He that passeth by and meddleth with strife belonging not to him is like one that taketh a dog by the ears."—Proverbs xxvi., 17.

Solomon here deplores the habit of rushing in between contestants; of taking part in the antagonisms of others; of joining in fights which they ought to shun. They do no good to others and get damage for themselves. He compares it to the experiment of taking a dog by the ears. Nothing so irritates canines as to be clutched by the lugs. Take them by the back of the neck and lift them and it does not seem to hurt or offend; but you take the dog by the ear, and he will take you with his teeth. In all the history of kennels no intelligent or spirited dog will stand that. "Now," says Solomon, "you go into quarrels or controversies that are not yours and you will get lacerated and torn and bitten. 'He that passeth by and meddleth with strife belonging not to him is like one that taketh a dog by the ears.'"

This is the time of resounding ecclesiastical quarrel. Never within your memory or mine has the air been so full of missiles. The Presbyterian Church has on hand a controversy so great that it finds it prudent to postpone its settlement for at least one more year, hoping that something will turn up. Somebody might die or a new general assembly may have grace to handle the exciting questions. The Episcopal Church has cast out some recalcitrants, and its digestive organs are taxed to the utmost in trying to assimilate others. "Shall women preach?" "Or be sent as delegates to conferences?" are questions that have put many of our Methodist brethren on the "anxious seat." And the waters in some of the great baptistries are troubled waters. Because of the controversies throughout Christendom the air is now like an August afternoon about five o'clock, when it has been steaming hot all day, and clouds are gathering, and there are lions of thunder with grumbling voices and flashing eyes coming forth from their cloudy lairs, and people are waiting for the full burst of the tempest. I am not much of a weather prophet, but the clouds look to me mostly like wind clouds. It may be a big blow, but I hope it will soon be over. In regard to the Battle of the Creeds, I am every day asked about it. I want to make it so plain this morning what I think that no one will ever ask again.

Let those who are jurymen in the case—I mean those who in the different ecclesiastical courts have the questions put directly before them—weigh and decide. Let the rest of us keep out. The most damaging thing on earth is religious controversy. No one ever comes out of it as good a man as he goes in. Some of the ministers in all denominations who before the present acerbity were good and kind and useful, now seem almost swearing mad. These brethren I notice always open their violent meetings with prayer before devouring each other, thus saying grace before meat. They have a moral hydrophobia that makes us think they have taken a dog by the ears. They never read the imprecatory Psalms of David with such zest as since the Briggs and Newton and MacQueary and Bridgman and Brooks questions got into full swing. May the rams of the sheepfold soon have their horns sawed off! Before the controversies are settled a good many ministers will, through what they call liberalism, be landed into practical infidelity, and others through what they call conservatism will shrink up into bigots tight and hard as the mummies of Egypt which got through their controversies three thousand years ago.

This trouble throughout Christendom was directly inspired by Satan. He saw that too much good was being done. Recruits were being gathered by hundreds of thousands to the Gospel standard. The victories for God and the truth were too near together. Too many churches were being dedicated. Too many ministers were being ordained. Too many philanthropies were being fostered. Too many souls were being saved. It had been a dull time in the nether world, and the arrivals were too few. So Satan one day rose upon his throne and said, "Ye powers of darkness, hear!" And all up and down the caverns the cry was, "Hear! Hear!" Satan said: "There is that American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. It must either be demolished or crippled, or the first thing you know they will have all nations brought to God. Apollyon the Younger! You go up to Andover and get the professors to discussing whether the heathen can be saved without the Gospel. Divert them from the work of missions and get them in angry convention in a room at Young's Hotel, Boston, and by the time they adjourn the cause of foreign missions will be gloriously and magnificently injured. Diabolus the Younger! You go up and get Union Theological Seminary of New York and the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church at Detroit at swords' points and diverted from the work of making earnest ministers of religion, and turn that old Presbyterian Church, which has been keeping us out of customers for hundreds of years, into a splendid pandemonium on a small scale. Abaddon the Third! You go up and assault that old Episcopal Church, which has been storming the heavens for centuries with the sublimest prayers that were ever uttered—church of Bishop Leighton, Bishop White and Bishop McIlvaine, and get that denomination discussing men instead of discussing the eternities. Abaddon the Fourth! You go up to that old Methodist Church, which has, through her revival, sent millions to heaven which we would otherwise have added to our population; the church of Wesley and Matthew Simpson, against which we have an especial grudge, and get them so absorbed in discussing whether women shall take part in her conference that they shall not have so much time to discuss how many sons and daughters she will take to glory."

What amazes me most is that all people do not see that the entire movement at this time all over Christendom is satanic. Many of the infernal attacks are sly and hidden and strategic and so ingenious that they are not easily discovered. But here is a bold and uncovered attempt of the powers of darkness to split up the churches, to get ministers to take each other by the throat, to make religion a laughing stock of earth and hell, to leave the Bible with no more respect or authenticity than an old almanac of 1823, which told what would be the change of weather six months ahead and in what quarter of the month it is best to plant turnips. In a word, the effort is to stop the evangelization of the world. It seems to me very much like this: There has been a railroad accident and many are wounded and dying. There are several drug stores near the scene of casualty. All the doctors and druggists are needed and needed right away. Bandages, stimulants, anæsthetics, medicines of all sorts. What are the doctors and druggists doing? Discussing the contents of some old bottles on the top shelf, bottles of medicine which some doctors and druggists mixed two or three hundred years ago. "Come doctors!" "Come druggists!" cry the people, "and help these wounded and dying that are being brought from the timbers of the crushed rail train. In a little while it will be too late. Come for God's sake! Come right away!" "No," says the doctor, "not until we have settled whether the medicine on that top shelf was rightly mixed. I say there were too many drops of laudanum in it, and this other man says there were too many drops of camphire, we must get this question settled before we can attend to the railroad accident."

And one doctor takes another doctor by the collar and pushes him back against the counter, and one of the druggists says, "If you will not admit that I am right about that one bottle I will smash every bottle in your apothecary store," and he proceeds to smash. Meanwhile, on the lower shelf, plainly marked and within easy reach are all the medicines needed for the helping of the sufferers by the accident, and in that drawer, easily opened, are bandages and splints for the lack of which fifty people are dying outside the drug store. Before I apply this thought every one sees the application. Here in this old world, and it is of such. Sin and sorrow have collided with it. The groan of agony in fourteen hundred million voices. God has opened for relief and says a great sanitarium, a great house of mercy, and all its shelves are filled with balsams, with antidotes, with pain-starving drugs, transparent as light, so easily administered that you need not get upon any step ladder to reach it. You can reach it on your knees and then hand it to all the suffering, and the pleading, and the dying. Complaints for all the troubled! Pardon for all the guilty! Peace for all the dying! But while the world is smoking the opium pipe of sensuality, and the drunkard is smelling the fumes of burnt malt, and the divine of blood burn deep enough? Why cannot the final stories rise in love? Why cannot this dying century feed the lamenting fires of the cremator of heavenly mercy? Most merciful One, close in death and roll such balm on the darkness of the tomb, and then hearts beat their last throb before the day comes in? O Christ! Why tarriest Thou? Wilt Thou not, before we go the way of all the earth, let us see Thy scarred feet under some noonday cloud coming this way? Before we die let us behold Thy hands that were spiked, spread out in benediction for a lost race. And why not let us, with our mortal ears, hear that voice which spoke peace as Thou didst go up, speak pardon and emancipation and love and holiness and joy to all nations as Thou comest down!

But the skies do not part. I hear no rumbling of chariot wheels coming down over the sapphire. There is no swoop of wings. I see no flash of angelic appearances. All is still. I hear nothing but the tramp of my own heart as I pause between these utterances. The King does not land because the world is not ready and the church is not ready. To clear the way for the Lord's coming let us devote all our energies of body, mind and soul. A Russian general riding over the battlefield, his horse treading amid the dying and dead, a wounded soldier asked him for water, but the officer did not understand his language and knew not what the poor fellow wanted. Then the soldier cried out "Christos," and that word meant sympathy and help, and the Russian officer dismounted and put to the lips of the sufferer a cooling draught. So that the charmed word with which we go forth to do our whole duty. In many languages it has only a little difference of termination. Christos! It stands for sympathy. It stands for help. It stands for pardon. It stands for hope. It stands for heaven. Christos! In that name we were baptised. In that name we took our first sacrament. That will be the battle shout that will win the whole world for Go!! Christos! Put it on our banners when we march! Put it on our lips when we die! Put in the funeral psalm at our obsequies! Put it on the plain slab over our grave! Christos! Blessed be His glorious name forever! Amen!

BILL ARP'S WEEKLY CHAT.

I am going in search of liberty. Twenty-six years ago about this time the old soldiers were dropping in upon their old homes—some on foot and some on old army mules that were too poor to utter a decent bray. These old veterans were so changed that their wives and mothers hardly knew them. Unshaved, unshod, unwashed, ragged and tired they were a pitiful contrast to their own picture when they first went forth to war. If it were not sad it would be funny to say that they reminded us of Falstaff, who said of his soldiers: "There's not a shirt and a half in all my company." As they dropped in on the old homesteads most of them found somebody dead—a mother, a wife, a sister, or perhaps a child—and the poor fellow would sit in the old split-bottomed chair and listen and sigh as the tale of sorrow was rehearsed. There is more of tender, touching reality about the returns of the veterans to their humble, desolated homes than will ever be told in history. Within the limits of the Sherman belt they found nothing as they left it. There were no horses or mules or cattle or hogs. The fences had been burned—the once happy fields were growing up in weeds and briars. The tires were off the wagon wheels, the plow worn out, the corn-crib empty, the bagging had rotted off the cotton bales that had been packed three years before. A bushel of corn was a granary, and was kept hidden from the deserters and robbers of both armies, who infested the country. Crumbling walls and lonesome chimneys marked the homes of those who fled before the march of the foul invader. But there were thousands of the old and helpless and the widows and orphans who had to stay, for they had nowhere to go and nothing to go in. Many of them were like Cobe says he was: "Had nothin' and nothin' to get nothin' with and nothin' to put it in," and when he moved from one place to another he started his wife and children ahead in a drove, and then he put out the fire and called the dog and followed them.

But these war-worn soldiers were already hardened to toil and trouble. They rejoiced that the war was over. They smiled at peace and poverty, and comforted their families with love and hope and determination. No more was heard the midnight order, to get up and march. No more the rattling of musketry or the booming of cannon. No more the familiar news that "old Bob Lee had whipped 'em ag'in." These soldiers went to work. It did not take long to make an inventory of what was left. There was no corn for the mules, but there was grass. What they would do for bread was the most serious question, for they had no money. There was none in the country except confederate, and a bushel of that would not buy a bushel of potatoes. For two or three months they had struggled along and divided out their substance and lived; yes, lived, and some times laughed and told an army joke or a sickly, measly anecdote on old Bob, or old Tige, or old Rock. But slowly and surely the supply of hidden corn was giving out. Lean and hungry fingers were scratching the bottom of the sack, when all of a sudden—yes, just in the nick and pinch of time I received a letter, a good, kind, sympathetic letter that had come 1,000 miles, and in it was a check—a bank check for $3 000—$3,000 in greenbacks, and it was to buy corn for the poor who lived in the fiery belt—that letter came from Liberty, away up in Missouri, north of Kansas City. It was to us an amazing charity. There was not $100 nor 100 bushels of corn within 2 ty miles of us. The letter gave us the name of good men in St. Louis who would send us the corn without commission, and we ordered it at once and divided it out with five counties and put good old Tom Parry in charge of it. Rome was our Egypt and Tom was our Joseph, and they came every day to get their share. Poor confederate widows walked for miles with their little sacks; wagons were patched up and hauled for a settlement. There was no leakage or ratage or stealage. The corn was bought at 35 cents a bushel, and the freight was put at half price. What a glorious gift was that. But where was Liberty, and what kind of a people lived there, and how did they hear of our destitution? That was the question. For four long years our soldier boys had been fighting for liberty and failed to find it, and now in our despair and desolation Liberty had found us and laid her treasures at our feet.

And so I am going to search for Liberty. They have a college there—a time honored institution, and the young men have called me to come and dispense my wit and wisdom and I am going. Our people owe Liberty a debt and the interest has been running for twenty-six years, and all they ask is an hour's talk to the boys.

I remember well the glad surprise when that letter came, and a few days after a newspaper from Liberty that told how their people had heard of the destruction that was in the wake of the march to the sea and how gladly and generously they raised $6,000 and scattered it along the line. To whom shall we send north Georgia's portion, was the next question, and a crippled veteran by the name of McCarty, an Irishman, who had followed Sterling Price as long as he had two legs, rose up and said: "Gentlemen, I don't know but one man there, and his name is Arp, and I've been readin' of his letters for five years, and I be d—d if I wouldent trust him with all I've got." I have the paper yet, and that is one of the cherishments I prize and one of the oaths I never shuddered at. And so I am off in the morning in pursuit of Liberty. I have never been on Missouri soil and I have been told that there is no region more generously southern than northwestern Missouri, and no region more blessed of heaven in soil and climate and beauty. I shall soon see for myself and write you.

CONTE AFFIRMS

That the Italians Were Killed for Competing With Labor.

A cablegram of Wednesday from Rome, Italy, says: The Fanfulla states that Signor Corte, late Italian consul at New Orleans, at the request of Premier Rudini, has prepared a report on the New Orleans affair. Signor Corte affirms that the victims belonged to no particular society, but were murdered simply because they were Italians and were competing in the labor market against the natives; that immediately after the murder of the Italian prisoners Americans paraded the city and that he himself and his secretary barricaded the consulate and armed themselves with revolvers, the lynchers having threatened to attack the consul and hang prominent only to diplomatic obligations.

PROCLAMATION ISSUED

By President Harrison Regarding the Seal Fisheries.

The President, on Monday, issued the following proclamation:

Whereas, An engagement for a modus vivendi between the United States and the government of her Brittanic majesty, in relation to the fur seal fisheries in Behring sea, was concluded on the 15th day of June, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred ninety-one, word for word, as follows:

Agreement between the government of the United States and the government of her Brittanic majesty for a modus vivendi in relation to the fur seal fisheries in Behring sea. For the purpose of avoiding irritating differences, and with the view to promote a friendly settlement of the question pending between the two governments touching their respective rights in Behring sea, and for the preservation of the seal species, the following agreement is made without prejudice to the rights or claims of either party:

1. Her majesty's government will prohibit, until may next, seal killing in that part of Behring sea lying eastward of the line of demarcation described in article No. 1of the treaty of 1867 between the United States and Russia, and will promptly use its best efforts to insure the observance of this prohibition by British subjects and vessels.

2. The United States government will prohibit seal killing for the same period in the same part of Behring sea and on the shores and islands thereof, the property of the United States (in excess of 7,500 to be taken on the islands for subsistence and the care of natives), and will promptly use its best efforts to insure the observance of this prohibition by United States citizens and vessels.

[Here follows a proviso for the apprehension of offenders and punishment of same, also, an official attestation by Assistant Secretary Wharton and Minister Pauncefote.]

Now, therefore, be it known that I, Benjamin Harrison, president of the United States of America, have caused said agreement to be made public, to the end that the same may be observed and fulfilled with good faith by the United States of America and citizens thereof.

In witness thereof, I hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. Done at the city of Washington, this 15th day of June.

BENJAMIN HARRISON.

A HOT WAVE

Makes a Pop Call Through the New England States.

A Boston dispatch says: The thermometer at the United States signal service office registered 92½ degrees at 1 o'clock Monday afternoon, and on down town streets more reliable ones ranged from 94 to 98 degrees. Signal office statistics show this to be the hottest June day for eight years, with the exception of June 28, 1888, when the minimum temperature was 96.

Reports from Maine points show a range from 88 to 90, the latter at Portland. Of eighteen towns in New Hampshire, but one shows below 90, and that is the Fabyan house where the thermometer is 85, while other towns report from 90 to 99, the latter figure at Contocook. White River Junction, Vt., reports 92; Woonsocket, R. I., 95; Newport, R. I., 78; Springfield, Mass., 94 to 98; Hartford, Conn., 91.

THE RECORD BROKEN.

A Providence, R. I., dispatch says: At 2 o'clock Monday morning the thermometer stood at 73 degrees. At 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon it showed 107, a rise of 34 degrees in a little over eleven hours. This breaks the record. Complaints come from all over the state as to the excessively hot weather and need of rain, in order to save what little there is left of the crops.

At New York the record has been broken, and Monday will pass into history as the hottest 15th of June ever recorded. At 8 o'clock in the morning the thermometer on the street level stood at 70 degrees and at noon it had jumped to 85, but at 2:30 o'clock the record was smashed and the mercury indicated 97½.

A CLEVER FORGERY.

To Oust an Officer, an Enemy Writes His Resignation.

A singular and unusual forgery was developed in the United States district court at Montgomery, Ala., Wednesday, which caused a great sensation. Judge Bruce, on Tuesday, accepted the resignation of Captain B. W. Bell as United States district commissioner for the middle district of Alabama. Captain Bell did not know he had resigned, and when he heard that Judge Bruce had accepted his alleged resignation, he went to Clerk Dimmick's office to investigate the matter. Clerk Dimmick handed him the letter, type written, with Captain Bell's signature stamped with his fac simile stamp which he keeps in his office. It had every evidence of being genuine. Captain Bell startled Dimmick by declaring the letter a forgery. Judge Bruce was informed at once and when the court opened he promptly reinstated Captain Bell and expressed the deepest regret that any one should have so outraged public decency as to thus insult the court and wrong a good officer. Every effort will be made to ferret out the perpetrator of the outrage, and if detected he will be severely punished.

A CLOUDBURST

Does Considerable Damage in a Tennessee Town.

At Newmanville, Greene county, Tenn., Saturday, a cloudburst did great damage. The place is remote from the railroad and telegraph, but information was received at Knoxville, Monday, of the calamity. The fall of water was something terrific, and a small creek became a raging river 100 yards wide and many feet deep. The store house, residence and all outbuildings of T. N. King were swept away, the flood coming so quickly that he did not have time to even close his store doors. The post-office was kept in his store and everything was lost. An iron safe weighing 1,500 pounds was carried one-fourth of a mile by the force of the water. A number of other houses were carried away, and all crops along creek bottom land destroyed. Considerable stock was drowned, but no life lost, so far as reported.

Petticoat Strikers.

A London cablegram states that three hundred laundresses of North London held a meeting Tuesday attended with the usual incidents of speech-making, resolutions, wrangling, etc., and started a strike for eight hours' daily hour and 35 pence per hour. Three employers are conducting operations [illegible]

All Gone.

William Graham Sumner, now over 50 years old, claims to be the man who first taught Abraham Lincoln the principles of English grammar.

Emperor William is not earning the name of the great German traveler, for he never seems so much at home as when he is junketing abroad.

Oston, the Tichborne claimant, is a waiter in a Nottingham public house, and receives extra pay because of the custom he is enabled to draw.

Fanny Davenport in writing of the impracticability of the plays submitted by amateur dramatists, says "that she received one so full of simultaneous incident that it would require a three-decked stage to mount it, and its representation would compete with the maneuvers in a three-ring circus.

The fashion of tying flower stems with narrow velvet ribbon is certainly a pretty one, as stem green on yellow buds, myrtle green on pink, black on any and everything, pink on lavender, etc. Pink was never in higher favor, though closely followed by yellow and the parme shades. The rather faded pompadour blue appears often, as the purplish cornflower shades.

To Dispel Colds,

Headaches and Fevers, to cleanse the system effectually, yet gently, when costive or bilious, or when the blood is impure or sluggish, to permanently cure habitual constipation, to awaken the kidneys and liver to a healthy activity, without irritating or weakening them, use Syrup of Figs.

If it wasn't for its light nobody would ever find out that the sun has spots on it.

Be Careful of Your Eyesight.

It is a well known fact that the eyesight—the most delicate of our senses—may be easily destroyed by the use of glasses not suited to the eyes, or of poor quality.

It is the greatest foolishness to purchase cheap glasses from unreliable dealers. The risk taken in doing this is a thousand times greater than the small amount saved.

With the above in view, Mr. A. K. Hawkes, well known throughout the country as a leading optician, has established a factory in Atlanta, where are prepared perfect glasses of every shade of strength. Hawkes' Crystallized Lenses have a national reputation and are endorsed by thousands of the best citizens of the United States, whose names will be given upon application.

Druggists and merchants find these crystallized lenses the best paying part of their stock, because the people want them, and will have no others. These spectacles are sold in nearly every town in America, and every pair is warranted. They are not supplied to peddlers, remember.

Mr. A. K. Hawkes is the only manufacturer of these Crystallized Lenses, and makes a specialty of filling oculists' prescriptions. Address all orders 12 Whitehall St., Atlanta, Ga.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails it cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address

"German Syrup"

A Farmer at Edom, Texas, Says: "We are six in family. We live in a place where we are subject to violent Colds and Lung Troubles. I have used German Syrup for six years successfully for Sore Throat, Cough, Cold, Hoarseness, Pains in the Chest and Lungs, and spitting-up of Blood. I have tried many different kinds of cough Syrups in my time, but let me say to anyone wanting such a medicine—German Syrup is the best. That has been my experience. If you use it once, you will go back to it whenever you need it. It gives total relief and is a quick cure. My advice to everyone suffering with Lung Troubles is—Try it. You will soon be convinced. In all the families where your German Syrup is used we have no trouble with the Lungs at all. It is the medicine for this section. JOHN FRANKLIN, Agent.

...great, absorbing question in Louis... ... the lottery—the hydra headed ...infamy and shame, as Dr. Palmer ...has said he made a speech in New Orleans that, it is said, has no parallel in modern times for eloquent, thrilling and scathing denunciation. The Times-Democrat, which is the paid organ of the lottery, tries in vain to arraign his address as revolutionary. The Picayune heads its leading editorial "A Plea for Peace," and begs the doctor to temper down his language for fear it will result in strife and blood. But it will not be tempered down. North Louisiana is a unit, and her people boldly declare that Morris shall not spend a dollar there for votes, neither with black or white. The charter expires next year and the people are to vote next April upon the question of its renewal. Morris offers the state a million dollars a year for thirty years for a renewal, and it is a tempting offer, for the state is heavily in debt and needs money for educational purposes and for protecting the farmers from overflows and for charities and other things. New Orleans is pretty solid for the lottery for it feeds and fattens on it. The Times-Democrat is said to receive $5 000 a month for a little advertising and a great deal of influence. It is the capital stock of the banks. It is directly or indirectly the patron of churches and charities. It was even hinted that Dr. Palmer would be silent for he declined to preach against it in his pulpit and it was whispered that when Morris was married at his princely home on the Hudson Dr. Palmer was sent for to perform the ceremony, and received a check for $5,000 for his service. But Morris mistook the nature of the man. Dr. Palmer has spoken, and his burning denunciation is in everybody's mouth. "He is easily the grandest and greatest man in Louisiana," said a distinguished gentleman to me "and the people will follow where he leads. He stood by us in the Mafia and we will stand by him in the lottery. It shall die. Our dear old state has been the victim of heartless plunderers since the war and our people have endured what they could not help or remedy—but we have honor left us and we will preserve it at all hazards. Your grand old state of Georgia dared to repudiate the bonds that were issued in corruption, but we could not. Our debt is now about fourteen million dollars, and the most of it was conceived in sin and brought forth in iniquity, but if Morris should offer to pay it all and wipe it out if we would give him the lottery for thirty years longer we would not do it."

People abroad can form but little conception of the intensity of the issue that is now before the citizens of Louisiana. I knew nothing of it myself until I got there. In my first day's address at the chautauqua I was speaking of the widespread and alarming desire of our young men to find a short road to fortune, to get something for nothing, and I chanced to say: "If one young man draws a prize in a lottery, it sets a hundred wild to try their luck;" and, to my surprise, there was tumultuous cheering all over the large assembly. These people say it is simply an effort to bribe the people to give them a charter to obtain money under false pretenses; that it is a gigantic swindle upon the people of other states as well as their own; that if Morris can afford to pay a million a year to the state for the privilege, and a million or two to buy the voters, and 25 per cent. of the receipts to agents and 10 per cent to the press, and ever so much to Beauregard and Early and other officers, and save a million or two each year for himself, what chance has the ticket holder!

What is the matter with the Millionsires! When will they get enough! Has the Creator ordained that a man who loves money shall always pursue it until he wrecks his soul upon the altar of Mammon! It does seem so. I wish that Mr. Morris would stop and think. I wish that he would consider, and say: "Well, I reckon I have made enough out of those people, and I will let them alone." But he is encouraged by the press. The Times Democrat is squarely for the lottery, and it taunts Dr. Palmer with some old historical records of his own Presbyterian church, wherein it appears that in 1823 that church had a lottery to raise money for church purposes.

Yes, and so did Cotton Mather and his churchmen burn women for witches, and so did General Jackson drive to the races in his coach-and-four and carry his gold and bet it, and so did John Calvin consent to the death of Servetus, because he refused to subscribe to a belief in the trinity, and so did other good men do bad things, but the world moves, and so does a higher civilization supersede that of the past, and the lottery must go. It has ceased to be a vice and is now a crime.

But I had to say farewell to Ruston and her people, a good town and a good people. There are many who were natives to the manor born, but, as my friend, Judge Barksdale, said, the woods are full of Georgians. They flocked around me with cordial greetings, and told how they were from Elbert, or Spalding, or Muscogee, or Bibb, or old Baldwin, and they talked tearfully about our grand old men who have passed over the river. Most of them came here at the close of the war, but there were some pioneers who emigrated away back in the forties. One man traveled with me on my return, and said he was going to South Carolina to visit his dear old mother once more before she died. His filial devotion drew me closer to him, for already I begin to realise the inevitable—the weaning of the children from the parents, and it saddens our solitude to see them go. A lady called on me at Ruston, a lady with her little boy, and she said she was the daughter of a schoolmate of my wife when she was a miss. Sweet Miss Sarah Dobbs. Yes her mother was our teacher, a good, sad-hearted woman whom everybody loved, and Sarah was her idol, her treasure, and now Sarah's child was before me and was happily married and had a child of her own. Good gracious! How old am I and how can such things be! How gladly will the boys and girls of Auld Lang Syne, in Lawrenceville, remember Sarah Dobbs, the beautiful child whom we once hid in the cupola of the schoolhouse and armed ourselves with sticks and rocks and threshpoles to keep the sheriff from taking her away from her mother. And we did it—we ran him off and I never was as proud of a victory as I was of that, and I am proud yet. BILL ARP.

The Deadly Cigarette.

Harry Curtiss, a glass worker eighteen years old, was found dead in bed at Findlay, O., Saturday. The autopsy showed the heart paralyzed, caused by the excessive use of cigarettes, he having been in the habit of smoking three or four boxes daily.

J. A. Brackin's four-story brick block, corner of North and Union streets, Pittsfield, Mass., was burned early Tuesday morning. Loss on building, $43,000; insurance, $20,000. Bent Bros., carriage manufacturers, loss $15,000; insurance, $10,000; and others smaller amounts aggregating $22,000.

A cablegram of Friday says: The city of Santiago, Chile, has just been visited with the severest fire ever known in South America, the loss being estimated at more than two million dollars. The British legation was completely consumed, including all of the archives and personal property of the minister.

Fire broke out Wednesday afternoon in McKelvey's ice houses, at Sandusky, Ohio, and spread to Frank Stang's brewery, which, with the ice houses, were consumed. The residence of Frank Baumeir was also burned. The total loss is $170,000. Stang's brewery, with contents, was valued at $150,000; insured for $50,000.

The postmaster-general on Wednesday, issued an advertisement on mail lettings under the postal aid bill passed by the last congress. Permit me to tender to you private cars and transportation for the remains and yourself and family."

Lynn, Mass., had another disastrous fire Friday night. It is thought $800,000 will be the amount when all the losses are known. The third story of Blake's brick block, corner of Union and Mulberry streets, and a five-story brick block adjoining, owned by Stacy Oliver, were burned completely. A five-story brick block, owned by E. W. Clarke, caught fire, but was only partly damaged.

LOOKS WARLIKE.

Tennessee Miners Object to Convict Labor.

A Nashville dispatch says: Governor Buchanan and Warden Blevins left the city Wednesday night for Briceville, in Anderson county, in answer to telegrams from Superintendent of Prisons Wade, stating that the guards had been overpowered, and they and the convicts engaged in building a stockade forcibly shipped to Knoxville by an armed mob of 300 men. The governor was joined at Chattanooga by the Lookout Mountain Guards and Moerlein Zouaves, and on a special train, furnished by the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railroad, proceeded to Briceville, picking up the Knoxville Rifles at Knoxville. Commissioner Ford and Assistant Attorman left for Briceville on an afternoon train, and an effort will be made to settle the difficulty amicably. Governor Buchanan will go among the rioters personally and endeavor to have them allow the convicts to resume work.

THE CAUSE OF THE TROUBLE.

The Briceville mine is only about four miles from Coal Creek, a branch prison, and has been worked by free labor heretofore. The miners struck some time back, and, showing no disposition to come to terms, the Knoxville Iron Company made a contract with the sublessees of the male prison at Nashville to mine coal for them at so much per ton. Forty men were sent to Briceville from Nashville, July 4th, and have been since engaged in building the stockade for the reception of 150 more men until Wednesday night, when an armed mob of 300 men placed the convicts aboard a train and sent them to Knoxville.

LOOKS SQUALLY.

A Knoxville dispatch of Thursday says: At present the situation at the Briceville mines and all the Coal creek region is very serious. Governor Buchanan, with two companies of state military from Chattanooga and one from Knoxville is on hand. The miners showed no disposition to molest them. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon about seven hundred miners met in a grove and were addressed by the governor. He told them that he hoped an amicable settlement could be reached. He was sorry of the difficulty, but that it was his sworn duty to uphold the law, and that, he said, frankly and emphatically, he would do. He spoke at some length, and said that, if the law was wrong which permitted convicts to be worked in the mines, the law must be changed, as it would be enforced while on the statute books. A leader of the miners replied to the governor. He said that the law required the operators to keep a "check" weigher at the mine, and this the company had not done, and this was the cause of the trouble. The miner was most enthusiastically cheered by the crowd, while the governor's speech fell flat.

THE MEN DETERMINED.

During the afternoon every effort was made to reach a compromise, but utterly without avail. The men, while still orderly, swear that the convicts shall never go into the mine, and thus deprive their families of bread. They openly boast that not only shall no convicts go into this mine now in question, but that the convicts in the Knoxville Iron Company's mine, 125, shall leave. The various operators had determined to put in 400 convicts, 300 into the Tennessee company's mine, the one over which the trouble has arisen.

LATEST.—At a late Thursday night meeting action was deferred until morning, but all the miners in Tennessee and Kentucky districts near by have been requested to come to Bryceville.

WAR ON THE ALLIANCE.

Belligerent Attitude of Kansas Editors.

A dispatch of Monday from Topeka, Kan., says: "The democratic editors, who have been holding a meeting here, have decided to prepare an address to the people of Kansas, and also warn democrats of the nation against the Farmers' Alliance. A committee was appointed to draft the address, and another meeting provided for July 27th, at which time the committee will report. In the meanwhile, the democratic editors will begin a systematic and determined warfare on the alliance.

Western North Carolina Division of the R. & D.

A dispatch from Murphy, N. C., says: The first passenger train on the Western North Carolina division of the Richmond & Danville railroad was run from Asheville to Murphy, Wednesday. This division will only await the completion of the road by a grand barbecue on the 23d. It will also be the occasion of laying the corner stone of the new court house at Murphy.

The Judgment.

Thou hast done evil
And given place to the devil;
Yet so cunningly thou conceals
The thing which thou feelest,
That no eye espieth it,
Satan himself denieth it.
Go where it abideth thee:
There is none that accuseth thee;
Neither foe nor lover
Will the wrong uncover:
The world's breath raiseth thee,
And thy own past praiseth thee.

Yet know thou this:
At quick of thy being
Is an eye, all seeing,
The snake's wit evadeth not,
The charmed lip persuadeth not;
So thoroughly it despiseth
The thing thy hand prizeth,
Tho' the sun were thy clothing,
It should count thee for nothing.
Thine own eye divineth thee,
Thine own soul arraigneth thee;
God himself cannot shrive thee
Till that judge forgive thee.

A Washington Romance.

Years ago a young man whom, for present purposes, we may call James Hayes, lived in central Indiana. His occupation was that of a school teacher; he was married, and had a pleasant berth in a country town, and his home life for a good while was considered to approach the ideal. Presently, however, dissensions sprang up about the domestic hearth and grew in bitterness with wonderful rapidity.

One warm summer morning, after having a particularly stormy interview with his wife, Hayes quitted his dwelling with the remark that he had had all he could endure. He did not return at the usual hour, and after a time his wife, becoming alarmed, aroused the neighbors, who set out to hunt for him. In a lonely spot on the borders of a swift-flowing, muddy river were found the greater part of his costume and personal belongings, including his purse and the few small articles of jewelry which he habitually wore. There were footprints also on the sand which indicated that the missing man had gone into the water naked, probably for a bath.

The stream was dragged for miles, but to no purpose. It was believed that he had been drowned, and the swiftness of the current accounted for the failure to find his body. In the opinion of the neighbors, it had been carried through some rapids further down, probably badly mutilated, and then sunk in a pool which was unfathomable with any of the instruments at command. So the search was finally abandoned.

The widow then applied to the life insurance company in which her husband held a policy, but the company declined to pay her a penny till she could produce a more satisfactory proof of the death than mere disappearance. A law suit followed, in which she spent on counsel fees and costs of trial the bulk of the little property she already had; but the courts sided with the corporation, and she had to retire in defeat.

Some years passed. One day in the latter part of 1884, Mr. Trelawney, a $1400 clerk in the Postoffice Department at Washington, who had been appointed originally by Postmaster-General Howe through the influence of a Congressman from Wisconsin, was walking home from the office with a number of his companions. A man in a slouch hat and with a farmer-like air about him, stood on the steps of one of the cheaper hotels as they approached it. He was observed to start, and fix his eyes sharply on Trelawney's face. Suddenly advancing, he put out his hand with an exclamation of astonishment; "Well, Jimmy Hayes, where did you come from! We all gave you up for dead a half-dozen years ago!"

"Oh, come now, that won't hold water," exclaimed the rustic. "If you aren't Jim Hayes, who used to teach school in our town in X—— County, Indiana, then I'll eat my hat."

"You seem to be laboring under a singular hallucination," responded the young man. "These gentlemen can tell you who I am."

His companions promptly came to his relief by assuring the stranger that he was addressing Mr. Trelawney of Wisconsin.

"And you aren't a schoolteacher, either?" persisted the incredulous Hoosier.

Trelawney, who was moving away, paid no attention to the question, but one of his friends, in order to cut off any further parley, threw back the answer: "Oh, no; Mr. Trelawney is a well-known man in the Postoffice Department."

The stranger did not appear at all satisfied, but he returned to the hotel steps and the party of pedestrians went their way. Trelawney seemed annoyed at the interruption of their talk, but otherwise manifested no discomposure.

A few weeks later Trelawney was summoned from his desk to Postmaster-General Gresham's room. Beside the Postmaster-General sat a woman heavily veiled. The clerk changed color slightly as his eye fell on her figure, and his chief, who had been studying his face keenly, from the moment he came in sight, uttered a low ejaculation.

"Shut the door, Trelawney," he added.

This was done.

"Now, madam, raise your veil."

The woman obeyed.

"Trelawney, did you ever see this lady before?"

"I never did." The clerk's teeth shut tightly.

General Gresham plainly believed his subordinate was lying.

"Madame, is this the man you think is your husband?"

The woman, almost swooning, staggered forward, threw herself upon Trelawney's breast, and burst into tears. He flinched not, however.

The Postmaster-General touched his bell, a side door opened and a group of men entered, headed by the stranger who had accosted Trelawney in the street. The party were old neighbors of the Hayes family, and they crowded forward, one after another adding testimony in support of Mrs. Hayes' identification.

This was too much for the clerk. He faltered a little at first in his sturdy denials, and at length broke down completely and confessed that he was none other than James Hayes; that he had deserted his home because he could no longer endure its atmosphere of contention; and that he had endeavored to atone for his folly by starting the world anew and trying to make a man of himself.

The Postmaster-General heard his story through and then informed him that he must hand in his resignation without delay. In vain the young man pleaded that he should now have greater expenses to bear than before, and hence would be in greater need of his salary. He also called to mind his valuable services as a clerk and his repeated promotions for merit.

No plea availed him. The Postmaster-General insisted that he wanted no one about the Department who had ever been obliged to resort to an alias; that a man who had deliberately deceived the Congressman whose influence had procured him his office, and had kept up the deception with his official superiors, could not be trusted to tell the truth to anybody, and must look for business to the [illegible] time for some months, to study. The Democrats came into power not long afterwards. Meanwhile Hayes had passed a civil service examination with a very high marking. He found friends who had sufficient faith in the sincerity of his new purpose in life to come to his support as witnesses to his character, etc., and under his own name he was one of the first eligibles chosen for appointment by Postmaster-General Vilas.

The Postoffice Department is large. A man who is not of obtrusive personality can bury himself in it if he chooses. When Hayes came back, there were, of course, a few of his old chums who knew his story. For the most part they guarded it. He took lodgings in another part of the city from that in which he lived while playing the role of Mr. Trelawney, and hence, had little social readjustment to undergo.

A few inquiries made inside and out of the Department were silenced by the statement that his sudden resignation was caused by the illness of his affianced wife, whom he had left in the West when he came to Washington, but that after their marriage she improved so that he returned with her; and the change of name was accounted for on the ground that her maiden name was Hayes, and that some property "expectations" were involved in his taking her name instead of her taking his.

The person I have described under the pseudonym of Mr. Trelawney-Hayes is one of the most faithful and efficient clerks now in the Department. The only evidence that any one here knows his secret is when one member of a group of Government clerks has a yarn to spin about a mysterious disappearance or a life insurance contest, and another comments with a significant air:

"I know a story worth two of that, but I wouldn't dare tell it for the world."—[New York Post.

Spider Silk.

It is said that spiders' threads may be woven, which is true enough, that they are more glossy and brilliant than those of the silkworm, which is not supported by the conclusions of those who have compared the two side by side, and that enough of it was once secured for the weaving of a suit of clothes for Louis XIV. Now, stockings have certainly been made from spider silk, and gloves too, for specimens of each were presented to the Royal Academy of Paris, and to the London Royal Society in 1710, and there is an indefinite mention of waistcoats being produced from this remarkable fiber. But this is the first that has been heard of an entire suit of clothes furnished by spiders. As it has been calculated that it would be necessary to rear 55,296 of the largest spiders, or 663,552 of the ordinary sort, to yield a pound of silk, we may regard that suit with some hesitation. It is most probable, however, that it is only a case of slipshod inaccuracy after all, for it is on record that M. Leben of Montpelier sent a pair of gloves made from spiders' silk to that same Louis XIV., and faulty memory, with careless haste, has most likely made a suit of clothes out of them.

Secret of Von Moltke's Success.

The basis of Moltke's success was preparation, precision. For years the quiet man had kept every energy to detail. He had devoted no time to show work; he cared naught for the outward parade of office. He had made sure that what the army was on paper it was to office; that every man and officer was ready, and knew his place and duty. [illegible]

...reat, absorbing question in Louis... the lottery—the hydra headed ...tyranny and sham, as Dr. Palmer ...they date are he wrote a thrill...

...in New Orleans that, it is said, has no parallel in modern times for eloquent, thrilling and scathing denunciation, The Times-Democrat, which is the paid organ of the lottery, tries in vain to arraign his address as revolutionary. The Picayune heads its leading editorial "A Piss for Parace," and begs the doctor to temper down his language for fear it will result in strife and blood. But it will not be tempered down. North Louisiana is a unit, and her people boldly declare that Morris shall not spend a dollar there for votes, neither with black or white. The charter expires next year and the people are to vote next April upon the question of its renewal. Morris offers the state a million dollars a year for thirty years for a renewal, and it is a tempting offer, for the state is heavily in debt and needs money for educational purposes and for protecting the farmers from overflows and for charities and other things. New Orleans is pretty solid for the lottery for it feeds and fattens on it. The Times-Democrat is said to receive $5 000 a month for a little advertising and a great deal of influence. It is the capital stock of the banks. It is directly or indirectly the patron of churches and charities. It was even hinted that Dr. Palmer would be silent for he declined to preach against it in his pulpit and it was whis ered that when Morris was married at his princely home on the Hudson Dr. Palmer was sent for to perform the ceremony, and received a check for $5,000 for his service. But Morris mistook the nature of the man. Dr. Palmer has spoken, and his burning denunciation is in everybody's mouth. "He is easily the grandest and greatest man in Louisiana," said a distinguished gentleman to me "and the people will follow where he leads. He stood by us in the Mafia and we will stand by him in the lottery. It shall die. Our dear old state has been the victim of heartless plunderers since the war and her people have endured what they could not help or remedy—but we have honor left us and we will preserve it at all hazards. Your grand old state of Georgia dared to repudiate the bonds that were issued in corruption, but we could not. Our debt is now about fourteen million dollars, and the most of it was conceived in sin and brought forth in iniquity, but if Morris should offer to pay it all and wipe it out if we would give him the lottery for thirty years longer we would not do it."

People abroad can form but little conception of the intensity of the issue that is now before the citizens of Louisiana. I knew nothing of it myself until I got there. In my first day's address at the chautauqua I was speaking of the widespread and alarming desire of our young men to find a short road to fortune, to get something for nothing, and I chanced to say: "If one young man draws a prize in a lottery, it sets a hundred wild to try their luck;" and, to my surprise, there was tumultuous cheering all over the large assembly. These people say it is simply an effort to bribe the people to give them a charter to obtain money under false pretenses; that it is a gigantic swindle upon the people of other states as well as their own; that if Morris can afford to pay a million a year to the state for the privilege, and a million or two to buy the voters, and 25 per cent. of the receipts to agents and 10 per cent to the press, and ever so much to Beauregard and Early and other officers, and save a million or two each year for himself, what chance has the ticket holder?

What is the matter with the millionaires? When will they get enough? Has the Creator ordained that a man who owes money shall always pursue it until he wrecks his soul upon the altar of Mammon? It does seem so. I wish that Mr. Morris would stop and think. I wish that he would consider, and say: "Well, I reckon I have made enough out of those people, and I will let them alone." But he is encouraged by the press. The Times-Democrat is squarely for the lottery, and it taunts Dr. Palmer with some old historical records of his own Presbyterian church, wherein it appears that in 1832 that church had a lottery to raise money for church purposes.

Yes, and so did Cotton Mather and his churchmen burn women for witches, and so did General Jackson drive to the races in his coach-and-four and carry his gold and bet it, and so did John Calvin consent to the death of Servetus, because he refused to subscribe to a belief in the trinity, and so did other good men do bad things, but the world moves, and so does a higher civilization supersede that of the past, and the lottery must go. It has ceased to be a service and is now a crime.

But I had to say farewell to Ruston and her people, a good town and a good people. There are many who are natives to the manor born, but, as my friend, Judge Barksdale, said, the woods are full of Georgians. They flocked around me with cordial greetings, and told how they were from Elbert, or Spalding, or Muscogee, or Bibb, or old Baldwin, and they talked tearfully about our grand old men who have passed over the river. Most of them came here at the close of the war, but there were some pioneers who emigrated away back in the forties. One man traveled with me on my return, and said he was going to South Carolina to visit his dear old mother once more before she died. His filial devotion drew me closer to him, for already I begin to realize the inevitable—the weaning of the children from the parents, and it saddens our solitude to see them go. A lady called on me at Ruston, a lady with her little boy, and she said she was the daughter of a schoolmate of my wife when she was a child. Sweet Miss Carrie Dobbs. Yes her mother was our teacher, a good, sad-hearted woman whom everybody loved, and Sarah was her idol, her treasure, and now Sarah's child was before me and was happily married and had a child of her own. Good gracious! How old am I and how can such things be? How gladly will the boys and girls of Auld Lang Syne, in Lawrenceville, remember Sarah Dobbs, the beautiful child whom we twice hid in the cupola of the schoolhouse and armed ourselves with sticks and rocks and thrashpoles to keep the sheriff from taking her away from her mother. And we did it—we run him off and I never was as proud of a victory as I was of that, and I am proud yet. BILL ARP.

Lynn, Mass., had another disastrous fire Friday night. It is thought $300,000 will be the amount when all the losses are known. The third story of Blake's brick block, corner of Union and Mulberry streets, and a five-story brick block adjoining, owned by Ernest Bros., were burned completely. A five-story brick block, owned by E. W. Currier, caught fire, but was only partly damaged.

LOOKS WARLIKE.

Tennessee Miners Object to Convict Labor.

A Nashville dispatch says: Governor Buchanan and Warden Blevins left the city Wednesday night for Briceville, in Anderson county, in answer to telegrams from Superintendent of Prisons Wade, stating that the guards had been overpowered, and they and the convicts engaged in building a stockade forcibly shipped to Knoxville by an armed mob of 300 men. The governor was joined at Chattanooga by the Lookout Mountain Guards and Moerlein Zouaves, and on a special train, furnished by the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railroad, proceeded to Briceville, picking up the Knoxville Rifles at Knoxville. Commissioner Ford and Assistant Attorman left for Briceville on an afternoon train, and an effort will be made to settle the difficulty amicably. Governor Buchanan will go among the rioters personally and endeavor to have them allow the convicts to resume work.

THE CAUSE OF THE TROUBLE.

The Briceville mine is only about four miles from Coal Creek, a branch prison, and has been worked by free labor heretofore. The miners struck some time back, and, showing no disposition to come to terms, the Knoxville Iron Company made a contract with the sublessees of the male prison at Nashville to mine coal for them at so much per ton. Forty men were sent to Briceville from Nashville, July 4th, and have been since engaged in building the stockade for the reception of 150 more men, until Wednesday night, when an armed mob of 300 men placed the convicts aboard a train and sent them to Knoxville.

LOOKS SQUALLY.

A Knoxville dispatch of Thursday says: At present the situation at the Briceville mines and all the Coal creek region is very serious. Governor Buchanan, with two companies of state military from Chattanooga and one from Knoxville is on hand. The miners showed no disposition to molest them. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon about seven hundred miners met in a grove and were addressed by the governor. He told them that he hoped an amicable settlement could be reached. He was sorry of the difficulty, but that it was his sworn duty to uphold the law, and that, he said, frankly and emphatically, he would do. He spoke at some length, and said that, if the law was wrong which permitted convicts to be worked in the mines, the law must be changed, as it would be enforced while on the statute books. A leader of the miners replied to the governor. He said that the law required the operators to keep a "check" weigher at the mine, and this the company had not done, and this was the cause of the trouble. The miner was most enthusiastically cheered by the crowd, while the governor's speech fell flat.

THE MEN DETERMINED.

During the afternoon every effort was made to reach a compromise, but utterly without avail. The men, while still orderly, swear that the convicts shall never go into the mine, and thus deprive their families of bread. They openly boast that not only shall no convicts go into this mine now in question, but that the convicts in the Knoxville Iron Company's mine, 125, shall leave. The various operators had determined to put in 400 convicts, 250 into the Tennessee company's mine, the one over which the trouble has arisen.

LATEST.—At a late Thursday night meeting action was deferred until morning, but all the miners in Tennessee and Kentucky districts near by have been requested to come to Briceville.

Satan himself denieth it.
Go where it sheeseth thee;
There is none that accuseth thee;
Neither foe nor lover
Will the wrong uncover:
The world's breath raiseth thee,
And thy own past praiseth thee.

Yet know thou this:
At quick of thy being
Is an eye, all seeing,
The snake's wit evadeth not,
The charmed lip persuadeth not;
So thoroughly it despiseth
The thing thy hand prizeth,
Tho' the sun wove thy clothing,
It should count thee for nothing.
Thine own eye divineth thee,
Thine own soul arraigneth thee;
God himself cannot shrive thee
Till that judge forgive thee.

A Washington Romance.

Years ago a young man whom, for present purposes, we may call James Hayes, lived in central Indiana. His occupation was that of a school teacher; he was married, and had a pleasant berth in a country town, and his home life for a good while was considered to approach the ideal. Presently, however, dissensions sprang up about the domestic hearth and grew in bitterness with wonderful rapidity.

One warm summer morning, after having a particularly stormy interview with his wife, Hayes quitted his dwelling with the remark that he had had all he could endure. He did not return at the usual hour, and after a time his wife, becoming alarmed, aroused the neighbors, who set out to hunt for him. In a lonely spot on the borders of a swift-flowing, muddy river were found the greater part of his costume and personal belongings, including his purse and the few small articles of jewelry which he habitually wore. There were footprints also on the sand which indicated that the missing man had gone into the water naked, probably for a bath.

The stream was dragged for miles, but to no purpose. It was believed that he had been drowned, and the swiftness of the current accounted for the failure to find his body. In the opinion of the neighbors, it had been carried through some rapids further down, probably badly mutilated, and then sunk in a pool which was unfathomable with any of the instruments at command. So the search was finally abandoned.

The widow then applied to the life insurance company in which her husband held a policy, but the company declined to pay her a penny till she could produce a more satisfactory proof of the death than mere disappearance. A law suit followed, in which she spent on counsel fees and costs of trial the bulk of the little property she already had; but the courts sided with the corporation, and she had to retire in defeat.

Some years passed. One day in the latter part of 1884, Mr. Trelawney, a $1400 clerk in the Postoffice Department at Washington, who had been appointed originally by Postmaster-General Howe through the influence of a Congressman from Wisconsin, was walking home from the office with a number of his companions. A man in a slouch hat and with a farmer-like air about him, stood on the steps of one of the cheaper hotels as they approached it. He was observed to start, and fix his eyes sharply on Trelawney's face. Suddenly advancing, he put out his hand with an exclamation of astonishment: "Well, Jimmy Hayes, where did you come from? We all gave you up for dead a half-dozen years ago!"

"Oh, come now, that won't hold water," exclaimed the rustic. "If you aren't Jim Hayes, who used to teach school in our town in X—— County, Indiana, then I'll eat my hat."

"You seem to be laboring under a singular hallucination," responded the young man. "These gentlemen can tell you who I am."

His companions promptly came to his relief by assuring the stranger that he was addressing Mr. Trelawney of Wisconsin.

"And you aren't a schoolteacher, either?" persisted the incredulous Hoosier.

Trelawney, who was moving away, paid no attention to the question, but one of his friends, in order to cut off any further parley, threw back the answer: "Oh, no; Mr. Trelawney is a well-known man in the Postoffice Department."

The stranger did not appear at all satisfied, but he returned to the hotel steps and the party of pedestrians went their way. Trelawney seemed annoyed at the interruption of their talk, but otherwise manifested no discomposure.

A few weeks later Trelawney was summoned from his desk to Postmaster-General Gresham's room. Beside the Postmaster-General sat a woman heavily veiled. The clerk changed color slightly as his eye fell on her figure, and his chief, who had been studying his face keenly from the moment he came in sight, uttered a low ejaculation.

"Shut the door, Trelawney," he added.

This was done.

"Now, madam, raise your veil."

The woman obeyed.

"Trelawney, did you ever see this lady before?"

"I never did." The clerk's teeth shut tightly.

General Gresham plainly believed his subordinate was lying.

"Madame, is this the man you think is your husband?"

The woman, almost swooning, staggered forward, threw herself upon Trelawney's breast, and burst into tears. He flinched not, however.

The Postmaster-General touched his bell, a side door opened and a group of men entered, headed by the stranger who had accosted Trelawney in the street. The party were old neighbors of the Hayes family, and they crowded forward, one after another adding testimony in support of Mrs. Hayes' identification.

This was too much for the clerk. He faltered a little at first in his sturdy denials, and at length broke down completely and confessed that he was none other than James Hayes; that he had deserted his home because he could no longer endure its atmosphere of contention; and that he had endeavored to atone for his folly by starting the world anew and trying to make a man of himself.

The Postmaster-General heard his story through and then informed him that he must hand in his resignation without delay. In vain the young man pleaded that he should now have greater expenses to bear than before, and hence would be in greater need of his salary. He also called to mind his valuable services as a clerk and his repeated promotions for merit.

No plea availed him. The Postmaster-General insisted that he wanted no one about the Department who had ever been obliged to resort to an alias; that a man who had deliberately deceived the Congressman whose influence had procured him his office, and had kept up the deception with his official superiors, could not be trusted to tell the truth in any body, and hence had no business in the service of the Government.

time for some months, to study. The Democrats came into power not long afterwards. Meanwhile Hayes had passed a civil service examination with a very high marking. He found friends who had sufficient faith in the sincerity of his new purpose in life to come to his support as witnesses to his character, etc., and under his own name he was one of the first eligibles chosen for appointment by Postmaster-General Vilas.

The Postoffice Department is large. A man who is not of obtrusive personality can bury himself in it if he chooses. When Hayes came there were, of course, a few of his old chums who knew his story. For the most part they guarded it. He took lodgings in another part of the city from that in which he lived while playing the role of Mr. Trelawney, and hence, had little social readjustment to undergo.

A few inquiries made inside and out of the Department were silenced by the statement that his sudden resignation was caused by the illness of his affianced wife, whom he had left in the West when he came to Washington, but that after their marriage she improved so that he returned with her; and the change of name was accounted for on the ground that her maiden name was Hayes, and that some property "expectations" were involved in his taking her name instead of her taking his.

The person I have described under the pseudonym of Mr. Trelawney-Hayes is one of the most faithful and efficient clerks now in the Department. The only evidence that any one here knows his secret is when one member of a group of Government clerks has a yarn to spin about a mysterious disappearance or a life insurance contest, and another comments with a significant air:

"I know a story worth two of that, but I wouldn't dare tell it for the world."—[New York Post.

Spider Silk.

It is said that spiders' threads may be woven, which is true enough, that they are more glossy and brilliant than those of the silkworm, which is not supported by the conclusions of those who have compared the two side by side, and that enough of it was once secured for the weaving of a suit of clothes for Louis XIV. Now, stockings have certainly been made from spider silk, and gloves too, for specimens of each were presented to the Royal Academy of Paris, and to the London Royal Society in 1710, and there is an indefinite mention of waistcoats being produced from this remarkable fiber. But this is the first that has been heard of an entire suit of clothes furnished by spiders. As it has been calculated that it would be necessary to rear 55,296 of the largest spiders, or 663,552 of the ordinary sort, to yield a pound of silk, we may regard that suit with some hesitation. It is most probable, however, that it is only a case of slipshod inaccuracy after all, for it is on record that M. Lebon of Montpelier sent a pair of gloves made from spiders' silk to that same Louis XIV., and faulty memory, with careless haste, has most likely made a suit of clothes out of them.

Secret of Von Moltke's Success.

The basis of Moltke's success was preparation, precision. For years the quiet man had been every energy to detail. He had devoted no time to show work; he cared naught for the outward parade of efficiency. He loved ends more than what the army was on paper it was in effect; that every man and officer was ready, and knew the place and duty. That machine

This is warm weather and politics in Montgomery are just boiling over to judge from the columns of the Advertiser and the Herald. The rest of the state, however seems to be attending to business at the old stand and in the usual manner.

In this issue appears the advertisement of the Southern Exposition to open in Montgomery October 28th. This enterprise is always a wonderful success under its present skillful management. The men directing and interested in the enterprise and the money backing them insures success in every department. The Exposition is a grand institution and is a source of pride to all Alabama.

GEORGE'S LETTER.

The Mississippi Senator on Legislative Instructions to Him.

JACKSON, Miss., July 16.—[Special.]—The following letter was written here to day:

JACKSON, Miss., July 16.—J. J. Williams, Grenada, Miss.—Dear Sir: I have your letter about a statement alleged to have been made by me that I wouldn't vote for the sub-treasury bill if instructed to do so by the legislature. My answer is that I don't remember to have made any statement on the subject. I have not regarded the matter of obeying instructions as an issue in the canvass, nor have I thought that there was the remotest possibility that the legislature would give such instructions. But as your letter, as well as the proceedings of some public meetings, declares a desire on the part of the people to know my views on the subject of instructions by the legislature, and as I have no political opinion to withhold from the people, I will say I am in accord with the view expressed by General Jackson, that every public officer is bound by his oath to support the constitution in the sense in which after careful study and reflection he understands it. Having taken that oath of course I could not vote for any measure, which in my judgment, violates it. To do so would be perjury. The legislature has the right to instruct a senator, but neither that nor other earthly tribunal has the power to relieve from the moral guilt of perjury. So it would be utterly impossible for any honest man to vote for a measure which he believes to be a violation of the constitution which he has sworn to support. The legislature has the same right to ask a senator to resign if he can't obey the instruction, as it has to give the instructions. I can obey such a request without incurring the guilt of perjurry. I certainly would do so, so that the question might be referred, for final determination, to the common masters of both of the senators and the legislature, the people of Mississippi.

Yours Truly,
J. Z. GEORGE.

What the Kansas Alliance Thinks.

TOPEKA, July 11.—The Alliance leaders in Kansas are greatly chagrined and worried at the action of certain leaders of the Southern Alliance in calling the Fort Worth, Texas, convention to resolve against the sub-treasury idea, and they claim that it is a scheme of Southern Democrats to break up the Alliance and that prominent Democratic congressman are at the bottom of it. The Kansas leaders fear this action is the beginning of a movement that will disrupt the organization. In Kansas thousands of Republicans who affiliated with the People's Party last year would follow the course of their Southern brethren and go back to their old homes.

Women Have a Mission.

And the most formidable part of the mission would seem to consist in exploring the barriers raised by certain carping pulpit critics against the admission of women to spheres of Christian activity and usefulness for which they are preeminently adapted. These exclusionists are content, however, to strain at the gnat, but complacently swallow the camel. Speaking of the reformatory work of the world done outside and apart from the church, a writer in the "Plowshare and Pruning Hook" well says:

"So strongly is the church intrenched in its masterly do-nothing policy that its influence is to wholly separate what is called religious from secular things; to draw the lines fast and hard between the realm of thought and that of action, and in so doing to set up false standards of religious life and retard moral development. So strong and almost ineradicable is this tendency that it is considered "bad form" to touch upon any of the leading vital issues of the day. The result is that what is called the Christian church has no more hold on the every-day affairs of life and the consciences of men and upon the things that determine character than if it were not in existence. It is a form from which life has departed. It has ceased to bear fruit. . . . . Look at this thing called Christian civilization; look at the empire of liquor; see the mirad of souls year after year plunged into almost hopeless ruin; see the desolate hearts, the blackened homesteads, the broken-hearted wives and mothers. . . . Observe the fearful results of the liquor trade upon the morals of the people, exciting the animal nature, weakening the will power, obliterating all that is God-like in humanity, and making beast of men—and the church is silent. . . . Turn to the social evil, fed and kept alive through the ministry of liquor; observe the gilded house of hell, where vice puts on an alluring aspect. . . . Men and women, children of the living God, and for whose redemption from sin, and the bondage of the animal nature, Christ died—and the church is silent. There is a traffic in young girls of a tender age to supply this Golgotha of social life; there is the sale of nude Japanese girls in San Francisco to meet the demands of a foul civilization; there is cruelty to young children in the marts of trade past description, and—the church is silent. There are gambling hells, legal and illegal; the former clothed in the garb of respectability, to better carry on its nefarious practices of cornering the food products of a nation, and starving its people; the latter live by cheating and pillaging, and not only is the church silent, but welcomes to the places of honor the men who amass wealth through the wholesale destruction of others. And now that the great moral question of the age is at last up for adjudication and final settlement, the right of a man to his labor product, the right of all men to life, liberty and happiness; the conformity of trade to the golden rule; now that the question is before all the world, shall or shall not the law of Christ, of idenity of human interests, become the law of civilization—the church is silent and by her silence confesses her disloyalty to the Master, whom she professes to serve. Nor is it to be wondered at, when we reflect that the men who support the church are those who support and keep alive the social and business systems that are in deadly hostility to the precepts of Christ. The church, in its refusal to touch secular things has itself become so secularized, that it has lost the spiritual life it once prossessed."—Imogene C. Fales, in Twentieth Century.

We believe with Dr. Talmage that the story of the Gospel will never be fully told until Christian women tell it. And we go further than this, and maintain that the beneficent power and influence of Christ's Gospel will not be completely manifested in the redemption of the world until woman's status as a co-worker with man is fully recognized and conceded. We venerate the church organization, with even all its ordinances, but where the church and such ordinances are set up by a body of ecclesiastical teachers as a substitute for the rule of life and conduct prescribed by the book of books—the old Bible—then we must be pardoned for declining to follow the lead of such teachers.

With so much unrestrained sinning prevailing in the world around us, and so little practical work done by men whose assumed province is to restrain it, and they don't do it, we think it is high time, assuming, for argument's sake, that the claim of exclusiveness is correct, that the greater sufferers—the women—should in all conscience be permitted to do something in their own and children's self defence.

Life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness is as dear to a woman as it possibly can be to a man, and this boon she is guaranteed by the Constitution of these United States and who will dare deny that such a declaration is not the very embodiment of divine truth.

Dr. Talmage said: "About the subject of woman's preaching, let me say that I do not think the story of the Gospel will be fully told until Christian women all around the world tell it. There is a tenderness and pathos of power in woman's voice, when she commends pardon and sympathy, which the masculine voice can never reach. My pulpit is always open to women, and when they have preached there the impression has always been deep and good and lasting."

Texas State Alliance.

FORT WORTH, TEX., July 11.—The principal feature of the State Alliance Convention this morning was the speech of U. S. Hall, President of the Missouri Alliance.

He charged that Dr. Macune had sold out for a money consideration to the protectionists and in the furtherance of that bargain the third party move was inaugurated in the South to divert Democratic votes.

He said that it was no disgrace for such a dishonest man as Macune to get into the Alliance, but it would become a disgrace if he was not turned out.

President Hall was loudly applauded. Last night Harry Tracy, Macune's chief apostle in Texas gave an open challenge on the sub-treasury scheme.

Hall accepted the debate which occured to-night. Tracy claims to have some unsavory facts about Hall's career newly discovered, which he proposed to turn loose to-night.

The sub-treasuryites, of whom a squad walked out of the convention yesterday are red hot. It is believed that the outcome of the convention will be a split of the State Alliances into factions, one representing a third party and the other the Democratic wing.

The latest postal laws are such that a newspaper publisher can arrest any one for fraud who takes a paper and refuses to pay for it. Under this law the man who allows his subscription to run along for sometime and then orders it discontinued, or orders the postmaster to mark it "refused," and have a postal card sent notifying the publisher, leaves himself liable to arrest and fine the same as for theft.

Mr. C. R. Bruce has brought us a huge watermelon and will please accept our thanks.

A Mad Cat.

A special correspondent to the Edwardsville Plowboy writes:

While at Jemison last week I saw Mrs. I. N. Langston, a good woman who has suffered deaths from the bite of a mad cat. Mrs. Langston heard something after the chickens, and ran out to see what was the trouble, and she found that a cat had caught a chicken. She seized the cat by the tail when it turned and bit her on the fore finger of the left hand. In a very short while her hand began to swell. Physicians were sent for at once. They came in haste, but alas! the poison was beginning to give her great pain. Mrs. Langston has suffered for three long months, and the final result is not yet known. Mr. Langston is a successful farmer and merchant, but with all his wealth no relief can be given to his loved one.

Dr. A. M. Rambo, dentist, will visit Clanton professionally on July 30th. Any one needing work in his line will find him at the VIEW office.

PROSPECTORS IN BIBB.

Four Prominent and Practical Men Looking after the M. T. & M.

The first of this week Messrs. Rutherford, of the firm J. M. Brown & Co., contractors of Brunswick, Ga., McLinton, representing Mr. Clark, of the Mobile and Ohio railroad; Craig, chief engineer of the M. T. & M. railroad, and Mr. Fannin resident engineer of the M. T. & M. road, were in Centreville and vicinity for the purpose of satisfying themselves whether or not the reports as to the resources of the country along the line of the new road from Montgomery to Tuskaloosa were as good as had been reported heretofore.

These gentlemen were supplied with teams and accompained by Dr. W. B. Hard on Monday to the hills and valleys of the Cahaba as far up as Pratt's ferry, and on their return to this place they were more than pleased with the fine supply of iron, lime, marble, fine pine, oak, ash and cedar timber they saw. One of them remarking to the writer that "the half had not been told."

They left on Tuesday morning to look at the country on the west side of the river. At this writing (Wednesday) Mr. Hard, whose teams they are using, has not returned, and we take it for granted they are still well pleased with the outlook.

These favorable impressions on the minds of these gentlemen simply means that immediate steps will be taken to complete the M. T. & M. road as far as Tuskaloosa, at least, and also the construction of a road from Tuskaloosa to the Mobile and Ohio, which will give the country along its line an outlet to the northwest and to the gulf on the southeast.

In addition to the move as noticed above, we publish the following special from Tuskaloosa:

TUSKALOOSA, July 6.—[Special] Col. J. W. Woolfolk, president of the Montgomery, Tuskaloosa & Memphis railroad and Superintendent McLaren and Chief Engineer, Craig, of the Mobile & Ohio railroad reached here to-day and are in conference with reference to the impending purchase of the Montgomery, Tuskaloosa & Memphis by the Mobile & Ohio.—Bibb Blade.

Delegate to State Alliance—R. M. Honeycutt.
Delegate to Trustee Stockholders—Moses Robinson.
Delegates to District Alliance—W. H. Shaw, O. M. Martin, W. H. Bean, J. A. Logan, J. G. Jeffries.

It may be interesting to mention in connection that the vote for President stood 49 for Honeycutt and 17 against him, and this is the fifth time he has been elected to fill the office. The vote for Secretary stood 57 for Dake and 9 against him, and it is the sixth time he has been elected to fill that office.

Verbena Views.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Croswell, of Montgomery, have been visiting the family of Mr. G. O. Logan.

Miss Lilla Gulledge is visiting Miss Edith Clark at Pass Christian, Miss.

Mr. Will Caffey, of Columbia, Tenn., is visiting his father, Dr. Caffey.

Misses Fannie Griffin, Fannie Nix, and Abbott Spratlin have gone to Asheville, N. C. They will visit other points before they return.

Misses Stella and Nettie Pratt, of Six Mile, are visiting the family of Rev. Mr. McCord.

Mr. F. M. Billing and family, of Montgomery, have been visiting the family of Col. B. J. Baldwin.

Bros. Sanders and Donnelly have had a grand and glorious revival here in the Methodist Church. We can say truly God has been with us and blessed us. A great many have joined the Methodist Church, and a good many will join the Baptist Church.

Bro. McCord will commence a protracted meeting here to-day in the Baptist Church.

Miss Mary Brown, of Autauga, and Miss Mary Townsend, of Montgomery, have been visiting the family of Hon. G. A. Northinton.

Mr. Willis Brightman, of Hayneville, has been visiting his family here.

I was glad to see the answer to my questions in the last issue of your paper. I agree with C. It is wrong to open the mail on Sunday. It is wrong to ride on the train on Sunday.

Mr. S. A. Douglass and wife spent Saturday in Stanton.

Plenty of rain; plenty of mud; plenty of thunder; plenty of lightning; plenty of corn; plenty of cotton; plenty of everything but $.

Mrs. Eva Gandy, of Stanton, visited her brother, Calvin Lenoir, here last week.

Oce Wilkinson and little child are still very sick, and hopes for their recovery are very meager.

Bluford Jones began his school at Cox's Chapel last Monday, with a good attendance.

Mr. Calvin Lenoir is slowly recovering from a prolonged attack of pleurisy. His many friends rejoice in his ultimate recovery.

Miss Jennie Martin, of Maplesville, spent several days last week with the family of Dr. Johnson.

Clay Jones did not begin teaching as reported in last issue. He was refused the use of Pierce's Chapel.

Miss Minnie Rasberry has been obliged to discontinue her studies at Isabella Academy on account of her eyes which have been afflicted for sometime.

Mr. Jas. Contey, "an old inhabitant," being in his eightieth year, has been gradually failing in health, and is now quite sick at his home near here.

Wm. DeShazo spent Friday in Clanton on business.

Some of our boys attended the picnic at Davis' school house and engaged in a game of base ball with the school boys in which our boys covered themselves with a mantle of glorious—defeat.

Preparations are being made to close the year at Isabella Academy in an appropriate pleasing manner. The program is not yet complete, but we will try and give it at some future time.

Again—remember that County Sunday School Convention at Mulberry Church next month. Every preparation is being made to insure a pleasant and profitable time, the object is a good one and you ought to attend.

Stanton Notes.

Mr. I. G. White, one of our townsmen is in big luck. He received information a few days ago that he had fallen heir to one league of land in Texas. The land was donated to his grandfather for services rendered during the Mexican war. The matter was unknown to the White family until a few weeks ago. A Texas syndicate wanted to purchase the lands, and examining the titles, etc., found that the lands belonged to the White family and hunted up the heirs. With a view to buying the property, and in this way the matter was brought to light. Mr. White has been offered [illegible] the lands. This is quite a streak of luck for Mr. White and his friends rejoice with him in his good fortune.

Mrs. Richard Coe accompanied by Mrs. W. W. Little has gone to Boston, Mass., to take a course in "art."

The beautiful residence of Mrs. Gregory is about completed and she will move in soon.

Miss Eunice Thrash and Miss Hines, of Selma, are visiting Mrs. J. H. Prichard here.

The corn crop in this section is very good and settles the bread question for another year. Potatoes, peas and ground-peas are doing well, and from the great quantities of melons coming in daily shows a good crop of them. Apples are plentiful, but peaches are very scarce. We are informed that Mr. Marion Thompson, living a few miles from this place, managed to save his peach crop by keeping up fires around his orchard during the cold weather.

The blackberry vines have excelled themselves this season. I have not seen such a yield before during my nine years sojourn in Chilton county.

Providence Points.

Mrs. Kate Jones, died last Saturday after a long illness. She was interred at Macedonia Church near her home. Mrs. Jones had a large number of friends who extend their sympathy to the lonely husband.

The family of Mr. G. W. Powell will spend a few days with relatives near Providence, when they will return to Plantersville, their home.

Time for the teachers institute is near and preparations are being made to accommodate a large number of teachers if they will only attend.

New developments in the wrecking of the Keystone Bank, Philadelphia, are looked for, and it is almost a certainty that holy John Wanamaker, President Harrison's Postmaster General, is likely to be unmasked and shown to the people in his true light. In the City of Brotherly Love it is an open secret that a large amount of the missing funds of the bank were spent for campaign purposes in the election of Mr. Harrison.

NOTICE.

All parties who have cotton or cotton seed in the gin house of R. Q. Lane & Co., are requested to remove them by July the 27th. So the house can be cleaned up for the new crop. A. E. BIVINGS.

Gen. Weaver, the one time candidate for the Presidency on the Greenback ticket and Congressman Jerry Simpson, the gentleman who became famous in making the race for Congress on a "sockless" platform, are both in Georgia preaching and teaching the citizens of the Goober State how to vote.

La Grippe Again.

During the epidemic of La Grippe last season Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, proved to be the best remedy. Reports from the many who used it confirm this statement. They were not only quickly relieved, but the disease left no bad after results. We ask you to give this remedy a trial and we guarantee that you will be satisfied with results, or the purchase price will be refunded. It has no equal in La Grippe, or any Throat, Chest or Lung Trouble. Trial bottles free. Large bottles 50c. and $1.

REV. DR. TALMAGE

BROOKLYN DIVINE'S SUNDAY SERMON.

TEXT: "WITNESS TO THE TRUTH OF CHRISTIANITY." (PREACHED AT HIGH BRIDGE, KY.)

TEXT: "We are witnesses."—Acts II., 15.

Preaching amid the hills and groves of Kentucky, and before this great multitude that human can number, most of whom I never saw before and never will see again in this world, I choose a very practical theme. In the days of George Stephenson, the perfector of the locomotive engine, the scientists declared conclusively that a railroad train could never be driven by steam power successfully without peril; but the rushing express trains from Liverpool to Edinburgh, and from Edinburgh to London, have made the nation witnesses of the splendid achievement.

Mechanists and navigators proved conclusively that a steamer could never cross the Atlantic, but no sooner had they successfully proved the impossibility of such an undertaking than the work was done, and the passengers on the Cunard, and the Inman, and the National, and the White Star lines are witnesses. There went up a guffaw of the laughter at Professor Morse's proposition to make the lightning of heaven his errand boy, and it was proved conclusively that the thing could never be done; but now all the news of the wide world put in your hands every morning and night has made all nations witnesses.

So in the time of Christ it was proved conclusively that it was impossible for Him to rise from the dead. It was shown logically that when a man was dead, he was dead, and the heart, and the liver, and the lungs have ceased to perform their offices, the limbs would be rigid beyond all power of friction or arousal. They showed it to be an absolute absurdity that the dead Christ should ever get up alive; but no sooner had they proved this than the dead Christ arose, and the disciples beheld Him, heard His voice, and talked with Him, and they took the witness stand to prove that to be true which the theocrats of the day had proved to be impossible; the record of the experiment and of the testimony is in the text: "Him hath God raised from the dead, whereof we are witnesses."

Now let me play the skeptic for a moment. "There is no God," says the skeptic, "for I have never seen Him with my physical eyesight. Your Bible is a pack of contradictions. There never was a miracle. Lazarus was not raised from the dead, and the water was never turned into wine. Your religion is an imposition on the credulity of the ages." There is an aged man moving in that pew as though he would like to respond. Here are hundreds of people with faces a little flushed at these announcements, and all through this throng there is a suppressed feeling which would like to speak out in behalf of the truth of our glorious Christianity, as in the days of the text, crying out, "We are witnesses!"

The fact is that if this world is ever brought to God it will not be through argument, but through testimony. You might cover the whole earth with apologies for Christianity and learned treatises in defense of religion—you would not convert a soul. Lectures on the harmony between science and religion are beautiful mental discipline, but have never saved a soul and never will save a soul. Put a man of the world and a man of the church against each other, and the man of the world will, in all probability, get the triumph. There are a thousand things in our religion that seem illogical to the world, and always will seem illogical.

Our weapon in this conflict is faith, not logic; faith, not metaphysics; faith, not profundity; faith, not scholastic exploration. But then, in order to have faith we must have testimony, and if five hundred men, or five thousand men, or five hundred thousand men, or five million men get up and tell me that they have felt the religion of Jesus Christ a joy, a comfort, a help, an inspiration, I am bound, as a fair-minded man, to accept their testimony. I want to put before you three propositions the truth of which I think this audience will attest with overwhelming unanimity. The first proposition is: We are witnesses that the religion of Christ is able to convert a soul. The Gospel may have had a hard time to conquer us, we may have fought it back, but we were vanquished. You say conversion is only an imaginary thing. We know better. "We are witnesses." There never was so great a change in our heart and life on any other subject as on this.

People laughed at the missionaries in Madagascar because they preached ten years without one convert; but there are many thousands of converts in Madagascar to-day. People laughed at Dr. Judson, the Baptist missionary, because he kept on preaching in Burmah five years without a single convert; but there are many thousands of Baptists in Burmah to-day. People laughed at Dr. Morrison in China for preaching there seven years without a single conversion; but there are many thousands of Christians in China to-day. People laughed for fifteen years without a single conversion at the missionaries for preaching at Tahiti and at the missionaries for preaching in Bengal seventeen years without a single conversion; yet in all those lands there are multitudes of Christians to-day.

But why go so far to find evidences of the Gospel's power to save a soul? "We are witnesses." We were so proud that no man could have humbled us; we were so hard that no earthly power could have melted us. Angels of God were all around about us; they could not overcome us; but one day, perhaps at a Methodist anxious seat or at a Presbyterian catechetical lecture or at a burial or on horseback, a power seized us and made us get down and made us tremble and made us kneel and made us cry for mercy, and we tried to wrench ourselves away from the grasp, but we could not. It flung us flat, and when we arose we were as much changed as Goargis, the heathen, who went into a prayer meeting with a dagger and a gun, to disturb the meeting and destroy it, but the next day was found crying: "Oh, my great sins! Oh, my great Saviour!" and for eleven years preached the Gospel of Christ to his fellow mountaineers, the last words on his dying lips being "Free grace!" Oh, it was free grace!

There is a man who was for ten years a hard drinker. The dreadful appetite had sent down its roots around the palate and the tongue, and on down until they were interlinked with the vitals of the body, mind and soul, but he has not taken any stimulants for two years. What did that? Not temperance societies. Not prohibition laws. Not moral suasion. Conversion did it. "Why," said one upon whom the great change had come, "sir, I feel just as though I were somebody else." There is a sea captain who swore all the way from New York to Havana, and from Havana to San Francisco, and when he was in port he was worse than when he was on sea. What power was it that washed his tongue clean of profanities and made him a psalm singer? Conversion by the Holy Spirit. There are thousands of people here to-day who are no more what they once were than a water lily is a nightshade, or a morning lark is a vulture, or day is night.

Now, if I should demand that all those people here present who have felt the converting power of religion should rise, so far from being ashamed they would spring to their feet with far more alacrity than they ever sprang to the dance, the tears mingling with their exhilaration as they cried, "We are witnesses!" And if they tried to sing the old Gospel hymn they would break down with emotion by the time they got to the second line:

> Ashamed of Jesus, that dear friend
> On whom my hopes of heaven depend!
> No! When I blush, be this my shame,
> That I no more revere His name.

Again, I remark that "we are witnesses" of the Gospel's power to comfort. When a man has trouble the world comes in and says: "How get your mind off this; go out and breathe the fresh air; plunge deeper into business." What poor advice! Get your mind off it! when everything is upturned with the bereavement, and everything reminds you of what you have lost. Get your mind off it! They might as well advise you to stop thinking, and you cannot stop thinking in that direction. Take a walk in the fresh air! Why, along that very street, or that very road, the very accompanied you. Out of that green plot she plucked flowers, or here that she'd rainbow she looked fleecy cloud, saying, "Come, see the pictures." Go deeper into business! Why, the very ground with all your business associations, and over the hills where you have spent delightful hours! Why, it is a dreadful thing to be a mourner! Oh, it is a terrible heart!

Ah, my friend, you will never get rid of your trouble in that way. You must meet it, and conquer it, and overcome it, or it will conquer you and overcome you. Now, what will you do with your trouble? Will you try the world's sympathy as sadly as this world can comfort a broken heart. And yet you have been comforted. How was it done? Did Christ come to you and say: "Get your mind off this. Go out and breathe the fresh air. Plunge deeper into business?" No. There was a minute when He came to you—perhaps in the watches of the night, perhaps in your place of business, perhaps along the street—and He breathed something into your soul that gave peace, rest, infinite quiet, so that you could take out the photograph of the departed one and look into the eyes and the face of the dear one and say: "It is all right. She is better off. I would not call her back. Lord, I thank Thee that Thou has comforted my poor heart."

There are Christian parents here who are willing to testify to the power of this Gospel to comfort. Your son had just graduated from school or college and was going into business, and the Lord took him. Or your daughter had just graduated from the young ladies' seminary, and you thought she was going to be a useful woman and of long life, but the Lord took her, and you were tempted to say, "All this culture of twenty years for nothing!" Or the little child came home from school with the hot fever that stopped for the agonized prayer or for the skillful physician, and the little child was taken. Or the babe was lifted out of your arms by some quick epidemic, and you stood wondering why God ever gave you that child at all if so soon He was to take it away. And yet you are not repining, you are not fretful, you are not fighting against God. What enabled you to stand all the trial?

"Oh," you say, "I took the medicine that God gave my sick soul. In my distress I threw myself at the feet of a sympathizing God; and when I was too weak to pray or to look up He breathed into me a peace that I think must be the foretaste of that heaven where there is neither a tear nor a farewell nor a grave." Come, all ye who have been out to the grave to weep there—come, all ye comforted souls, get up off your knees. Is there no power in this Gospel to soothe the heart? Is there no power in this religion to quiet the worst paroxysm of grief? There comes up an answer from comforted widowhood and orphanage and childlessness, saying, "Ay, ay, we are witnesses!"

Again, I remark that we are witnesses of the fact that religion has power to give composure in the last moment. I shall never forget the first time I confronted death. We went across the cornfields in the country. I was led by my father's hand, and we came to the farmhouse where the bereavement had come and we saw the crowd of wagons and carriages; but there was one carriage that especially attracted my boyish attention, and it had black plumes. I said: "What's that? what's that? Why those black tassels at the top?" And after it was explained to me I was lifted up to look upon the bright face of an aged Christian woman, who three days before had departed in triumph. The whole scene made an impression I never forgot.

In our sermons and our lay exhortations we are very apt, when we want to bring illustrations of dying triumph, to go back to some distinguished personage—to a John Knox or a Harriet Newell. But I want you for witnesses. I want to know if you have ever seen anything to make you believe that the religion of Christ can give composure in the final hour. Now, in the courts, attorney, jury and judge will never admit mere hearsay. They demand that the witness must have seen with his own eyes, or heard with his own ears, and so I am critical in my examination of you now, and I want to know whether you have seen or heard anything that makes you believe that the religion of Christ gives composure in the final hour.

"Oh, yes," you say, "I saw my father and mother depart. There was a great difference in their deathbeds. Standing by the one we felt more veneration. By the other, there was more tenderness." Before the one you bowed perhaps, in awe. In the other case you felt as if you would like to go along with her. How did they seem to act? Were they very much frightened? Did they take hold of this world with both hands as though they did not want to give it up? "Oh, no," you say; "no; I remember as though it were yesterday; she had a kind word for us all, and there were a few mementoes distributed among the children, and then she told us how kind we must be to our father in his loneliness, and then she kissed us goodby and went asleep as a child in a cradle." What made her so composed? Natural courage?

"No," you say; "mother was very nervous; when the carriage inclined to the side of the road she would cry out; she was always rather weakly." What gave her composure? Was it because she did not care much for you, and the pang of parting was not great? "Oh," you say, "she showered upon us a wealth of affection; no mother ever loved her children more than mother loved us; she showed it by the way she nursed us when we were sick, and she toiled for us until her strength gave out." What, then, was it that gave her composure in the last hour? Do not hide it. Be frank and let me know. "Oh," you say, "it was because she was so good; she made the Lord her portion, and she had faith that she would go straight to glory, and that we should all meet her at last at the foot of the throne."

Here are people who say, "I saw a Christian brother die, and he triumphed." And some one else, "I saw a Christian sister die, and she triumphed." Some one else will say, "I saw a Christian daughter die, and she triumphed." Come, all ye who have seen the last moment of a Christian, and give testimony in this cause on trial. Uncover your heads, put your hands on the old family Bible, from which they used to read the promises, and promise in the presence of high heaven that you will tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. With what you have seen with your own eyes and what you have heard with your own ears, is there power in this Gospel to give calmness and triumph in the last exigency? The response comes from all sides, from young and old and middle aged, "We are witnesses!"

You see, my friends, I have not put before you any abstraction or a chimera, or anything like guess work. I present you affidavits of the best men and women, living and dead. Two witnesses in court will establish a fact. Here are not two witnesses, but millions of witnesses on earth and in heaven testifying that there is power in this religion to convert the soul, to give comfort in trouble and to afford composure in the last hour.

If ten men should come to you when you are sick with appalling sickness and say they had the same sickness and took a certain medicine and it cured them, you would probably take it. Now, suppose ten other men should come up and say: "We don't believe that there is anything in that medicine." "Well," I say, "have you tried it?" "No, I never tried it, but I don't believe there is anything in it." Of course you discredit their testimony. The skeptic may come and say: "There is no power in your religion." "Have you ever tried it?" "No, no." "Then avaunt!" Let me take the testimony of the millions of souls that have been converted to God and comforted in trial and solaced in the last hour. We will take their testimony as they cry, "We are witnesses!"

Professor Henry, of Washington, discovered a new star, and the tidings sped by submarine telegraph, and all the observatories of Europe were watching for that new star. Oh, hearer, looking out through the darkness of thy soul, canst thou see a bright light beaming on thee? "Where?" you say; "where? How can I find it?" Look along by the line of the Cross of the Son of God. Do you not see it trembling with all tenderness and beaming with all hope. It is the Star of Bethlehem.

> Deep horror then my vitals froze,
> Deathstruck I ceased the tide to stem,
> When suddenly a star arose—
> It was the Star of Bethlehem.

Oh, hearers, get your eye on it. It is easier for you now to become Christians than it is to stay away from Christ and heaven. When Mme. Sontag began her musical career she was hissed off the stage at Vienna by the friends of her rival, Amalia Steininger, who had already begun to decline through her dissipation. Years passed on, and one day Mme. Sontag, in her glory, was riding through the streets of Berlin, when she saw a little child leading a blind woman, and she said: "Come here, my little child, come here. Whom are you leading by the hand?" And the little child replied: "That's my mother, that's Amalia Steininger. She used to be a great singer, but she lost her voice, and she cried so much about it that she lost her eyesight." "Give my love to her," said Mme. Sontag, "and tell her an old acquaintance will call on her this afternoon."

The next week in Berlin a vast assemblage gathered at a benefit for that poor blind woman, and it was said that Sontag sang that night as she had never sung before. And she took a gallant soldier, who is more proud to-day of that gift of Angelo Sontag's than of all the decorations on his breast, and her daughter after her. That was what the queen of song did for her enemy. But oh, hear a more thrilling story still. Blind, immortal, poor and lost; then who, when the world and Christ were rivals for thy heart didst hiss thy Lord away—Christ comes now to give thee sight, to give thee a home, to give thee heaven. With more than a Sontag's generosity, He comes now to meet your need. With more than a Sontag's music, He comes to plead for the deliverance.

RICHMOND CHOSEN

For the Final Resting Place of Ex-President Davis' Remains.

The New York World of Sunday published a letter from Mrs. Jefferson Davis, in which she selects Richmond, Va., as the final resting place of the remains of her husband's body. Mrs. Davis' letter is as follows:

To the Veterans and People of the Southern States: After much anxious thought, I have finally decided to give to Virginia the care of my husband's mortal body, and feel that my action should be made public, as he was in many senses the property of the whole country. Immediately after the death of ex-President Jefferson Davis, Louisiana pressed her desire to keep his hallowed remains for all time, but she claimed only the right to guard him until some permanent place could be selected for his rest. Georgia claimed him, and has constantly renewed the request, because his father had long been a citizen of the state. There the ex-president had received the same royal welcome which Alabama had extended, and lastly she pleaded her great love for him as a reason for granting the request. Kentucky expressed her pride in being the place of his birth, and urged her claims. Virginia asked for his honored remains, because the most strenuous efforts of his life had been made upon her soil and in defense of Richmond as the capital of the confederate states. At short intervals during the past eighteen months she has renewed her tender insistance that he should rest among the heroic dead of all the states who fell in defense of the confederacy. * * *

All these claims have touched my heart, and contended together for the mastery. It has been hard to give up the hope of dwelling near my husband's resting place in Mississippi, where my home and interest are. * * * I submit to the personal sacrifice with the hope that the states of the confederacy will also relinquish their cherished plans for the sake of gratifying the majority of the veterans, who have written countless letters to me from each of the before mentioned states, to urge Richmond as the proper place for the grave of him who loved them all, and labored for their glory with all his might during the heat and burthen of the days granted to him here. Your country woman.

VARINA JEFFERSON DAVIS.

BUSINESS REVIEW.

Dun & Co's Report for the Past Week.

Business failures occurring throughout the country during the last seven days, as reported to R. G. Dun & Co.'s mercantile agency by telegraph, number for the United States 232, and for Canada 25, compared with a total of 287 last week. For the corresponding week of last year the figures were 197. Dun's trade review says: "The unusual conservatism which prevails in nearly all sections and branches of business impresses many as a most disheartening symptom. But it may, with at least equal reason, be interpreted as the very best ground for confidence in healthy and solid improvement when new and large crops come forward more freely. The absence of speculative excitement and indispo ition to buy in haste, are having a most wholesome influence.

Crop reports have never been more full than they are this year, and they grow more clearly satisfactory as to spring wheat every day, improving also as to other grain and cotton. Wheat has declined 2 cents during the past week, notwithstanding exports were fully as large as a year ago, but immediate demand for coin has caused a rise of 1½ cents, and oats are quoted higher. Sales were but moderate, and of cotton only 190,000 bales without the change in prices. The market for sugar has been weaker, but grows steady, and refined is in better demand. The Louisiana crop is expected to be the largest since 1860, bounty applications being for 450,000,000 pounds. The general course of prices has changed but little during the past week.

Reports from the cities show general dullness in trade at the south. The midsummer closing of iron work almost suspends trade, but while the best brands of pig are well taken, others are hard to sell and Alabama No. 1 has been offered at $16. No activity is noted in rails, and not much is manufactured iron, and it is thought that the early resumption by the works will cause a decline in prices. At southern points the money markets are close, as a rule, though only firm and in fair supply at New Orleans.

AN UNWISE MOVE.

Gov. Buchanan Accused of Overstepping His Authority.

A dispatch of Friday from Chattanooga says: It seems from investigations made by several prominent Chattanooga attorneys that Governor Buchanan has made a bad break in ordering out the militia to quell the mine riots at Bryceville. Whether the Tennessee militia or the Coal creek miners are a mob is a fine legal question. At the same time the governor lays himself liable to indictment for treason, for declaring Tennessee in a state of rebellion on account of a few lawless miners. It seems certain, from the authorities on the subject, that if any soldier at Coal creek kills a miner, he is a legal murderer, and must answer to the charge. Article 3, section 5, of the Tennessee constitution, adopted in 1870, says the militia shall not be called into service except in case of rebellion or invasion, and then only when the general assembly shall declare by law that the public safety requires it. There is great indignation in Chattanooga among the parents, relatives and friends of the two military companies from that city at Bryceville, because the handful of boys would stand little showing against several hundred equally well armed miners.

NEWS OF THE SOUTH BRIEFLY PARAGRAPHED

Forming an Epitome of Daily Happenings Here and There.

General Tom Brown, who represented Indiana in congress for several terms, died Friday.

J. H. Bonnell & Co., ink dealers, Louisville, Ky., were, on Friday, placed in the hands of a receiver.

The secretary of the treasury, on Thursday, issued a warrant for $26,217 in favor of the governor of North Carolina on account of the direct tax act.

The contract for the iron work on the Charleston, S. C., public building has been awarded to J. J. Harrington, of Washington, D. C., at his bid of $50,490.

The twentieth annual meeting of the South Carolina State Teachers' Association will be held at Anderson, S. C., the 22d, 23d and 24th instants. The railroads have offered reduced rates.

A Chattanooga dispatch says: The Tennessee Bar Association met in tenth annual session Wednesday morning at Lookout Mountain Inn. About fifty representative lawyers of the state were present.

General Thomas Harrison, of Waco, Texas, died Tuesday. He took a prominent part in the politics of Texas up to 1872, since which time he has devoted himself to his law practice. He was born in Alabama in 1823.

A Montgomery, Ala., dispatch of Thursday, says: Solicitor A. G. Smith, of the sixth district, has resigned, and six applications for the vacancy have reached the executive office in advance of the resignation, which has not yet been received by the governor.

A Louisville dispatch says: The people's party is making great efforts to secure a good showing at the August election in Kentucky. An organization was perfected at Newport, Tuesday, and candidates nominated, and Senator Peffer made his first speech in the state at Shelbyville.

The census office, on Wednesday, made public the tobacco statistics of Florida. The total number of planters in the state during the census year was 629; total area devoted to tobacco 1,169 acres; total product 467,298 pounds, and value of crop to producers, estimated on a basis of actual sales, $104,681.

Near Russellville, Ky., Wednesday, the family of W. J. Cornelius, a well to-do farmer, was poisoned by the food at supper. Bernard Cornelius, nephew, died before a doctor could be reached. Five others are dangerously ill. The symptoms are of arsenic. The poison is supposed to have been in the milk.

Nearly the entire business portion of Glasgow, Ky., was destroyed by fire Friday morning. Woods' sadlery shop, a newspaper office, Morris & Co.'s dry goods store, Boles' hall, post office, the Ganby house, and other stores and several residences were burned. The loss will reach $150,000, and the insurance is about one-half that amount.

On Thursday Governor Holt, of North Carolina, sent a cordial letter of invitation to Governor McKinney, of Virginia, to visit the North Carolina encampment at Wrightsville, and participate with him in the review of the North Carolina troops. He also sends permission to the First regiment of Virginia troops to enter North Carolina and remain in camp with the North Carolina guards.

The Yellow Pine Lumber association of Alabama, Mississippi and Florida met at Birmingham Thursday. There present with great unanimity reported the condition of trade as flat and production has been generally curtailed. After much argument on the reduction of prices, it was finally resolved unanimously to allow for the next sixty days a reduction of 10 per cent. from the price list now in effect.

The First National bank of Palatka, Fla., suspended payment Friday owing to a heavy run made upon it and its inability to make temporary loans in New York. This run was due to the recent failure of the Lake City bank, W. A. Winegar, president of the Palatka bank, having been involved to some extent in the Lake City failure. This impaired confidence in the Palatka bank, and the run on it has been heavy for a week or ten days.

At Paducah, Ky., Wednesday, the republican convention decided not to nominate a candidate for the state senate, but to support Graham, the people's party candidate. In an interview there, Jesse Harper, the people's party leader, said the purpose is to get a strong vote in Kentucky, to show that the people's party will receive the support of the Farmers' Alliance in the south. What Kentucky does he believes will largely determine the success of the party.

The central committee appointed by the president of the world's fair convention, held in Montgomery in May, again met Thursday and organized the Alabama World's Fair association, with a capital stock of $50,000. W. C. Bibb, Jr., of Montgomery, was elected president; Joseph P. Suffold, of Montgomery, secretary and treasurer; E. H. Barron, of Birmingham, commissioner general. Money will be raised by popular subscription, the value of shares being placed at $1 each.

ITALY MAY COME

With an Exhibit to the World's Fair.

A Washington dispatch says: A number of citizens of Italian birth, representing the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia, met Thursday evening at the Arlington hotel to consider the refusal of the Italian government to participate in the Chicago world's fair. Dr. T. S. Verdi, of Washington, presided and made a speech expressing the hope that no financial reasons would be allowed to deter Italy from being represented at Chicago. Professor Fava, son of Baron Fava, who was recently Italian minister, but who is a naturalized citizen, and other Italian-Americans, expressed similar views and then a set of resolutions were adopted, urging the Italian government to reconsider its decision, and to accept the friendly invitation; also inviting all progressive Americans citizens of Italian birth to unite in the movement. A copy of the resolutions will be forwarded through the diplomatic channel to the Italian government.

"German Syrup"

Here is something from Mr. Frank A. Hale, proprietor of the De Witt House, Lewiston, and the Tontine Hotel, Brunswick, Me. Hotel men meet the world as it comes and goes, and are not slow in sizing people and things up for what they are worth. He says that he has lost a father and several brothers and sisters from Pulmonary Consumption, and is himself frequently troubled with colds, and he often coughs enough to make him sick at his stomach. Whenever he has taken a cold of this kind he uses Boschee's German Syrup, and it cures him every time. Here is a man who knows the full danger of lung troubles, and would therefore be most particular as to the medicine he used. What is his opinion? Listen! "I use nothing but Boschee's German Syrup, and have advised, I presume, more than a hundred different persons to take it. They agree with me that it is the best cough syrup in the market."

THE Old Reliable

The American flag—the stars and the glorious red, white and blue—has undergone several changes within the past eighteen months. The admission of North Dakota, South Dakota, Washington and Montana recently, added four stars to the blue field of the flag; then came Idaho, and now the latest new state, Wyoming, claims a star in the constellation of the union. The flags of the government are always changed on the Fourth of July, and now the spangled banner of forty-four stars is the standard of the union. Here are the terms of the president's latest order, as announced to the army: "The field or union of the national flag in use in the army will, on and after July 4, 1891, consist of forty-four stars in six rows, the upper and lower rows to have eight stars, and the second, third, fourth and fifth rows seven stars each."

NEVER before in the history of live stock has such success attended the efforts of breeders in perfecting an animal possessing the power to resist disease, and containing the elements of rapid growth and great size as the OHIO IMPROVED Chester hogs, two having weighed 2,806 lbs. These facts, together with our enormous sales in the States and foreign countries, have excited the envy of competitors, who call in question the facts claimed. We therefore have decided to convince every one of the superiority of this breed by offering to sell a pair ON TIME to the first applicant from each locality with references.

Foreign countries having taken steps to re-open their ports for the reception of American pork, also the fact that farmers have sent all sizes to the butcher, has already caused a lively demand for breed sows and pigs for breeders. They see their mistake, and that the raising of a superior breed of hogs that have a vigorous and strong constitution, with consequent ability to resist the attacks of disease, will in the near future take rank with the most profitable industries. First come first served on a postal card, and address by first mail and secure first choice.

The Peop'e Running Crazy on Societies—Spending Money Faster Than They Make It.

"Sorrow endureth for a night, but joy c me in the morning." That is unless the cook has quit and you have to rise before sun up and cook breakfast yourself. But I don't mind it much and it's a fair compromise for me to cook breakfast and the girls to clean up after my mussing and cook the other two meals. In fact, I would enjoy the frolic, if the old cranky stove would bake the biscuit brown on the bottom, but this morning they were as white as cotton and were blistered on top, and Mrs. Arp said it would take two or three days for me to get my hand in, and she hinted that the old stove was about burnt out anyhow and that it had to be fired up an hour or two sooner so as to get properly hot in the lower chambers. So I reckon I will have to rise with the chickens and flap my wings and crow and fire up. The children beg me to wake them up and let them do it all, but their mother says it nearly kills them to get up so soon, and she had rather do it herself. But it is most astonishing how late these children can set up at night at a party or frolic and still keep their health, and I have admired the alacrity with they rise when they are going on an excursion or a picnic and have to take an early start. There seems to be a power of stirring around this summer, considering the hard times, and I have thought that maybe all this going to and fro had something to do with the hard times. It don't cost so much to travel, but there is always some fixing up to do beforehand, and that costs money. My folks told me last summer that the excursion rates to St. Simon's and back was only $6, and the children had never seen the ocean, and it did look like we could afford that little sum and ought to embrace the golden opportunity. And so I surrendered, and prepared my finances for the $6 apiece and two or three days board, but they stayed ten days, and I never got over the golden opportunity and the strain for six months. But Mrs. Arp declares it was worth it, and she wouldent mind going again this summer if I had the money to spare, which I haven't, and never expect to have again.

Old Dr. Kirk says that these excursions and conventions will break the country, and that nobody can stand it but the negroes. And here they go and there they go, like a fiddler's elbow—the lawyers to Columbus, and the doctors to Augusta, and the editors to New York, and the dentists to Atlanta, and the Royal Arcanum to Savannah, and the Masons to Macon, and the conductors to Gainesville, and the school teachers to Brunswick, and the military to Chickamauga, and the legislature to Salt Springs, and some more editors to Chicago and the college boys and college girls everywhere in squads, and then there are the Odd Fellows and Knights of Honor and Knights of Pythias and Knights of Labor and Knights of Jericho and Scylla and Charybdis, and the baseball teams that are all on the go somewhere, and besides all these there are a big lot of women and girls and fancy fellers visiting the springs, and a heap of them dance and gamble and drink and carry on scandalous, and a heap of them don't but it all costs money, and our young men haven't got it to spare, and they come home broke and don't lay up a dollar, and they can't marry, for they haven't got anything to marry on, but they flirt around amazing and make a mash and go home and brag about it. Why there are boys in all these towns that are clerking or working for thirty or forty dollars a month, and it takes it all for clothes and buggy rides and excursions, and they are not laying up a dollar, and the old man is kept bowed and hard run to help them along, and it's all wrong, all wrong, and the boys ought to put on the brakes and stop it."

And the good old doctor came down with his cane hard on the brick; and about this time old Uncle Simon Peter came along and took up the subject as the doctor left off and said: "Yes, they have got too many societies, and I used to be as big a fool as anybody and join'd everyone that come along—the Masons and Sons of Temperance, and Bible societies, and I don't know how many more, and what, with preaching and traveling and the conference and all the societies. I liked to have never got acquainted with my family, for I was out somewhere every night; and one day my wife saw a notice in the newspaper that there was a new society just come for the protection of hen-pecked husbands, and she called my attention to it and asked if I hadent better join it and run for president; and that put me to thinking and I quit for a while, until it occurred to me not long ago that I could do some good by joining the alliance and helping them to reform the world and save the country, and so I joined, and I've been talking to them about whiskey and tobacco and extravagance and corruption at Washington, but my ideas don't seem to be popular, and they say my views are all right, but they are impracticable. There are $900,000,000 spent in a year for whiskey, and $600,000,000 for tobacco, and $100,000,000 wasted in extravagant salaries, and if the alliance would just come down like an avalanche upon those three things and save that $1,600,000,000 a year, all that money would be put into useful and profitable industries, and it would get scattered among the people and make everybody comfortable and happy, and the farmers wouldent need any subtreasury. Why, it they will just tackle the whiskey alone and stop every still and all importations of spirits our courts would nearly nigh dry up for want of business, and our jails would be empty and our taxes be reduced 50 or 75 per cent. But the alliance can't see it, for they want a little something for sucks bites themselves, and the whisky ring is a tremendous power in the nation, and so I have despaired of reforming the people by myself and have concluded to go along and preach the gospel and leave mankind to the Lord who made them." And the good old man gave a sigh and went on his way.

And [illegible] James Galbraith, another good man, and a farmer, [illegible] carries me a load, and he too, belongs to the alliance and is desperately in earnest, and he said the bottom was about to drop out of farming as a business, for every thing he raised was below the cost of production. Said he, "Here I've got a carload of wheat right here in town for sale, and all I can get is 77 cents a bushel, and I've kept an account fair and square and it has cost me over eighty cents to raise it, and my cotton is worse than that, and I've worked harder last year and this than I ever did in my life, and you can just look at my hands, and I tell you Major Arp, there is no use in talking, something has got to be done for the farmer—77 cents won't grow a bushel of wheat in this country."

Just then a carpenter came along and said: "Well, I'm glad to hear that wheat has come down. I hope now we will get flour a little cheaper. I'm getting mighty tired paying $3 a hundred for flour," and he hurried on to his work. And so, Mr. Editor, I don't know what to do. I would fix it all right if I could. I would arrange matters so that every man could sell high and buy low; but I don't see my way clear, and so, like Uncle Simon Peter, I believe I will give all people my benediction and leave these troubles with the Lord.

But these youngsters don't care a cent about the price of flour nor the third party, nor where the money is to come from. They have about run away with the country. Tomorrow there is to be another baseball match game. They have had three this week, and because I slip round the back way and get in the back ground and look on they say I'm in favor of it, but I ain't. If they would not play I wouldent go; but I don't want to see Dalton or Cedartown or Marietta come up here and beat our boys, and so I slip round to do a little hollerin' and sick the boys on. The boys oughtent to read an old man into temptation. They can't play much nohow. They don't hit one ball in ten, but we boys used to knock the old town ball a quarter of a mile, and if we ever missed one were caught out behind sure. And the girls are just as crazy about tennis. They play all the shank of the afternoon, and sometimes don't get back in time to fix the table for supper, and my wife has got to going down town most every evening for a spool of thread or something, and I've just found out she slips over to the tennis court to see the young folks play—next thing I know she will be playing football. She takes rides with the children and says they ought to have some sport while they are young—something to look back to when they get old and full of trouble. "It has been forty years," said she, "since I had any time to enjoy such things, for there was always a baby in the way, and now I am going when I feel like it."

Well, let her go. I don't care. Let her renew her youth, as Milton says. She ought to have a pension right now as a confederate widow; but she is spoiling these children. When I came home from Missouri I inquired for Carl, and she said he was at Chickamauga with the military. "How is that?" said I. "He dident belong to any company." "No," said she, "but he went over to Rome, and Captain Byrd took him in on the tail end of his company, and he borrowed a uniform and I let him go. He has been studying very hard, you know, and needed a rest." Well, I had two or three sons up there—military boys right fresh from Auburn college—and they got into a company, too, and wanted to rest, and so I acquiesced and ruminated, and sung my old song: "Sorrow endureth for a night, but joy cometh in the morning."

Well, it dident cost a cent, for the state footed the bills, and the boys say they had a splendid time—never had so much fun in all their lives. Two of them belled a cow and rode her bar back through the camp one evening, and never got in the guardhouse for it. Only had to do double guard duty for two days, and that wasent nothing, they did. A new company from the wiregrass got there one night about ten o'clock, and the Cadets found out they were pretty green and met them at the depot and marched them a mile away and drilled and double-quicked them for two hours just as though they had orders to do it. They eat up all their own rations and stole everybody else's that were not under lock and key. They kept the whole camp in an uproar and I'm afraid my lineal descendants were at the bottom of it. Captain Phil Byrd, of The Hustler, had better mind how he attaches the Arp family to his command. It has been forty-six years since I helped to take the clapper out of the college bell and hoist a billy goat into the tutor's room, and now the sins of my youth are being vented upon me in the devilment of my children and grandchildren, and the state and the governor and the legislature and my wife are responsible for it. But it's all right, I reckon, and all's well that ends well. "Sorrow endureth for a night, but joy cometh in the morning."

THEY SAW THE PARADE

But Did Not See the Sneak Thief Take the Cash.

A telegram from Sog Harbor, N. Y., says: While the clerks in the Peconic bank were looking at a circus parade Wednesday, a sneak thief entered the bank, pocketed a package of currency containing $3,500 and escaped, leaving no clue to his identity. The clerks had delegated one of their number to care for the bank's valuables while they watched the parade. Curiosity overcome the watcher, and he also went to the window. The thief seized the opportunity and the package of cash at the same time.

THE STEAMER SANK

And Over Two Hundred Souls Went Down with Her.

The steamer City of Pekin, which arrived at San Francisco Thursday night, reports that on July 19th, at 3 o'clock a. m., the steamer Tamee Maru, of Hakodate, while returning from Seto with 320 laborers on board, came into collision with the steamer Migoshi Maru, off Shinagawa. The Tamee Maru immediately sank, with loss of 240 persons, drowned and missing. The captain and first officer and sixty laborers reached the shore.

THE EDITOR IN COURT

To Answer for Publishing Electrocution News.

In the court of general sessions at New York, on Monday, before Recorder Smyth, Charles O'Conor Hennessy was called to the bar to plead to an indictment charging him with misdemeanor. The alleged offense was his publication in the Evening News, of which he is city editor, of the details of the execution of Slocum and the other murderers recently put to death by electricity at Sing Sing. A demurrer to the indictment was entered in which it is claimed that the statute under which the indictment was found is unconstitutional, inasmuch as it is repugnant to the liberty of the press guaranteed to it by the constitution.

CONDITION OF CROPS

As Bulletined by Weather Bureau for Past Week.

The weather bureau's weekly crop bulletin says: The week was far cooler than usual in all sections east of the Rocky mountains, although the departure from normal temperature has been less than it was during the previous week generally throughout the southern states, while the deficiency in temperature was more marked in the northwest over the spring wheat region. The rainfall during the past week has been largely in excess on the Atlantic coast, the heaviest rains occurring in South Carolina, and along the Alleghany range in Virginia, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Kentucky, where the rainfall ranged from two to four inches.

GENERAL REMARKS.

Arkansas—The rainfall was very badly distributed and some portions of the state [illegible] beginning to suffer from drought. Cotton and corn show signs of deterioration compared to last week.

Mississippi—Cotton small, but fruiting well. Recent rains assure a good corn crop in the northern counties. The rainfall of the past week was unequally distributed, but enough fell in the past ten days to make conditions favorable.

Virginia—Hay harvesting and threshing retarded by rain. Wheat is yielding less than expected and corn and tobacco are improving, except in the vicinity of Lynchburg, where there was too much rain.

Alabama—Weather conditions generally excellent for cotton, but late corn is not doing so well and is suffering for rain; Irish potatoes unusually fine.

North Carolina—Too much rain for cotton, but all crops continue to improve, especially corn; threshing and haying retarded. A very severe hailstorm in Warren county on the 18th did great damage.

South Carolina—Well-distributed rains were beneficial to crops; cotton shows a marked improvement; corn is in condition and rice is fair. The outlook is much more encouraging.

Tennessee—Favorable conditions have prevailed and the outlook is encouraging. Wheat threshing is nearly completed, and the yield is good. Early corn is about made; tobacco is flourishing; cotton needs rain in the western division.

Texas—Cotton is very promising. In the southwest portion there is some shedding, due to rapid maturing, occasioned by dry, hot weather.

Louisiana—Good growing weather, beneficial to all crops; cotton very promising, and corn is in good condition, and is being rapidly laid by. Rice is heading finely; crops grassy in a few localities.

THE LAST SAD RITES

Over the Corpses of the St. Mande Disaster.

A cablegram from Paris says: Immense crowds of people, estimated at 25,000, gathered Wednesday afternoon at St. Mande to witness the funerals of the victims of the terrible railroad disaster of Sunday last. The crowds were so great that it required the presence of the prefect of the department of the Seine and a strong detachment of troops to keep the route of procession clear. There were twenty-four hearses in black line, which led from the town hall to the cemetery, and thousands of mourners followed the bodies to the grave. One would have imagined that some terrible scourge or ravages of war had suddenly swept away a portion of the inhabitants of St. Mande and its neighborhood. All the people were in mourning. All the houses were draped with emblems, half-masted flags and other signs of general mourning. The entire scene was harrowing in the extreme.

CLEVELAND DENIES

The Report That He Will Make Campaign Speeches.

A Boston, Mass., dispatch says: To a representative of The Herald at Buzzards bay, ex-President Cleveland said, Monday, in reply to inquiries concerning the report that he was going on a speech-making trip in Ohio: "I have not been requested by the Ohio democrats to make speeches in their state during the pending canvass. I do not expect to take part in the campaign there, nor in any other state, as I have never given the slightest intimation of an intention to do so. I am convinced that Governor Campbell and all other fair-minded political friends will understand that if I decline to go upon the stump, there are perfectly good and valid reasons for my action, entirely consistent with a most earnest desire for the success of all the democratic candidates in Ohio and elsewhere."

TALKED WITH WANAMAKER.

A Mobile Delegation Visit the Postmaster General.

A Washington dispatch says: A delegation of gentlemen from Mobile, Ala., who desire that Mobile shall be a shipping point of a postal-aided line of steamers of Central America and other points, had a conference with Postmaster General Wanamaker on the subject Tuesday. The delegation included, among others, Senators Morgan and Pugh and Representative Clark, of Alabama, and A. S. Benn, president of the Commercial club of Mobile; Gaylord B. Clark and Rittenhouse Moore, the last three representing the Commercial club of Mobile. Mr. Wanamaker received them very courteously, and exhibited much interest in what they had to say in behalf of Mobile. They showed very intelligent knowledge of the gulf ports as related to South American commerce. He requested that their application should be made in writing, and promised to take the matter up and do all that he could in justice to proper economy in aid of Mobile's wishes and needs in the premises. As a result of the conference, the delegation will submit to the department in writing, a statement showing the service the people of the city will offer as an inducement to the government to include within the present advertisement, issued by direction of the provision of the postal-aid bill, the proposal for a service from Mobile direct. It is said that the route which the delegation favored provides that vessels shall stop at Tampico, Greytown and Colon.

RYAN JAILED.

Judge Gober Decides that He is in Contempt.

At Atlanta, Ga., Tuesday, Judge Gober remanded Stephen A. Ryan to jail for contempt of court. The specifications of Mr. Ryan's contempt are that he refused to deliver to the receiver appointed to take charge of his store on Whitehall street all the cash assets, or to give a satisfactory account of the same. One hundred and twenty thousand four hundred and ninety dollars and seventy-one cents is the amount of money which Judge Gober says Ryan has in his possession, and which he must deliver to Mr. Charles Kingsberry, the receiver, before he will be released from jail. Ryan's attorneys will enter a bill of exceptions, and the case from now on promises to be an exciting and hotly contested legal battle.

TENNESSEE'S CROPS.

An Epidemic of Hog Cholera Along the Mississippi.

A Nashville dispatch of Wednesday, says: The monthly crop reports, now being received by Commissioner of Agriculture Godwin, shows that cholera is playing havoc with swine in the counties along the Mississippi river. A correspondent at Bartlett, in Shelby county, says 90 per cent of the hogs have been killed, while another at the same postoffice says whole herds have been exterminated. Very discouraging reports also come from Tipton, Lauderdale, Dyer, Lake and Obion. These reports, however, are the exception, as stock in all other counties is generally healthy and in good condition.

INTERNAL REVENUE.

A Preliminary Report of Uncle Sam's Collections.

Acting Commissioner Wilson has made a preliminary report to the secretary of the treasury regarding the operation of the internal revenue bureau during the fiscal year ended June 30th last. The total collections from all sources during the year was $146,035,376, an increase of $8,440,680 as compared with the preceding fiscal year. Collections were as follows: On spirits, $98,335,963, an increase of $1,648,583; tobacco, $32,706,370, decrease, $1,162,730; fermented liquors, $26,565,190, increase, $2,536,595; oleomargarine, $1,077,924, increase, $291,683; miscellaneous, $2,690,087, increase of $106,583.

GENERAL MILES inspires respect, apart from his rank among the soldiers of the Missouri Division of the army by the fact that he is an athlete, and particularly a skilful boxer. He may be found almost every afternoon with the gloves on in the Athenæum gymnasium, in Chicago, and it is popular belief that he could knock out his entire command, taking them one at a time. He is surprisingly quick and agile for his years and keeps in active training.

A Canal With a Tunnel.

Of the building of canals there appears to be no end, and there has just been completed the construction of a canal connecting the lake of Biwa, in the interior of Japan, with Kioto, the ancient capital of the country. This important work was wholly designed by a native Japanese. The lake is the largest in Japan, and the distance traversed by the new canal is thirty-five miles, with a difference in level of 280 feet. Its function is not only to afford a means of communication between Kioto and the interior, but also to irrigate the rice fields on the line of the channel and to supply water power for the city factories. A peculiar feature of the tunnel is the presence of three long tunnels through which the boats are drawn by means of chain traction. On leaving the last tunnel the canal is divided into two branches, one of which is intended for boat traffic, through which the boats are carried on cradles mounted on tracks, drawn by a wire rope, actuated by a motor supplied with water from the other branch. This passes through a small tunnel and is then carried on a masonry aqueduct of fourteen arches to the western suburb of Kioto. It can readily be seen, then, that the Japanese are not very far behind the procession in the practical application of the more important principles of engineering.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

"Sorrow endureth for a night, but joy ...meth in the morning." That is unle...she cook has quit and you have to rise before sun up and cook breakfast yourself. But I don't mind it much and it's a fair compromise for me to cook breakfast and the girls to clean up after my messing and cook the other two meals. In fact, I would enjoy the frolic, if the old cranky stove would bake the biscuit brown on the bottom, but this morning they were as white as cotton and were blistered on top, and Mrs. Arp said it would take two or three days for me to get my hand in and she hinted that the old stove was about burnt out anyhow and that it had to be fired up an hour or two sooner ...as to get properly hot in the lower chamber. So I reckon I will have to rise with the ...ickens and flap my wings and crow ...and fire up. The children beg me to wake them up and let them do it all, but their mother says it nearly kills them to get up so soon, and she had rather do it herself. But it is most astonishing how late these children can set up at night at a party or frolic and still keep their health, and I have admired the alacrity with they rise when they are going on an excursion or a picnic and have to take an early start. There seems to be a power of stirring around the summer, considering the hard times, and I have thought that maybe all this going to and fro had something to do with the hard times. It don't cost so much to travel, but there is always some fixing up to do before hand, and that costs money. My folks told me that summer that the excursion rates to St. Simon's and back was only $6, and the children had never seen the ocean, and it did look like we could afford that little sum and ought to embrace the golden opportunity. And so I surrendered, and prepared my finances for the $6 apiece and two or three days board, but they stayed ten days, and what, with all the preliminary fixings, I never got over the golden opportunity and the sursin for six months. But Mrs. Arp declares it was worth it, and she wouldent mind going again this summer if I had the money to spare, which I haven't, and never expect to have again.

Old Dr. Kirk says that these excursions and conventions will break the country, and that nobody can stand it but the negroes. And here they go and there they go, like a fiddler's elbow—the lawyers to Columbus, and the doctors to Augusta, and the editors to New York, and the dentists to Atlanta, and the Royal Arcanum to Savannah, and the Masons to Macon, and the conductors to Gainesville, and the school teachers to Brunswick, and the military to Chickamauga, and the leg slature to Salt Spring, and some more editors to Chicago and the college boys and college girls everywhere in squads, and then t ere are the Odd Fellows and Knights of Honor and Knights of Pythias and Knights of Labor and Knights of Jericho and Scylla and Charybdis, and the baseball teams that are all on the go somewhere, and besides all these there are a big lot of wo.en and g rls and fancy fellers visiting the springs, and a heap of them dance and gamble and drink and carry on scandalous, and a heap of them don't but it all costs money, and our young men haven't got it to spare, and they come home broke and don't lay up a dollar, and they can't marry, for they haven't got anything to marry on, but they flirt around amazing and make a mash and go home and brag about it. Why there are boys in all these towns that are clerking or working for thirty or forty dollars a month, and it takes it all for clothes and buggy rides and excursions, and they are not laying up a dollar, and the old man is kept bowed and hard run to help them along, and it's all wrong, all wrong, and the boys ought to put on the brakes and stop it."

And the good old doctor came down with his cane hard on the brick; and about this time old Uncle Simon Peter came along and took up the subject as the doctor left off and said: "Yes, they have got too many societies, and I used to be as big a fool as anybody and join d everyone that come along—the Masons and Sons of Temperance, and Bible societies, and I don't know how many more, and what, with preaching and traveling and the co ference and all the societies, I liked to have never got acquainted with my family, for I was out somewhere every night; and one day my wife saw a notice in the newspaper that there was a new society just come for the protection of henpecked husbands, and she called my attention to it and asked if I h dent better join it and run for president; and that put me to thinking and I quit for a while, until it occurred to me not long ago that I could do some good by j ining the alliance and helping them to return the world and save the country, and so I joined, and I've been a talking to them about whiskey and tobacco and extravagance and corruption at Washington, but my ideas don't seem to be popular, and they say my views are all right, but they are impracticable. There are $900,0 0,0 0 spent in a year for whiskey, and $600,000,000 for tobacco, and $100,0 0,000 wasted in extravagant ser ...ants, and if the alliance would jus come down l ke an avalanche upon those three things and save that $1,600,000,0.0 a year, all that money would be put into useful and profitable industries, and it would get scattered among the people and make everybody comfortable and happy, and the farmers wouldent need any subtreasury. Why, if they will just scrape the whiskey alone and stop every still and all importations of spirits our courts would magnify nign dry up the ...went of business, and our jails would be empty and our taxes be reduced 50 or 75 per cent. But the alliance can't reach it, for they want a little something for snake bites themselves, and the whisky ring is a tremendous power in the la ions and so I have despaired of reforming the people by myself and have concluded to go along and preach the gospel and save mankind to the Lord who made them." And the good old man gave a sigh and went on his way.

THE EDITOR IN COURT

To Answer for Publishing Electrocution News.

In the court of general sessions at New York, on Monday, before Recorder Smyth, Charles O'Conor Hennessy was called to the bar to plead to an indictment charging him with misdemeanor. The alleged offense was his publication in the Evening News, of which he is city editor, of the details of the execution of Slocum and the other murderers recently put to death by electricity at Sing Sing. A demurrer to the indictment was entered, in which it is claimed that the statutes under which the indictment was found is unconstitutional, inasmuch as it restricts the liberty of the press guaranteed to it by the constitution.

THEY SAW THE PARADE

But Did Not See the Sneak Thief Take the Cash.

A telegram from Sag Harbor, N. Y., says: While the clerks in the Peconic bank were looking at a circus parade Wednesday, a sneak thief entered the bank, pocketed a package of currency containing $3,500 and escaped, leaving no clue to his identity. The clerks had delegated one of their number to care for the bank's valuables while they watched the parade. Curiosity overcome the watcher, and he also went to the window. The thief seized the opportunity and the package of cash at the same time.

THE STEAMER SANK

And Over Two Hundred Souls Went Down with Her.

The steamer City of Pekin, which arrived at San Francisco Thursday night, reports that on July 12th, at 3 o'clock a. m., the steamer Tamese Mara, of Hakodate, while returning from Suto with 230 laborers on board, came into collision with the steamer Migomi Mara, off Shimonoseki. The Tamese Mara immediately sank, with loss of 200 persons, drowned and missing. The captain and first officer and sixty laborers reached the shore.

CONDITION OF CROPS

As Bulletined by Weather Bureau for Past Week.

The weather bureau's weekly crop bulletin says: The week was far cooler than usual in all sections east of the Rocky mountains, although the departure from normal temperature has been less than it was during the previous week generally throughout the southern states, while the deficiency in temperature was more marked in the northwest over the spring wheat region. The rainfall during the past week has been largely in excess on the Atlantic coast, the heaviest rains occurring in South Carolina, and along the Alleghany range in Virginia, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Kentucky, where the rainfall ranged from two to four inches.

GENERAL REMARKS.

Arkansas—The rainfall was very badly distributed and some portions of the state are beginning to suffer from drought. Cotton and corn show slight deterioration compared to last week.

Mississippi—Cotton small, but fruiting well. Recent rains assure a good corn crop in the northern counties. The rainfall of the past week was unequally distributed, but enough fell in the past ten days to make conditions favorable.

Virginia—Hay harvesting and threshing retarded by rain. Wheat is yielding less than expected and corn and tobacco are improving, except in the vicinity of Lynchburg, where there was too much rain.

Alabama—Weather conditions generally excellent for cotton, but late corn is not doing so well and is suffering for rain; Irish potatoes unusually fine.

North Carolina—Too much rain for cotton, but all crops continue to improve, especially corn; threshing and haying retarded. A very severe hailstorm in Warren county on the 18th did great damage.

South Carolina—Well-distributed rains were beneficial to crops; cotton shows a marked improvement; corn is in condition and rice is fair. The outlook is much more encouraging.

Tennessee—Favorable conditions have prevailed and the outlook is encouraging. Wheat threshing is nearly completed, and the yield is good. Early corn is about made; tobacco is floutishing; cotton needs rain in the western division.

Texas—Cotton is very promising. In the southwest portion there is some shedding, due to rapid maturing, occasioned by dry, hot weather.

Louisiana—Good growing weather, beneficial to all crops; cotton very promising, and corn is in good condition, and is being rapidly laid by. Rice is heading finely; crops grassy in a few localities.

THE LAST SAD RITES

Over the Corpses of the St. Mande Disaster.

A cablegram from Paris says: Immense crowds of people, estimated at 25,000, gathered Wednesday afternoon at St. Mande to witness the funerals of the victims of the terrible railroad disaster of Sunday last. The crowds were so great that it required the presence of the prefect of the department of the Seine and a strong detachment of troops to keep the route of procession clear. There were twenty-four hearses in black line, which led from the town hall to the cemetery, and thousands of mourners followed the bodies to the grave. One would have imagined that some terrible scourge or ravages of war had suddenly swept away a portion of the inhabitants of St. Mande and its neighborhood. All the houses people were in mourning. All the houses were draped with emblems, half-masted flags and other signs of general mourning. The entire scene was harrowing in the extreme.

CLEVELAND DENIES

The Report That He Will Make Campaign Speeches.

A Boston, Mass., dispatch says: To a representative of The Herald at Buzzards Bay, ex-President Cleveland said, Monday, in reply to inquiries concerning the report that he was going on a speech-making trip in Ohio: "I have not been requested by the Ohio democrats to make speeches in their state during the pending canvass. I do not expect to take part in the campaign there, nor in any other state, as I have never given the slightest intimation of an intention to do so. I am convinced that Governor Campbell and all other fair-minded political friends will understand that if I decline to go upon the stump, there are perfectly good and valid reasons for my action, entirely consistent with a most earnest desire for the success of all the democratic candidates in Ohio and elsewhere."

TALKED WITH WANAMAKER.

A Mobile Delegation Visit the Postmaster General.

A Washington dispatch says: A delegation of gentlemen from Mobile, Ala., who desire that Mobile shall be a shipping point of a postal-aided line of steamers of Central America and other points, had a conference with Postmaster General Wanamaker on the subject Tuesday. The delegation included, among others, Senators Brown and Pugh and Representative Clark, of Alabama, and A. S. Benn, president of the Commercial club of Mobile; Gaylord B. Clark and Rittenhouse Moore, the last three representing the Commercial club of Mobile. Mr. Wanamaker received them very courteously, and exhibited much interest in what they had to say in behalf of Mobile. They showed very intelligent knowledge of the gulf ports as related to South American commerce. He requested that their application should be made in writing, and promised to take the matter up and do all that he could in justice to proper economy in aid of Mobile's wishes and needs in the premises. As a result of the conference, the delegation will submit to the department in writing, a statement showing the service the people of the city will offer as an inducement to the government to include within the present advertisement, issued by direction of the provision of the postal-aid bill, the proposal for a service from Mobile direct. It is said that the route which the delegation favored provides that vessels shall stop at Tampico, Greytown and Colon.

RYAN JAILED.

Judge Gober Decides that He is in Contempt.

At Atlanta, Ga., Tuesday, Judge Gober remanded Stephen A. Ryan to jail for contempt of court. The specifications of Mr. Ryan's contempt are that he refused to deliver to the receiver appointed to take charge of his store on Whitehall street all the cash assets, or to give a satisfactory account of the same. One hundred and twenty thousand four hundred and ninety dollars and seventy-one cents is the amount of money which Judge Gober says Ryan has in his possession, and which he must deliver to Mr. Charles Kingsberry, the receiver, before he will be released from jail. Ryan's attorneys will enter a bill of exceptions, and the case from now on promises to be an exciting and hotly contested legal battle.

TENNESSEE'S CROPS.

An Epidemic of Hog Cholera Along the Mississippi.

A Nashville dispatch of Wednesday, says: The monthly crop reports, now being received by Commissioner of Agriculture Godwin, shows that cholera is playing havoc with swine in the counties along the Mississippi river. A correspondent at Bartlett, in Shelby county, says 90 per cent of the hogs have been killed, while another at the same postoffice says whole herds have been exterminated. Very discouraging reports also come from Tipton, Lauderdale, Dyer, Lake and Obion. These reports, however, are the exception, as stock in all other counties is generally healthy and in good condition.

INTERNAL REVENUE.

A Preliminary Report of Uncle Sam's Collections.

GENERAL MILES inspires respect, apart from his rank, among the soldiers of the Missouri Division of the army by the fact that he is an athlete, and particularly a skilful boxer. He may be found almost every afternoon with the gloves on in the Athenæum gymnasium, in Chicago, and it is popular belief that he could knock out his entire command, taking them one at a time. He is surprisingly quick and agile for his years and keeps in active training.

A Canal With a Tunnel.

Of the building of canals there appears to be no end, and there has just been completed the construction of a canal connecting the lake of Biwa, in the interior of Japan, with Kioto, the ancient capital of the country. This important work was wholly designed by a native Japanese. The lake is the largest in Japan, and the distance traversed by the new canal is thirty-five miles, with a difference in level of 380 feet. Its function is not only to afford a means of communication between Kioto and the interior, but also to irrigate the rice fields on the line of the channel and to supply water power for the city factories. A peculiar feature of the tunnel is the presence of three long tunnels through which the boats are drawn by means of chain traction. On leaving the last tunnel the canal is divided into two branches, one of which is intended for boat traffic, through which the boats are carried on cradles mounted on trucks, drawn by a wire rope, actuated by a motor supplied with water from the other branch. This passes through a small tunnel and is then carried on a masonry aqueduct of fourteen arches to the western suburb of Kioto. It can readily be seen, then, that the Japanese are not very far behind the procession in the practical application of the more important principles of engineering.—New York Observer.

THE GREAT PERPLEXITY.

WHICH HOLDS BILL ARP IN ITS GRASP.

The Peop'e Running Crazy on Societies—Spending Money Faster Than They Make It.

"Sorrow endureth for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." That is unless the cook has quit and you have to rise before you up and cook breakfast yourself. But I don't mind it much and it's a fair compromise for me to cook breakfast and the girls to clean up after my meeting and cook the other two meals. In fact, I would enjoy the frolic, if the old cranky stove would bake the biscuit brown on the bottom, but this morning they were as white as cotton and would take two or three days for me to get my hand in, and she hinted that the old stove was about burnt out anyhow and that it had to be fired up an hour or two sooner was to get properly hot in the lower chamber. So I reckon I will have to rise with the chickens and flap my wings and crow and fire up. The children beg me to wake them up and let them do it all, but their mother says it nearly kills them to get up so soon, and she had rather do it herself. But it is most astonishing how late these children can rest up at night at a party or frolic and still keep their health, and I have admired the alacrity with they rise when they are going on an excursion or a picnic and have to take an early start. There seems to be a power of stirring around the summer, considering the hard times, and I have thought that maybe all this going to and fro had something to do with the hard times. It don't cost so much to travel, but there is always some fixing up to do before hand, and that costs money. My folks told me last summer that the excursion rates to St. Simon's and back was only $6, and the children had never seen the ocean, and it did look like we could afford that little sum and ought to embrace the golden opportunity. And so I surrendered, and prepared my finances for the $6 apiece and two or three days board, but they stayed ten days, and went, with all the preliminary fixings, I never got over the golden opportunity and the strain for six months. But Mrs. Arp declares it was worth it, and she wouldent mind going again this summer if I had the money to spare, which I havent, and never expect to have again.

Old Dr. Kirk says that these excursions and conventions will break the country, and that nobody can stand it but the negroes. And here they go and there they go, like a fiddler's elbow—the lawyers to Columbus, and the doctors to Augusta, and the editors to New York, and the dentists to Atlanta, and the Royal Arcanum to Savannah, and the Masons to Macon, and the conductors to Gainesville, and the school teachers to Brunswick, and the military to Chickamauga, and the legislature to Salt Springs, and some more editors to Chicago and the college boys and college girls everywhere in squads, and then there are the Odd Fellows and Knights of Honor and Knights of Pythias and Knights of Labor and Knights of Jericho and Scylla and Charybdis, and the baseball teams that are all on the go somewhere, and besides all these there are a big lot of women and girls and fancy fellers visiting the springs, and a heap of them dance and gamble and drink and carry on scandalous, and a heap of them don't but it all costs money, and our young men haven't got it to spare, and they come home broke and don't lay up a dollar, and they can't marry, for they haven't got anything to marry on, but they flirt around amazing and make a mash and go home and brag about it. Why there are boys in all these towns that are clerking or working for thirty or forty dollars a month, and it takes it all for clothes and buggy rides and excursions, and they are not laying up a dollar, and the old man is kept bowed and hard run to help them along, and it's all wrong, all wrong, and the boys ought to put on the brakes and stop it."

And the good old doctor came down with his cane hard on the brick; and about this time old Uncle Simon Peter came along and took up the subject as the doctor left off and said: "Yes, they have got too many societies, and I used to be as big a fool as anybody and joined everyone that come along—the Masons and Sons of Temperance, and Bible societies, and I don't know how many more, and what, with preaching and traveling and the conference and all the societies I liked to have never got acquainted with my family, for I was out somewhere every night; and one day my wife saw a notice in the newspaper that there was a new society just come for the protection of henpecked husbands, and she called my attention to it and asked if I h dent better join it and run for president; and that put me to thinking and I quit for a while, until it occurred to me not long ago that I could do some good by joining the alliance and helping them to reform the world and save the country, and so I joined, and I've been talking to them about whiskey and tobacco and extravagance and corruption at Washington, but my ideas don't seem to be popular, and they say my views are all right, but they are impracticable. There are $900,0 0,0 0 spent in a year for whiskey, and $800,000,000 for tobacco, and $100,0 0,000 wasted in extravagant salaries, and if the alliance would just come down like an avalanche upon those three things and save that $1,600,000,0.0 a year, all that money would be put into useful and profitable industries, and it would get scattered among the people and make everybody comfortable and happy, and the farmers wouldent need any subtreasury. Why, if they will just scble the whiskey alone and stop every still and all importations of spirits our courts would nearly nigh dry up for want of business, and our jails would be empty and our taxes be reduced 50 or 70 per cent. But the alliance can't see it, for they want a little something for make bites themselves, and the whisky ring is a tremendous power in the nation, and so I have despaired of reforming the people by myself and have concluded to go along and preach the gospel and help straighten up the Lord who made them." And the good old man gave each of us a word in his way.

And then came Bob Unruh, another good man, and a good, industrious citizen, too, and he, too, belongs to the alliance and is desperately in earnest, and he said the bottom was about to drop out of farming as a business, for every thing he raised was below the cost of production. Said he, "Here I've got a carload of wheat right here in town for sale, and all I can get is 77 cents a bushel, and I've kept an account fair and square and it has cost me over eighty cents to raise it, and my cotton is worse than that, and I've worked harder last year and this than I ever did in my life, and you can just look at my hands, and I tell you Major Arp, there is no use in talking, something has got to be done for the farmers—77 cents won't grow a bushel of wheat in this country."

Just then a carpenter came along and said: "Well, I am glad to hear that wheat has come down. I hope now we will get flour a little cheaper. I'm getting mighty tired paying $3 a hundred for flour," and he hurried on to his work. And so, Mr. Editor, I don't know what to do. I would fix it all right if I could. I would arrange matters so that every man could sell high and buy low; but I don't see my way clear, and so, like Uncle Simon Peter, I believe I will give all people my benediction and leave these troubles with the Lord.

But these youngsters don't care a cent about the price of flour nor the third party, nor where the money is to come from. They have about run away with the country. Tomorrow there is to be another baseball match game. They have had three this week, and because I slip round the back way and get in the back ground and look on they say I'm in favor of it, but I ain't. If they would-nt play I wouldent go; but I don't want to see Dalton or Cedartown or Marietta come up here and beat our boys, and so I slip round to do a little hollerin' and tick the boys on. The devil ought not to tread as old man into temptation. They can't play much nohow. They don't hit one ball in ten, but we boys used to knock the old town ball a quarter of a mile, and if we ever missed one were caught out behind sure. And the girls are just as crazy about tennis. They play all the shank of the afternoon, and sometimes don't get back in time to fix the table for supper, and my wife has got to going down town most every evening for a spool of thread or something, and I've just found out the ship over to the tennis court to see the young folks play—next thing I know she will be playing football. She takes rides with the children and says they ought to have some sport while they are young—something to look back to when they get old and full of trouble. "It has been forty years," said she, "since I had any time to enjoy such things, for there was always a baby in the way, and now I am going when I feel like it."

Well, let her go. I don't care. Let her mew her youth, as Milton says. She ought to have a pension right now as a confederate widow; but she is spoiling these children. When I came home from Missouri I inquired for Carl, and she said he was at Chickamauga with the military. "How is that?" said I. "He dident belong to any company." "No," said she, "but he went over to Rome, and Captain Byrd took him in on the tail end of his company, and he borrowed a uniform and I let him go. He has been studying very hard, you know, and needed a rest." Well, I had two grandsons up there—military boys right fresh from Auburn college—and they got into a company, too, and wanted to rest, and so I acquiesced and ruminated, and sang my old song: "Sorrow endureth for a night, but joy cometh in the morning."

Well, it dident cost a cent, for the state footed the bills, and the boys say they had a splendid time—never had as much fun in all their lives. Two of them belled a cow and rode her bar back through the camp one evening, and never got in the guardhouse for it. One had to do double guard duty for two days, and that wasent nothing, they said. A new company from the wiregrass got there one night about ten o'clock, and the Cadets found out they were pretty green and met them at the depot and marched them a mile away and drilled and double-quicked them for two hours just as though they half orders to do it. They eat up all their own rations and stole everybody else's that were not under lock and key. They kept the whole camp in an uproar and I'm afraid my lineal descendants were at the bottom of it. Captain Phil Byrd, of The Hustler, had better mind how he attaches the Arp family to his coat-tail. It has been forty-six years since I helped to take the chapper out of the college bell and hoist a billy goat into the tutor's room, and now the sins of my youth are being vented upon me in the devilment of my children and grandchildren, and the state and the governor and the legislature and my wife are responsible for it. But it's all right, I reckon, and all's well that ends well. "Sorrow endureth for a night, but joy cometh in the morning."

THEY SAW THE PARADE

But Did Not See the Sneak Thief Take the Cash.

A telegram from Sag Harbor, N. Y., says: While the clerks in the Peconic bank were looking at a circus parade Wednesday, a sneak thief entered the bank, pocketed a package of currency containing $8,500 and escaped, leaving no clue to his identity. The clerks had delegated one of their number to care for the bank's valuables while they watched the parade. Curiosity overcome the watcher, and he also went to the window. The thief seized the opportunity and the package of cash at the same time.

THE STEAMER SANK

And Over Two Hundred Souls Went Down with Her.

The steamer City of Pekin, which arrived at San Francisco Thursday night, reports that on July 12th, at 3 o'clock a. m., the steamer Tamee Maru, of Hakodate, while returning from Sutro with 250 laborers on board, came into collision with the steamer Migoshi Maru, off Shimonoseki. The Tamee Maru immediately sank, with loss of 200 persons, drowned and missing. The captain and first officer and sixty laborers reached the shore.

CONDITION OF CROPS

As Bulletined by Weather Bureau for Past Week.

The weather bureau's weekly crop bulletin says: The week was far cooler than usual in all sections east of the Rocky mountains, although the departure from normal temperature has been less than it was during the previous week generally throughout the southern states, while the deficiency in temperature was more marked in the northwest over the spring wheat region. The rainfall during the past week has been largely in excess on the Atlantic coast, the heaviest rains occurring in South Carolina, and along the Alleghany range in Virginia, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Kentucky, where the rainfall ranged from two to four inches.

GENERAL REMARKS.

Arkansas—The rainfall was very badly distributed and some portions of the state are beginning to suffer from drought. Cotton and corn show slight deterioration compared to last week.

Mississippi—Cotton small, but fruiting well. Recent rains assure a good corn crop in the northern counties. The rainfall of the past week was unequally distributed, but enough fell in the past ten days to make conditions favorable.

Virginia—Hay harvesting and threshing retarded by rain. Wheat is yielding less than expected and corn and tobacco are improving, except in the vicinity of Lynchburg, where there was too much rain.

Alabama—Weather conditions generally excellent for cotton, but late corn is not doing so well and is suffering for rain; Irish potatoes unusually fine.

North Carolina—Too much rain for cotton, but all crops continue to improve, especially corn; threshing and haying retarded. A very severe hailstorm in Warren county on the 18th did great damage.

South Carolina—Well-distributed rains were beneficial to crops; cotton shows a marked improvement; corn is in condition and rice is fair. The outlook is much more encouraging.

Tennessee—Favorable conditions have prevailed and the outlook is encouraging. Wheat threshing is nearly completed, and the yield is good. Early corn is about made; tobacco is flourishing; cotton needs rain in the western division.

Texas—Cotton is very promising. In the southwest portion there is some shedding, due to rapid maturing, occasioned by dry, hot weather.

Louisiana—Good growing weather, beneficial to all crops; cotton very promising, and corn is in good condition, and is being rapidly laid by. Rice is heading finely; crops grassy in a few localities.

THE LAST SAD RITES

Over the Corpses of the St. Mande Disaster.

A cablegram from Paris says: Immense crowds of people, estimated at 25,000, gathered Wednesday afternoon at St. Mande to witness the funerals of the victims of the terrible railroad disaster of Sunday last. The crowds were so great that it required the presence of the prefect of the department of the Seine and a strong detachment of troops to keep the route of procession clear. There were twenty-four hearses in black line, which led from the town hall to the cemetery, and thousands of mourners followed the bodies to the grave. One would have imagined that some terrible scourge or ravages of war had suddenly swept away a portion of the inhabitants of St. Mande and its neighborhood. All the people were in mourning. All the houses were draped with emblems, half-masted flags and other signs of general mourning. The entire scene was harrowing in the extreme.

CLEVELAND DENIES

The Report That He Will Make Campaign Speeches.

A Boston, Mass., dispatch says: To a representative of The Herald at Bunzards bay, ex-President Cleveland said, Monday, in reply to inquiries concerning the report that he was going on a speech-making trip in Ohio: "I have not been requested by the Ohio democrats to make speeches in their state during the pending canvass. I do not expect to take part in the campaign there, nor in any other state, as I have never given the slightest intimation of an intention to do so. I am convinced that Governor Campbell and all other fair-minded political friends will understand that if I decline to go upon the stump, there are perfectly good and valid reasons for my action, entirely consistent with a most earnest desire for the success of all the democratic candidates in Ohio and elsewhere."

TALKED WITH WANAMAKER.

A Mobile Delegation Visit the Postmaster General.

A Washington dispatch says: A delegation of gentlemen from Mobile, Ala., who desire that Mobile shall be a shipping point of a postal-aided line of steamers of Central America and other points, had a conference with Postmaster General Wanamaker on the subject Tuesday. The delegation included, among others, Senators Morgan and Pugh and Representative Clark, of Alabama, and A. S. Benn, president of the Commercial club of Mobile; Gaylord B. Clark and Rittenhouse Moore, the last three representing the Commercial club of Mobile. Mr. Wanamaker received them very courteously, and exhibited much interest in what they had to say in behalf of Mobile. They showed very intelligent knowledge of the gulf ports as related to South American commerce. He requested that their application should be made in writing, and promised to take the matter up and do all that he could in justice to proper economy in aid of Mobile's wishes and needs in the premises. As a result of the conference, the delegation will submit to the department in writing, a statement showing the service the people of the city will offer as an inducement to the government to include within the present advertisement, issued by direction of the provision of the postal-aid bill, the proposal for a service from Mobile direct. It is said that the route which the delegation favored provides that vessels shall stop at Tampico, Greytown and Colon.

RYAN JAILED.

Judge Gober Decides that He is in Contempt.

At Atlanta, Ga., Tuesday, Judge Gober remanded Stephen A. Ryan to jail for contempt of court. The specifications of Mr. Ryan's contempt are that he refused to deliver to the receiver appointed to take charge of his store on Whitehall street all the cash assets, or to give a satisfactory account of the same. One hundred and twenty thousand four hundred and ninety dollars and seventy-one cents is the amount of money which Judge Gober says Ryan has in his possession, and which he must deliver to Mr. Charles Kingsberry, the receiver, before he will be released from jail. Ryan's attorneys will enter a bill of exceptions, and the case from now on promises to be an exciting and hotly contested legal battle.

TENNESSEE'S CROPS.

An Epidemic of Hog Cholera Along the Mississippi.

A Nashville dispatch of Wednesday, says: The monthly crop reports, now being received by Commissioner of Agriculture Godwin, shows that cholera is playing havoc with swine in the counties along the Mississippi river. A correspondent at Bartlett, in Shelby county, says 90 per cent of the hogs have been killed, while another at the same postoffice says whole herds have been exterminated. Very discouraging reports also come from Tipton, Lauderdale, Dyer, Lake and Obion. These reports, however, are the exception, as stock in all other counties is generally healthy and in good condition.

INTERNAL REVENUE.

A Preliminary Report of Uncle Sam's Collections.

Acting Commissioner Wilson has made a preliminary report to the secretary of the treasury regarding the operation of the internal revenue bureau during the fiscal year ended June 30th last. The total collections from all sources during the year was $146,035,376, an increase of $3,440,680 as compared with the preceding fiscal year. Collections were as follows: On spirits, $93,335,963, an increase of $1,648,583; tobacco, $29,706,970, decrease, $1,162,799; fermented liquors, $28,565,120, increase, $3,550,593; oleomargarine, $1,077,924, increase, $291,682; miscellaneous, $2,600,087, increase of $106,683.

RUSHING WATERS

Come Down Upon a Nevada Town With Dire Results.

Austin, Nevada, was visited by a cloudburst Wednesday and great damage was done. Waters rushing from the summit of the mountains came down Main street in three waves, carrying everything before it, including boulders weighing over a ton. The city railway was torn from its bed, stabling torn down, and waters rushed suspected from three feet underground. A majority of the business houses were filled with three or four feet of mud. The losses promised the aggregate of a million dollars.

THE Dowager Countess of Shrewsbury is one of the most prominent philanthropists in England.

HENRY W. SLOCUM is said to stand near the head of the roster of surviving war generals of the army.

WHEN ex-Senator Spooner, of Wisconsin, was in Congress, he was the smallest man there in point of physique.

JUSTIN MCCARTHY, the younger, has already written eleven books and seven plays, although he is only thirty years old.

JOHN SHERMAN is the only remaining United States Senator who sat in that body during Hannibal Hamlin's term in its chair.

THE new "Old Prof." Professor Mark W. Harrington, of Michigan University, is a college graduate, an astronomer, and a writer on meteorology.

H. M. FLAGLER, of the Standard Oil Company, travels daily from his home on Long Island Sound to and from his business in New York on a yacht that cost $280,000.

THE oldest ex-Senators of the United States now living are James W. Bradbury, of Maine, and Alpheus Felch, of Michigan, who entered the Senate in December, 1847.

SIR WILLIAM GORDON-CUMMING, of baccarat notoriety, has been elected unanimously, as honorary chief of the Highland Association of Illinois in the place of the late Sir John Macdonald.

CLAUS SPRECKELS, the "Sugar King," has a rosy face framed in a full white beard and luxurious snowy hair, and looks so much like the conventional idea of Santa Claus that no one is surprised at his first name.

THE Duke of Athol, the chieftain of the Murrays of Scotland, adheres to the antique kilts of the Highlands. Once a year he gives a ball, to which the chieftains of all neighboring clans come clad in plaids and accompanied by their pipers.

EX-PRESIDENT MCCOSH, of Princeton, now past eighty years of age, recently preached to an audience of 4000 people in the new Asbury Park auditorium. His voice, though less powerful than in former years, reached to and was distinctly heard in every quarter of the vast assembly.

SENATOR CALVIN BRICE, of Ohio, is a slim-built man of middle height, with a tendency to round-shoulderness. He has a peculiar face. His complexion is dark, and he has a shock of half-curling and not closely-cropped brown hair, deep dark eyes, and a long moustache and pointed beard.

GENERAL MILES inspires respect, apart from his rank, among the soldiers of the Missouri Division of the army by the fact that he is an athlete, and particularly a skilful boxer. He may be found almost every afternoon with the gloves on in the Athenæum gymnasium, in Chicago, and it is popular belief that he could knock out his entire command, taking them one at a time. He is surprisingly quick and agile for his years and keeps in active training.

A Canal With a Tunnel.

Of the building of canals there appears to be no end, and there has just been completed the construction of a canal connecting the lake of Biwa, in the interior of Japan, with Kioto, the ancient capital of the country. This important work was wholly designed by a native Japanese. The lake is the largest in Japan, and the distance traversed by the new canal is thirty-five miles, with a difference in level of 280 feet. Its function is not only to afford a means of communication between Kioto and the interior, but also to irrigate the rice fields on the line of the channel and to supply water power for the city factories. A peculiar feature of the tunnel is the presence of three long tunnels through which the boats are drawn by means of chain traction. On leaving the last tunnel the canal is divided into two branches, one of which is intended for boat traffic, through which the boats are carried on cradles mounted on tracks, drawn by a wire rope, actuated by a motor supplied with water from the other branch. This passes through a small tunnel and is then carried on a masonry aqueduct of fourteen arches to the western suburb of Kioto. It can readily be seen, then, that the Japanese are not very far behind the procession in the practical application of the more important principles of engineering.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Dignified Bull Fighters.

One has to see it to understand the science of these superb men, the bull fighters. They walk with the dignity that princes are supposed to have, in and out of the jaws of death, and may be higher or less calm than just enough to keep them this side of eternity. The little scarlet cloak, their only defensive weapon, and with this alone they hold the infuriated animal to the exact spot where they wish to kill him, and then to kill him, not in any haphazard manner, but in the most elegant way possible.

Chilton county is growing all over.

In Macon, Ga., July 17th, a young man, Clarence C. Stubbs, shot himself dead. A letter told of his trouble, one sentence of it unlocked all his misery: "Whiskey and I cannot live in the same world together." Are such numerous cases like this no message to Christian people, nor any warning to young men?—Alabama Baptist.

A new religious sect has sprung into existence in Spain. One peculiarity of it is that whenever any of the single female members desire to marry any particular man belonging to the sect, all she has to do is to rise up in the meeting and announce the fact. The marriage takes place immediately, whether the man likes it or not. What a religion that would be in a community where old maids are numerous.

Birmingham! well Birmingham is an immense place. She has no counterpart. Nothing is languishing within her limits. Her boom has never exploded and never will. The growth of other mineral cities during the past few years has been wonderful, but that of Birmingham has been marvelous. No other word can express it. While other towns seem to be on the verge of destruction, Birmingham is rushing on under a full pressure of steam. Rushing, pushing and jostling, her people never stop to rest. No people can stand up under such a strain very long, but as fast as one man drops out his place is wanted by a dozen others.—Moulton Advertiser.

Editor Lane of Huntsville, in his editorial correspondence from St. Paul, to the Mercury, pays the following deserved tribute to Hon. W. J. Wood, 3rd Vice President of the L. & N. road.

"W. J. Wood, Vice President of the L. & N. R. R., is the man that the Alabama Press should cherish, he sticks up to the Press and the Alabama Press should always stand firm to its best friend."

Further on Editor Lane, in speaking of the kindness extended them by the local press, says it was simply perfect, although you found the detestible kicker there as you do everywhere. But then they were either politicians, or Eastern yankeys. Of them he says.

"I candidly believe that a genuine flat-footed, bandy-shanked, knocked-kneed, slab-sided, stoop-shouldered, razor-back, Yoe-necked, lantern-jawed, wezil-eyed, long-nosed, bat-eared yankee would kick in heaven if all its blessings and eternal life were offered him by a band of angels."

COMMISSIONER KOLB.

He Announces Himself a Candidate for Governor.

The Age-Herald thus reports the remarks made by Commissioner Kolb at Birmingham, after Sockless Simpson had concluded his remarks:

The Commissioner was received with great applause and began by promising not to make a speech. He referred at once to the political situation. Said as an Alianceman he was proud to be on the stand with Brother Simpson, whose speech this audience, in the main, indorsed, and so did he. As for himself he was a democrat, had always been, and now sought the democratic nomination for Governor of Alabama. He had won the nomination once and been cheated out of it. He did not sulk or talk bolting, but went into the rank and file and helped elect a ticket. All over the state he was advising the Alliance people, who are true Democrats, to follow out the suggestions of the state committee, organize clubs and control them.

He endorsed the Ocala platform and favored every provision in it. No Alliancesman was wedded to the sub-Treasury measure. We merely ask that it won't give us relief, to give a plan that will. We want cheaper money and must have it. But any will suit us that will answer the plan that is legiti-

[illegible] by reading a portion of Watterson speech on the general subject of reform and the Alliance, and by promising to come back and go over the whole financial question at a latter day.

It is rallying to all that social, financial and political atmosphere demand earnest, thoughtful attention and decided action.

It is a time when the ultimate purpose is seen beyond the chaos which lies between the evil and the remedy.

United in purpose, but divided in plans, our people are becoming estranged. All is confusion, bickering, crimination and recrimination.

It seems rather an antagonism of men than a clash of principles. Men in many instances are grasping at an ephemeral reputation, the glamour of office and the spoils of position without a comprehension of the evils which beset us and without any apprehension of those towards which we may be heading. One side, in a spirit of conservatism, prefers to endure the evils we have, rather than fly to those we know not of, while the other, in a spirit of unrest, vigorously demands a certain policy, or, the vagary, "something better."

The lethargy of the one and the almost passionate unrest of the other are alike to be condemned. The very uncertainty of the situation and the vagueness of our plans counsels to be cautious. Activity is necessary, but it must proceed from the wisdom of unprejudiced council. Rashness will accomplish no good.

In the proper unimpassioned discussion of the situation by men of ability, catholic in their views, untrammelled by interests of preferment of office, we may be educated to a plane whence we may see and intelligently grasp the plan of relief.

The white people of Alabama are one in blood, they are one in interests.

There is nothing in our state organism which is burdensome upon one vocation, but that is burdensome upon all; there is nothing which is salutary to one that is not salutary to all. Our greatest burdens and evils are national in their scope. The money power holds on with strangling grip to a struggling, poverty-stricken people. The masses know not any method of relief; and with the vulture's quick scent, fools and demagogues are hastening to a feast of ruin. It is a time for sensible men to be calm, studious and watchful. Be careful and considerate in reaching conclusions, and stand by honest convictions intelligently and dispassionately conceived.

Be not hasty in cutting aloose from the moorings which have been the security of the past.

Beware of policy and policy men. Beware of men who are constantly changing their politics—they are demagogues and place-seekers.

Beware of suddenly popular waves of political sentiment, lest they strand you upon the breakers.

The present excitement must and will subside. Our people must and will stand. Be not led astray. Harmony means safety; discord means peril. Beware!—Talladega Home.

Democracy and the Farmers.

Here is the sturdy fashion in which Henry Watterson talks about Democracy and its relation to the farmers. Mr. Watterson says in the Courier-Journal.

"The democratic party offers the agricultural classes all the relief that is practicable, all that is needed to restore their lost prosperity. It refuses to lend itself to visionary schemes for giving everything to everybody, but it will give to all justice and equal opportunities to better their condition. The farmers of this country as a class, want nothing but what is right; if they wanted more, they could not get it.

The idea of a great farmers' party that will run everything for the exclusive benefit of farmers is an absurdity, since the farmers form but about three-eights of the population. It is a mirage conjured up to lure the farmers to destruction. Their strength lies in co-operation with other classes that have interests in common with them.

It has already been demonstrated that a farmers' party cannot be built up on such issues as the Sub-Treasury and land-loan demands. The Alliances are already breaking away from those impracticable schemes. The true farmers' party is the Democratic party, and the interests of agriculture will be promoted by putting that party in control of the government at the earliest moment possible.

Many Persons are broken down from overwork or household cares. Brown's Iron Bitters Rebuilds the system, aids digestion, removes causes of kidney and liver maladies. Test the genuine.

Chilton county is growing all over.

In Macon, Ga., July 17th, a young man, Clarence C. Stubbs, shot himself dead. A letter told of his trouble, one sentence of it unlocked all his misery: "Whiskey and I cannot live in the same world together." Are such numerous cases like this no message to Christian people, nor any warning to young men?—Alabama Baptist.

A new religious sect has sprung into existence in Spain. One peculiarity of it is that whenever any of the single female members desire to marry any particular man belonging to the sect, all she has to do is to rise up in the meeting and announce the fact. The marriage takes place immediately, whether the man likes it or not. What a religion that would be in a community where old maids are numerous.

Birmingham! well Birmingham is an immense place. She has no counterpart. Nothing is languishing within her limits. Her boom has never exploded and never will. The growth of other mineral cities during the past few years has been wonderful, but that of Birmingham has been marvelous. No other word can express it. While other towns seem to be on the verge of destruction, Birmingham is rushing on under a full pressure of steam. Rushing, pushing and jostling, her people never stop to rest. No people can stand up under such a strain very long, but as fast as one man drops out his place is wanted by a dozen others.—Moulton Advertiser.

Editor Lane of Huntsville, in his editorial correspondence from St. Paul, to the Mercury, pays the following deserved tribute to Hon. W. J. Wood, 3rd Vice President of the L. & N. road.

"W. J. Wood, Vice-President of the L. & N. R. R., is the man that the Alabama Press should cherish, he sticks up to the Press and the Alabama Press should always stand firm to its best friend."

Further on Editor Lane, in speaking of the kindness extended them by the local press, says it was simply perfect, although you found the detestible kicker there as you do everywhere. But then they were either politicians, or Eastern yankeys. Of them he says.

"I candidly believe that a genuine flat-footed, bandy-shanked, knocked-kneed, slab-sided, stoop-shouldered, razor-back, Yoe-necked, lantern-jawed, wezil-eyed, long-nosed, bat-eared yankee would kick in heaven if all its blessings and eternal life were offered him by a band of angels."

COMMISSIONER KOLB.

He Announces Himself a Candidate for Governor.

The Commissioner was received with great applause and began by promising not to make a speech. He referred at once to the political situation. Said as an Allianceman he was proud to be on the stand with Brother Simpson, whose speech this audience, in the main, indorsed, and so did he. As for himself he was a democrat, had always been, and now sought the democratic nomination for Governor of Alabama. He had won the nomination once and been cheated out of it. He did not sulk or talk bolting, but went into the rank and file and helped elect a ticket. All over the state he was advising the Alliance people, who are also Democrats, to follow out the suggestions of the state committee, organize clubs and control them.

He read the Ocala platform and indorsed every provision in it. An Allianceman was wedded to the principle of any measure. We merely say this won't give us relief, but give a plan that will. We want more and cheaper money and must have it. But any will suit us that will carry the plan that is legitimate.

He closed by reading a portion of Watterson's speech on the general subject of reform and the Alliance, and by promising to come back and go over the whole situation at a latter day.

It is a time when the brilliant purpose is seen beyond the chaos which lies between the evil and the remedy.

United in purpose, but divided in plans, our people are becoming estranged. All is confusion, bickering, crimination and recrimination.

It seems rather an antagonism of men than a clash of principles. Men in many instances are grasping at an ephemeral reputation, the glamour of office and the spoils of position without a comprehension of the evils which beset us and without any apprehension of those towards which we may be heading. One side, in a spirit of conservatism, prefers to endure the evils we have, rather than fly to those we know not of, while the other, in a spirit of unrest, vigorously demands a certain policy, or, the vagary, "something better."

The lethargy of the one and the almost passionate unrest of the other are alike to be condemned. The very uncertainty of the situation and the vagueness of our plans counsels to be cautious. Activity is necessary, but it must proceed from the wisdom of unprejudiced council. Rashness will accomplish no good.

Rev. Dr. [illegible] of Montgomery, many gentlemen failed to stand on the corridor in connection therewith which happened while I was in that city last week. From far off Poland there came to this country years ago a man belonging to the bottom round of Jacob's ladder. He brought his wife with him, and they settled at Demopolis. As the years came and went his little household grew in number, and by hard work the father and husband had managed to save a few dollars each month until he had accumulated quite a snug little sum, all of which was deposited with Moses Brothers. When news came to the Polander that the bank in which his all had been placed, had failed, he did not at first seem to fully comprehend the meaning. But after awhile it dawned upon him. He shut up his house in Demopolis, gathered together his wife and seven little ones and took the train for Montgomery. Arriving there, the household repaired to the place of business of Moses Brothers. A rap on the door was reponded to, and the nine persons entered. The Polander spoke a few words hastily to the Janitor. Those words were: "Tell the Mister Moses they have taken all my money, and now I bring them my wife and children. They may have them too. I am not able to provide for them." And he hastily departed, and had not been found up to the time I left Montgomery."

Rev. Smith, the Episcopal minister will have services here the second Sunday of every month hereafter.

Mr. C. T. Ousley, of Dixie, attended county court here Monday, and left a few dollars at this office. Thanks.

Rev. I. F. Smith, Rector, will hold services at the Episcopal Church on next Sunday, August the 9th.

We are getting many new subscribers, and now is the time to subscribe. There is going to be a hurrah time in politics next year.

Our Stanton correspondent writes up in advance the grand barbecue which will come off at Clanton on the 8th of August, next Saturday.

A correspondent from Plantersville sends a communication without giving the author's name and we cannot publish it for that reason.

Dr. A. M. Rambo dentist, will visit Clanton professionally on the 11th of August. Parties needing work in his line can find him at this office.

Rev. R. M. Hunter assisted by Rev. Adams, of Woodlawn, will hold a protracted meeting at the Baptist Church the third week in this month.

Mr. T. J. Boyd an old time citizen of this place, but more recently of Texas, is again in Clanton and is engaged in building Dr. Sam Johnson's new residence.

It is an ill wind that blows nobody good. The price of cotton has already jumped up since the heavy rains, the rust and worms have cut off the crop some.

The reason things go wrong so often in this world is that men won't take women's advice. If you don't believe this at first go and ask the women—that's all.

The VIEW is under obligations to its good lady friend, Mrs. Willis Lowe, for a basket of excellent apples. They show that our county is capable of producing fine apples.

Rev. I. F. Smith, Rector of the Episcopal Church at Calera, will conduct the funeral services of Mrs. W. H. Aldridge at Calera on Thursday.

The VIEW acknowledges the receipt of the First Annual Catalogue of the East Alabama Athenæum showing the new building to be erected. An enrollment of a 198 pupils, the first year, is indeed an encouraging beginning. Parents wishing to send their daughters off to receive a finished education cannot do better than to entrust them to Major Palmer.

In another column will be found the law card of F. B. Baldwin, Esq., of Verbena. Mr. Baldwin is a son of Col. B. J. Baldwin, and is of a family noted for eminence in professional capacity. He attended the law schools of Washington and Lee University and the University of Alabama, and is a young man whose liberal mental endowments should insure success in his chosen profession.

The "Clanton Ford" people say they are going to have one of the biggest barbecues on the 8th day of August ever known in this section of the country. They further state it is not to be any Farmers' Alliance or Knights of Labor, neither a political affair, but simply a square out-and-out old-fashion "barbecue," and they want it perfectly understood that every white man, woman and child that can and will come are cordially invited, and to rest assured that no one shall go away hungry. Mr. W. F. Roebuck is one of the barbecue managers and at his request this invitation is extended.

It Is Thus and So.

Of what part of a society of monks can Clanton boast? The head—an Abbott.

Why should some people in Clanton advocate a monarchial government? Because they are Dukes.

Why is it that one of our best young men was never deeply in love? Because he was always just Sartor.

What gentleman in town reminds one of the spinning wheels and winding blades of ante bellum days? Hanks.

Why should a certain young lady be anxious for the coming of Yule-tide? She likes to see Holly around.

In what respect is one of our clever townsmen like Adam? He is Fore-she.

Why is one of our preachers like one of the Bible men of old? He is a mighty Hunter.

In what respect is one of our gallant young men like a mule? He is a noted Kicker.

Why are not all men Samsons? Some are John's son's, some are Tom's son's, some are Robin's sons, and others are other people's sons.

Stanton Notes.

Mrs. W. W. Little and Mrs. Richard Coe after an absence of 5 weeks in the city of Boston, Mass., reached home yesterday morning.

Hon. Wm. F. Roebuck desires that the white inhabitants of Chilton county and other counties should know that on the 8th day of August next the people of Clanton Ford will have one of the biggest barbecues at that place ever known in these parts. Mr. Roebuck states that this is to be no Farmers' Alliance affair, neither a Knight of Labor nor a political "inter-tain-ment," but simply an old fashioned, square out and out barbecue. He also wishes to impress it upon everyone that they are heartily, cordially invited to attend and that they will surely be expected and ample provisions will be made for all. In addition to this invitation $25 cash will be paid to any person or persons who can prove that they went away from the barbecue hungry on account of scarcity of eatables.

Mr. Roebuck says he and other staunch men like himself are going to put their shoulders to the wheel and revolutionize barbecues and the memorable event will go down unto posterity for centuries to come.

Mr. Roebuck swears by the sun, moon, stars and all other visible objects that the said barbecue shall be a grand success. He further states that all the stumps and elevations on the grounds, are open and free to anybody desiring to shoot off their mouths, provided they take an oath, promising that they will leave out politics, Farmer's Alliance and Knights of Labor discussions. Should the speakers consume more than one day, the barbecue will be protracted until their remarks have been concluded.

General tidiness not only pays on its own account, because to be tidy is to be economical.

If everybody knew what one said of another, there would not be four friends in the world.

There probably never was a man so good that he did not hope in his heart that his successor would be a failure.

To be always intending to lead a new life, but never find time to set about it, is as if a man should put off eating and drinking from one day to another, until he is starved and destroyed.

Some people scorn to be taught, others are ashamed of it, as they would be of going to school when they are old; but it is never too late to learn what it is always necessary to know. And it is no shame to learn so long as we are ignorant—that is to say, so long as we live.

Register's Notice.

No. 176.

The State of Alabama, Chilton County. In Chancery at Clanton, Northeastern Chancery District, Northeastern Chancery Division.

Mary Eliza Turner vs. Harrison Turner.

In this cause it is made to appear to the Register, by the affidavit of [illegible] E. Turner that the defendant, Harrison Turner, defendant to a bill of complaint on file in the chancery court of the above named district and division, is a non-resident of the State of Alabama, and to the best of affiant's knowledge, information and belief, said defendant is over the age of twenty-one years, that his postoffice and residence are unknown to affiant. It is therefore ordered by the Register, that publication be made in the CHILTON VIEW, a newspaper published in the town of Clanton once a week, for four consecutive weeks, requiring him, the said Harrison Turner, to plead, answer or demur to the bill of complaint in this cause, by the first Monday in September, 1891, or in default thereof, a decree pro confesso will be taken against him.

Done at office in Clanton, this 1st day of August, 1891.

...Alliance Meeting, Susquehanna, Pennsylvania.

...ANCE MEETING.

Under the above heading the Progress-ive Farmer comes boldly to the front and says:

"The partisan press and the politicians who are opposed to the Alliance are extremely anxious to force the order into false positions. They assert persistently that the sub-treasury bill is the ultimatum of the Alliance, when they well know that in every instance where it has been made the issue, it has been forced on us. And we may remark that in every such case the sub-treasury has come out victorious. It is now being asserted that President Polk makes the sub-treasury paramount to all other questions. The politicians of the country have been deceiving and side-tracking the people on these false ideas for a quarter of a century, but they can do it no longer.

...THE WHEAT COMBINE.

H. W. Ayer, secretary to President Polk, of the Farmers' Alliance, and manager of the Reform Press Bureau, which is also known as the Alliance Press Bureau in Washington, is reported as saying that the work of sending out circulars designed to show the farmers of the country that it was to their advantage to hold back the wheat crop was actively proceeding in Washington as well as in St. Paul, Minn., which was chosen one of the seats of operation because of its location in the great wheat belt. Mr. Ayer said there have already been 400,000 of these circulars sent out from Washington, and will continue to be sent out until more than a million circulars altogether are issued. The circular, he said, will also be published with which the bureau is connected. He remarked that he couldn't say, of course, that it was the circular which had brought about the result, but he had noticed in a recent market report, that as a matter of fact the actual movement of wheat was 140 carloads less per day than had been estimated. Mr. Ayre also stated that the information that the issue of such a circular by alliancemen in contemplation became public prematurely, when the circular in course of preparation was published in the newspapers. The final decision to issue the circular had not at that time been reached, and many leading alliancemen were unaware of it, but it has since been finally determined upon. He explained that the executive committee of the alliance had not acted on this matter, and that by the circular no order was given alliancemen to hold back their crop, this being contrary to the methods of the alliance. What is done by this circular is to give farmers information as to the facts in regard to the world's wheat crop, with the suggestion that wheat some weeks later than the present time will bring a better price.

The Western New York Farmer, (Arcade) says in regard to the Wyoming Farmers' Alliance meeting: "The 2,000 members of the Order in this county have declared that the Alliance principles control the office seek the man, shall be the principle observed in the nomination of all candidates. They have no use for office-seekers and look upon all who seek office with suspicion. They want men to represent them in the Assembly, Senate, and in other places of official trust, who will earn his salary and be true to those who employ and pay him as a public servant, and they propose to have such men if neither party see fit to nominate him. Their action in convention conveys no uncertain sound. It is brief, but it is awfully plain, and fearfully in earnest. It admonishes members to attend their party caucuses and work for pure and honest men, as they know to be in harmony with Alliance demands. The executive committee is directed to submit these pledges to every nominee and failing to secure the public pledges of their support to these demands, he is instructed to call a county Alliance meeting. The Alliance is strictly secret and non-partisan, but a political convention composed of Alliance membership, to place in the field candidates who are in harmony with the Alliance platforms. There is no room for uncertain or indefinite about it."

The Knights of Labor (Philadelphia) says: "The enemies of the Alliance point to the fact that when they first enter politics they appear like a fatality, and that upon the sub-treasury plan they think this the most powerful point in the Alliance platform, one after another their pickets while they fail to realize that, if the sub-treasury plan is not invulnerable, at any rate it has not yet forged the weapon to defeat it. So far all the opposition to the sub-treasury plan have been unsuccessful in making converts, and in convincing those who have faith of those who have studied it. Essentially it is a war in vogue in the days of Pennsylvania before the days of which Edmund Burke, the Edmund Burke of the British Farmer (Jersey City, N. J.) says: "What rights have the farmers and working men that millionaire and other corporations respect? None. Yet when the paid attorneys of these corporations come around and tell the people how to vote, some farmers are fools enough to believe them. Never thinking that they are talking for the men and corporations that pay them for their services."

Thirty-four county Alliances have spoken out in their July meetings, clearly, and unequivocally for the Ocala demands and the sub-treasury. Not one has been heard from that opposes. There never was more unanimity on any question presented to Alliancemen.

All true Alliancemen stick to the Alliance as long as it works to carry out the principles of the order. All traitors fly the track.

BAD EGGS USED

To Break up One of Sam Jones' Meetings.

While preaching to a large audience at Houston, Tex., Wednesday night, and when in the middle of his discourse, some people on the outside turned out the lights and rotten egged Rev. Sam Jones and his audience, most of whom were ladies. There is great indignation felt, and trouble may ensue.

Another and later dispatch says: The city was never so shaken up as it was Thursday over the cowardly assault made upon Rev. Sam P. Jones Wednesday night. When Mr. Jones ascended the stand at the Hutchens park pavilion he had before him a large audience, most of whom were ladies. When he had reached the middle of his address the lights were suddenly extinguished. Eggs flew in all directions, striking the ladies as well as the speaker. The scene which followed beggars description. When quiet was restored, Mr. Jones resumed and finished his lecture. The feud which thus developed owes its origin to a previous visit of Mr. Jones, when he denounced the lawless element. These toughs promised to make it warm for the preacher whenever he should return, with the result stated. John Raeseley, Gus Sauter and several others engaged in the liquor business have been arrested. They will be punished to the extent of the law.

TENNESSEE'S LEGISLATURE

Will Convene in Extra Session in Nashville, August 17th.

A Nashville dispatch of Wednesday says: The penitentiary question in all its phases will be referred to the legislature when it assembles in extra session. In an interview Governor Buchanan stated that he had decided to convene the legislature August 17th at noon. He said he would refer the whole question of removal of the penitentiary from the city of Nashville and the erection of new buildings, the regulation of the penitentiary, its management by lessees and the regulation of convict labor, in order that the legislature might have the fullest scope in acting in the matter. The governor said he was heartily in favor of taking definite steps towards finally doing away with the whole lease system. He did not know that the legislature had the power to cancel the present lease contract, but he was in favor of going as far as could be done constitutionally. He would also request the legislature to define and increase the power of the governor in calling out the militia to suppress riots. The governor has also decided to include the question of making an appropriation for the world's fair in his call, and will heartily recommend the same in his message.

NO RECIPROCITY

Between the United States and Canada.

A dispatch from Ottawa, Ont., states that on Wednesday the house of commons divided on Sir Richard Cartwright's amendment to Mr. Foster's motion to go into committee to consider resolutions containing tariff changes, an amendment which sets forth "that the government should forthwith reduce all duties on articles of prime necessity, and more particularly on those most generally consumed by artisans, fishermen, miners and farmers, and further, that the negotiations, which the house has been informed are to be opened in Washington in October, should be conducted on the basis of the most extended reciprocal trade between Canada and the United States in manufactured as well as natural products," was defeated. The vote stood: ayes, 88; nays, 114.

OUT OF PRISON.

O'Brien and Dillon Released from Jail.

A cablegram from Dublin says: William O'Brien and John Dillon, Irish members of parliament who have been undergoing sentence of six months' imprisonment for inciting tenants of the Smith Barry estate, at Tipperary, to resist the payment of rents, were released from Galway jail Thursday morning. They seemed to be enjoying perfect health. Large crowds of people gathered outside the jail long before the hour set for deliverance, and when the prisoners appeared they were greeted with loud shouts of "Stick to Parnell!" These shouts, however, were intermixed with others equally loud, "Down with Parnell!" A deputation composed of tenant farmers presented them with several addresses of congratulation upon their release from prison.

A TRUST COMPANY

To Manipulate the Assets of the Moses' Bank.

A Montgomery dispatch of Tuesday, says: The assignees of Moses's bank, which assigned July 6th, have filed a schedule of assets of the late firm. The assignees make no estimate of value, but the amount is placed nominally at $3,000,000, which consists largely of stocks, bonds, real estate and lands distributed in various sections of Alabama. The liabilities are placed at $1,100,000. The creditors now propose to form a trust company, all to take shares to the amount of their claims, and the plan is thought to be a feasible one and likely to result in securing the holders of claims against him. There has been no other financial trouble on account of the failure of this bank. Other banks have not been in the least affected, and business is going along as usual.

Burning an Epitaph of Daily Happenings Here and There.

Sylvester Young, cashier at Louisville, Ky., of the western division of the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad, absconded Friday with $30,000 in cash.

A small boiler used in the repair shops of the Hill City oil mill, at Vicksburg, Miss., exploded Tuesday, fatally injuring Engineer Albert Spier and Fireman Albert Fisher.

A waterspout on Friday flooded the lower part of West Point, Miss. Railroad tracks in bottom lands were submerged with several inches of water, and crops have suffered to a great extent.

Between 11 and 12 o'clock, Thursday night, in Suffolk, Va., John P. Epps, manager of the Western Union Telegraph Company at that place, was shot from ambush and killed by some unknown person.

Four convicts in the military prison at Fort Leavenworth escaped Tuesday by tunneling under the prison. One of the four was Baseball Pitcher Lucas, who made his third successful attempt to escape since his incarceration some months ago.

A fire early Thursday morning at Branford, Fla., burned two large stores and five other buildings. There was no fire department, and at the time it looked as if the whole village would be destroyed. The fire was set by burglars to cover up their tracks.

A Raleigh dispatch of Friday says: In compliance with the request of the adjutant general of South Carolina, Governor Holt has granted a permit to the Newberry Rifles to enter North Carolina armed and equipped. The corps is going into camp at Hendersonville.

Commencing August 1st, the business men of Chattanooga will be furnished with a fast freight line from New York. The route is via the Pennsylvania and Queen and Cresent systems, and is all rail, and the only fast freight all rail line Chattanooga business enjoys.

An Opelika, Ala., dispatch of Friday states that the difference between the Western Railroad of Alabama and the Savannah and Western relative to the new passenger depot have been adjusted, and the depots will be consolidated at once, much to the convenience of the traveling public.

Three negro men were terribly mangled by the premature explosion of a blast at Goodletsville, Tenn., Thursday afternoon. They were engaged in blowing out a cistern. Dave Carter's eyes were put out and one hand was blown off; his injuries are fatal. Eli Fides and Robert Gee were badly burned and lacerated, but may recover.

A Columbia, S. C., dispatch of Thursday says: The committee appointed at the last meeting of the board of trustees of the South Carolina college, to make recommendations for a president of that institution, will recommend the election of Dr. James Woodrow, of Columbia, S. C., for that position. The board of trustees will meet on August 5th to receive recommendations.

There was a largely attended meeting of the creditors of the Nashville Savings-bank at Nashville, Tenn., Wednesday night, at which it was proposed to settle on the following terms: Twelve and one-half per cent in cash, and 37½ per cent to be paid as soon as certain real estate can be sold. The remaining 50 per cent is to be secured by coal and iron stocks that are now very low, but sure to advance sufficiently to pay this 50 per cent.

At Chattanooga, Tenn., Thursday morning, John J. Irvine, colored, ex-circuit court clerk filed a bill in chancery against H. N. Willis, E. F. Horn, E. F. Hoyt, and other publishers of The Observer, the official organ of the colored people of Chattanooga. The bill is filed to collect a debt of $350, and attaches the press and outfit of the Observer, as well as enjoining the paper from publication to the injury of the complainant.

A Richmond dispatch says: John N. Hopkins, ex-member of the legislature from Henrico county, Va., was run over and killed by a passenger train Thurday evening on the James river division of the Richmond and Alleghany railroad, about one mile from the city. A heavy rain was falling at the time of the accident. He had an umbrella raised over him, and being an old man, the train was on him before he was aware of it.

A Chattanooga dispatch of Thursday says: It is not true that the banking firm of F. R. Pemberton & Co., of this city, has failed or are embarrassed, as has been reported in a telegram sent over the country, and especially to Philadelphia, where the banking firm has large connections. The members of the banking firm are largely interested in the Kensington Land company, which seems involved in some financial trouble, and the stories in circulation affecting the banking firm have arisen from this cause.

A Bristol, Tenn., dispatch of Wednesday says: What promises to be the most sensational trial that ever occurred in East Tennessee or West Virginia is now in progress at Abingdon, Va. It is the case of the commonwealth against Dr. J. A. P. Baker who was indicted several weeks ago for murdering his wife by poison, in order that he might live with Mrs. Gilmer, the wife of a prominent Washington county man. One hundred witnesses have been sworn and it is predicted that the trial will continue from ten days to two weeks, while legal talent is arrayed on both sides.

HIS "DUPES" CASHED

And Samuel Sands Passes Over the River.

Samuel Sands died at Baltimore, Md., Tuesday, in his ninety-second year. For a long time he had probably been the oldest living printer, being in uninterrupted service as a printer, editor or publisher since his apprenticeship began, nearly a century ago. He was the publisher of The American Farmer, the first agricultural paper started in this country. For a number of years he published The Morning Chronicle, a daily issued at Baltimore before the era of telegraphs and steam presses. In 1836 he published The Freemsin's Banner, advocating the election of General William Henry Harrison, and afterward other political and literary papers. He was a strenuous whig, and for many years secretary of the whig state central committee, but never held or ran for any public office. During the war he was an unconditional union man, and has since been a republican. While an apprentice boy he set in type the manuscript of the "Star Spangled Banner."

"German Syrup"

A Cough and Croup Medicine.

For children a medicine should be absolutely reliable. A mother must be able to pin her faith to it as to her Bible. It must contain nothing violent, uncertain, or dangerous. It must be standard in material and manufacture. It must be plain and simple to administer; easy and pleasant to take. The child must like it. It must be prompt in action, giving immediate relief, as childrens' troubles come quick, grow fast, and end fatally or otherwise in a very short time. It must not only relieve quick but bring them around quick, as children chafe and fret and spoil their constitutions under long confinement. It must do its work in moderate doses. A large quantity of medicine in a child is not desirable. It must not interfere with the child's spirits, appetite or general health. These things suit old as well as young folks, and make Boschee's German Syrup the favorite family medicine.

Nothing Else Will Do It.

We have volumes of evidence to prove that S. S. S. is the only permanent cure for contagious Blood Taint.

I suffered for five years with the worst form of blood poison, during which time I was attended by the best physicians I could find, and tried numbers of proprietary medicines without any beneficial results. I continued to grow worse all this time, until my whole system was destroyed by the vile disease, my tongue and throat having great holes caused by it. I then commenced taking Swift's Specific (S.S.S.), and in a few months I was entirely cured, and to this great medicine do I attribute my recovery. This was over two years ago, and I have had no return or any effects of the disease since, and my skin is to-day as smooth as anybody's.—William Bowers, Covington, O.

his limbs stiffened, his teeth
broken and his savage nature toned down by imprisonment and the sight of humanity until he will scarcely snarl at the cane thrust in to stir him up. This one was lithe, supple, vigilant—a combination of strength and fierceness not possessed even by the tiger. Disease or accident had blinded him, but he possessed every other power Nature gives to the dreaded beast. Instinct taught him the lay of the ground. He may have passed over it a thousand times.

Just so far to the east.

Just so far to the west.

A large stone is passed to the right.

A large tree is passed to the left.

Down by a ledge of rocks and wheel about, east to where the thicket begins, and then wheel again.

Grace—lithences—strength—death! The lower jaw is down, and I have a fine view of the fangs which would rend the hide of a horse. At every footstep the terrible claws clutch and grate—claws which would sink to the bone of a man's leg and then strip the quivering flesh off in bloody fragments.

There is a curious fascination in watching the beast as he takes his promenade. I forget my pains as I rejoice over his blindness. Had he been possessed of his erstwhile vision—aye, could he but see ever so little, he would spring upon me, fasten those long, yellow fangs into my throat, and in thirty seconds all would be over. But he is blind. He cannot discover my presence if I remain quiet.

Heaven save me!

A shift of the wind, which here circles and eddies about, has carried him the scent. He stops midway in his promenade, rears up and sniffs the air with savage growl, and my heart beats so that it seems as if he must surely hear it and follow the sound until his hot breath is on my face.

Sniff! Sniff! Growl! To the right—to the left—straight ahead!

There! He's lost it as the wind eddies about, and now he stands stock still and utters a continuous growl as he waits to catch it again. No, not like a statue. His long tail sweeps the ground in a half circle and his ears work swiftly back and forth. Blind death waiting to rend and bite and tear and kill!

The scent again! He rears up, whirls about three or four times as if on a pivot, and now he points full at me! A tapeline fifteen feet long would cover the ground between us—between where I lie helpless and he crouches down for a spring. If those sightless eyes could be restored, how they would glint and glitter and blaze!

"Growl! Growl! U-r-r-r-r-r!"

There's something in the sound which chills my blood—a menace—a warning of what is to come, which bids me shut my eyes and utter a last prayer. Why does he hesitate? What delays his spring? Ah! the wind has shifted again, and now his infirmity reasons against his natural ferocity. He has been blind for a year or two, perhaps. He has never left the cave except to move up and down over that one route. If he leaves it—if he springs at me—he may fall over a cliff for all he can tell. Had the scent held a moment longer he might have attacked, but now the breeze freshens up, the leaves around him are blown hither and yon, and seeming to argue that his quarry had passed on and was out of his reach. Blind Death crept back to his cave and entered it with mutterings of savage disappointment.

Well for me that his mate was not at home and that he did not return until I had managed to drag myself out of the neighborhood and secure assistance to reach camp. Had there been eyes to see me Blind Death might now be sleeping by crushed

Father of Sunday-Schools.

Robert Raikes has the credit of having originated the modern Sunday-schools; but such schools existed centuries before Raikes, in 1781, gathered poor children from the street in Gloucester, England, and employed female teachers at a shilling a day for their instruction. The earliest recorded Sunday-schools were the schools of the Catechumens, organized, according to Tertullian, in the year 180, though less formal instruction of Christian children and novitiates prevailed earlier. These schools flourished until the fifth century. In 1527 Martin Luther established Sunday-schools in Wittenberg for the instruction of children who could not attend the day schools. In 1560 John Knox inaugurated them in Scotland. In 1580 Archbishop Borromeo of Milan established a system of Sunday-schools throughout his diocese, and about the same time there were similar schools in France and the Netherlands. In the seventeenth century the clergy at stated times catechised the children in some parishes in England; and Joseph Alleine, author of the "Alarm," opened a Sunday-school in 1668. In Robert Raikes' Sunday-schools the children were taught from 10 o'clock a. m. to 12 o'clock; then after an hour's recess read a lesson and went to church. After church they repeated the catechism until after 5 p. m., and were then told to go quietly home. Raikes published an account of his schools in 1783, and other schools upon his plan were soon started in the principal towns of England. Scotland had similar schools as early as 1782, and they were introduced into Ireland in 1785. Bishop Asbury established one in Hanover, Va., in 1786, and Bishop White one in Philadelphia in 1791. The change from paid to volunteer teachers is said to have been made by the Methodists at Bolton, England, about 1786.—[St. Louis Republic.

Heroic Action of a Poor Man.

An elderly and matronly-appearing woman stopped at a corner fruit stand last evening and purchased a pound of figs.

"Something for the children," she said to the vender, as if to apologize for indulging in such delicacies.

Before she had reached the opposite side of the street the woman was overtaken by a man who would have been genteel looking but for his general appearance of seediness. He was evidently not on good terms with the world.

"Beg pardon, madam," he said politely, as he laid one hand gently on the lady's shoulder, "but did you not just purchase some figs at yonder fruit stand?"

"I did," answered the old lady, wonderingly.

"Are you aware of the prevailing weakness of that man's figs?"

"No."

"Ah, I thought not. Then I'll tell you. It is worms. The fruit you have purchased is fairly alive with bacteria."

"You don't say!" exclaimed the woman, almost ready to drop the package.

"Yes. I know it. I'm collecting evidence against the Dago. I need just such a purchase as you have made to complete my chain of evidence. Let me take that and confront him with his perfidy. Thanks! Watch the papers tomorrow for news of his arrest."

And while the innocent old lady stood on the corner in quite unexpected embarrassment, the

COLONEL MARK HARDIN

Tells a Stunning Story to Bill Arp.

He Has Crossed Continents, Skirted Mountains, Looked Down Into Yawning Chasms and Destroyed Distance.

As iron sharpeneth iron, so a man's face sharpeneth the face of his friend. How it shortens the miles to travel with a companion who has something to talk about and knows how to talk it. I came with one yesterday from Atlanta. The day was hot and the dust and cinders disagreeable, but the minutes and the miles flew by and I was home before I knew it. The other day I found good company on the train, for it was Mark Hardin, the ancient and modern clerk of the house of representatives, and I soon got him on the trail of his late travels to the Pacific coast and the new state of Washington. A man who has not traveled some knows but little of what is going on in the world. He can't get it from reading history, and there are but few travelers who can tell what they have seen and make it interesting. But Mark can, and I could listen to him all day on a train. I had been traveling some myself, and was narrating as how I had been away out to Kansas City and saw them killing cattle and hogs, and how it seemed to me I had gotten almost to the jumping off place, and so forth, when Mark took off his coat and squared himself for business, and bit off his tobacco and said: "Well, yes; Kansas City does seem a good ways off, and I used to think it was, but not long ago I took a notion to peruse this western hemisphere, and I started out from Atlanta with a friend and by the time we got to Kansas City we had traveled a thousand miles and felt like we must be about half way, and so we stopped over a day and blowed around and rested and then took a fresh start for the Pacific. Well, sir, they pinned us up in a vestibule train, and took enough provisions aboard to feed an army, and they fastened on the kitchen and the cooks, and the dining room, and parlors and reading rooms, and a library and a saloon and everything else but a carriage and horses, and away we went over plains and valleys, and hills and mountains at thirty-five miles an hour for 1,740 miles, without stopping anywhere, and didn't stop at all for 500 miles at a stretch."

"How about coal and water?" said I.

"Blamed if I know," said Mark. "Might have stopped while we were asleep, but I never saw any. Don't need any more than half the way, nohow, for you just roll and slide down the mountains for half a day at a time. You climb and climb higher until you can almost touch the moon and seven stars, and you can see all creation down below you, and it makes a man feel like he was nobody, and had no kinfolks, and it didn't matter a cent whether he lived or died. A trip over the Rockies and the Sierras will take the vanity out of a man quicker than anything I know. There is nothing left him but to trust his maker. He feels more helpless than he does on the ocean, for to be drowned is nothing horrible, but for the train to break a wheel or a jump the track on a narrow cliff a thousand feet high and the whole concern to go falling and cracking to the gulch below is just awful. And there are hundreds of such frightful precipices. Well, when we had got 1,740 miles west of Kansas City they let us out for thirty minutes and it was just glorious to get on the ground again and feel the solid earth under your feet, and to my opinion it is the best place—better than water, better than air, better than riding on a train. Of its dust we are made and in its bosom we must sleep. But as I was telling you, we boarded the train and put on a clean shirt and took a fresh start and rolled away for 1,440 miles more and got to the jumping-off place sure enough, and like old Balboa, stood upon a rock and gazed in majestic silence upon the Pacific ocean. If I were Byron or Shakespeare I could tell you about that, but I'm nobody much since I got back and never expect to be. The world is a heap bigger thing than I thought it was. Why the fir trees all over Washington are 300 feet high, and you have to take two sights to see to the top, and I saw a measured acre that had been sold to a sawmill and the timber cut off, and I counted twenty-seven stumps, and the smallest was eight and a half feet in diameter, and the mill cut up one of the trees into shingles while I was looking at them, and that one tree turned out 80,000 shingles and left a hundred feet of the top for laths and firewood. And that's the truth if ever I told it, and one day some of us went out in the edge of the timber to shoot some deer and the whole face of the earth was covered with ferns—ferns as thick on the ground as the palmetto in Florida and it was six to twelve feet high and we came across a big tree that had been blown down and the deer was said to be just over the other side and I tiptoed up by the side of the tree to put my gun up on it and I pushed it as far as I could and then tried to climb up on the crevices in the bark, but they shelved down the wrong way and my shoes had got thick and I couldn't make it and I couldn't reach my gun any more and had to come off and leave it. I went back next morning with a boy and put him on my shoulder and he reached and got the gun. I wish you could see that fern. It is in a belt about ten miles wide and 300 miles long across this country, and so impenetrable that a bear can't get through it, but there are paths through it every few miles apart—narrow paths that have been there for a thousand years, they say, and were made by the wild beasts, and the bears and the panthers and deer and prairie dogs would drink together and there wasn't a growl nor a fight, for you see they were all beset by a common danger and understood it and raised a flag of truce around the water, and Colonel Patton said that his men all partook of the same feeling and never raised a gun to shoot, notwithstanding they were nearly starved for fresh meat. And that is what the poet alluded to when he wrote that 'a touch of nature makes the whole world kin.' Go on, Mark."

"Well, as I was saying, you never heard of such a climate on the eastern slope of Washington. The boys don't wear hats the year round and if it were sent for the fogs it would be a splendid country to live in. The fogs don't rise until 10 o'clock in the morning, and sometimes they are so thick that you can move it around with a broom and sweep it out of the house. It's like a cob web, and you can wrap it around a stick or a broom and carry it out. I never saw them do it, but that's what they told me. You can't raise corn there, but wheat and oats and vegetables just grow immense. I saw Irish potatoes fifteen inches long and as big as my leg. Half a potato is enough for a moderate sized family. They slice them crossways like we do for Saratoga chips, only the chips are half an inch thick and as big as saucers. Everything grows big out there but the people. I never saw so many little, scrawny screwed-up people in my life. They are most all foreigners—low Dutch, Poles, Italians, Swiss, Swedes, Irish, Chinese and every other sort, and not one in ten can speak the English language. They can't call for a match to light a pipe with, but they have to make signs for everything."

About this time our train received a shock and put on the brakes and stopped, and we all got out to see what was the matter, and found that we had run into two mules and a double-seated buggy, and two negroes and a white man and seven jugs of whisky. One negro and one mule were killed and the others badly broken up. Nothing of the buggy could be found except the tires. It was close into town and the people all came running. The wounded were soon cared for and the train went on. Such is life and such is death when men are coming from a stillhouse loaded down inside and out with whiskey and try to beat a railroad at a crossing.

The next thing will be three or four lawsuits for damages, I reckon, for a railroad is an institution to be picked at and pursued, right or wrong. They are our greatest benefactors and civilizers, and not one in five makes any money for the stockholders, but the liberty of a ten-dollar cow is of more importance than the lives of passengers in the wreck of an engine. I was on the train one night when a wandering bull threw our train from the track and the engine down a bank and we had to stay there until morning, and a thousand dollars wouldn't pay the damages, but the owner of the bull got his pay all the same, and to my mind it is all wrong and I would stop it if I could. A railroad company may be just as careful as human foresight can be, but if a man is killed the juries go for them to the tune of five or ten thousand dollars. Just let a wreck be heard of and an Atlanta lawyer will take the first train to the spot and hunt round for a fee like a buzzard sails round for a carcass. I wonder how mean it is possible for a man to go and still hold up his head and pretend he is a gentleman. Bill Arp, in Atlanta Constitution.

A CHICAGO FIRE.

In Which Over a Million in Property Was Destroyed.

A fire involving a loss admitted to be at least a million dollars broke out at 1:30 o'clock Monday morning in the large retail dry goods and notions store of Siegel, Cooper & Co., at the southeast corner of State and Adams streets, Chicago. The blaze started in the exchange room on the first floor and spread through the inflammable stock with the greatest rapidity. All attempts to save the building were hopeless, and the fire department devoted its efforts towards preventing the flames spreading to the adjoining buildings. About twenty-five employes were in the store at the time, but all, as far as is known, managed to escape uninjured. There were three watchmen in the building at the time who have not yet been accounted for. The firm carried a stock of $500,000. The loss is believed to be fully covered by insurance.

Losses were as follows: Siegel, Kohn & Co., $500,000 on stock and $40,000 on building, insurance $500,000; the Leader, Demberg, Fleck & Harner loss by smoke and water $100,000, covered by insurance; James H. Walker, dry goods, loses by smoke and water $60,000; C. Peacock & Co., crockery and bric-a-brac, $40,000, insurance $32,000; Castikyan & Bedrosin, Turkish rugs, $5,000; John A. Bryant, piano agent, $5,000; I. W. Baird, pictures, $5,000; Woman's Exchange, $8,000; Bell, dry goods and notions, and other minor losses, $8,000. Most of the smaller losses are covered by insurance.

THE THIRD PARTY

OF THE STATE OF OHIO IN CONVENTION.

Nominate a State Ticket and Adopt a Platform.

The first convention of the people's party of Ohio began at Springfield Wednesday. It was a large and representative gathering, most of the delegates never having taken part in any of the so called reform movements before. Of course the farmers largely predominated, and a significant feature was the very large number of young men who are delegates. The convention is composed of 638 delegates, and of the eighty-eight counties in the state seventy-nine were represented. About two-thirds of the delegates have been republicans, but some of the heavy democratic counties, such as Auglaize and Crawford, sent large delegations. The personnel of the gathering is really very much better than any expected, and a straw which indicates the importance of the work of this convention to the republican and democratic parties was shown by the presence of all the officers of the two great Farmers' Alliance bodies, which proves that these organizations will support the new movement in Ohio, and not favor either of the old parties. Besides the alliance leaders in Ohio, a number of the leaders in the new party from other states were present, on invitation, and all of them have been invited to remain in the state and take part in the campaign. The convention was presided over by Hugh Cavanaugh, of Cincinnati, general worthy foreman of the Knights of Labor, the next highest office in the order to that held by Powderly.

A full state ticket was nominated, and a radical platform adopted which includes the 2 per cent loan scheme and woman suffrage. The prohibitionists were given a bad snub. Not only did the convention ignore a temperance plank, but it declares for the nationalization of the liquor traffic. The ticket is as follows: John Seitz, of Seneca county, governor; Frank Rist, of Cincinnati, lieutenant governor; D. M. Cooper, of Athens, auditor; M. Smith, of Summit, attorney general; Henry Wolf, of Cleveland, treasurer; Albert Yaper, of Cincinnati, supreme judge; J. H. Peterson, of Greene county, state school commissioner; J. S. Power, of Franklin, board of public works; W. J. Weaver, of Portage, food and dairy commissioner.

PLATFORM.

The platform says: We hold that labor is the basis of all wealth, and should be protected by law.

The instability of the municipal government of the state has led to the creation of enormous municipal debts, which are burdensome to all the people, and we therefore demand that the constitution of the state be so amended that it will be impossible to change the forms of government to meet changing fortunes of politicians, and no change of forms of municipal government be permitted without the consent of the people.

It demands the forfeiture of the charter of the Standard Oil company; the suppression of gambling in futures on all agricultural and mechanical products; favors the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people; demands a rigid enforcement of the laws against adulteration or counterfeiting of food; demands free school books and compulsory education; the prohibition of child labor under fourteen years; demands the passage of laws prohibiting the alien ownership of lands; also a graduated income tax; also government ownership of all means of transportation or communication; also suffrage, irrespective of sex or color. The following extracts are literals:

The right to make and issue money is a sovereign power, to be maintained by the people for the common benefit. Hence we demand the abolition of national banks as banks of issue, and as a substitute for the national bank notes we demand that full legal tender treasury notes be issued in sufficient volume to conduct the business of the country on a cash basis; and we favor government loans directly to the people on real estate or other ample security, at the rate of interest not exceeding 2 per cent.

We demand the free and unlimited coinage of silver.

We oppose the contemplated issue of bonds of the people each year [illegible] for expenses in time of peace.

We believe that the solution of the [illegible] problem to abolish [illegible] the [illegible] public to a system of [illegible] civil war, and generous care for their widows and orphans, and demand that differences between the value of gold and greenbacks as to date of the payment be made equal to gold, so as to place the soldier on the same footing as the bondholder has been.

The resolution referring to liquor was recommended to the national committee for adoption. All the resolutions, except that referring to the liquor question, were adopted in a lump. After considerable debate on a motion to lay the liquor plank on the table, the committee recommendation to refer it to the national committee was adopted.

THE BUSINESS SITUATION

As Reported by Dun & Co. for Past Week.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: Business continues dragging and dull. The stock market is greatly depressed, the average price of active stocks being $1.50 lower than a week ago. False reports of failures have something to do with the decline, and some of the houses thus assailed are actually among the strongest in the street.

DEPRESSED AT THE SOUTH.

Trade at the south is peculiarly depressed because there is too much cotton, with several hundred thousand bales of last year's crop left over in the world's markets and with competent judges predicting another crop even larger than that of 1890, it is no wonder that prices are low and producers scarcely get enough to pay for raising and picking. Hence, country merchants do not buy freely, and the prospect of a great yield, which at other times might be helpful, tends to produce stagnation. Again, in parts of the west where crops failed last year trade has not yet recovered from the great depression resulting, and as long as the corn crop is in doubt complete recovery is not to be expected. In several states legislation hostile to capital causes much disturbance. The further collapse of real estate speculation in many parts of the west and south has brought severe losses and embarrassment to many.

THE MONEY MARKET.

At the east monetary uncertainties have a powerful influence. European difficulties do not pass as quietly or fully as was expected, and now serious financial trouble is apprehended in Russia, because of the failure of crops, which will only help this country in the end. There is a growing doubt whether the movement of crops here will not cause a temporary drain greater than the eastern money markets can meet, but if grain can be sold, gold will come. The apprehension grows stronger also that next winter may bring dangerous legislation by congress, and possibly the unlimited coinage of silver. One large financial institution has bought English consols to a considerable amount, and a leading trust company is said to have $4,000,000 of its deposits in gold. The treasury has added only $700,000 to circulation during the week, absorbing gold but issuing more silver and treasury notes. Though no gold has been exported, the outgo of currency to the west and south is felt at New York and at Boston. Money is close at Buffalo and Cleveland, in active demand at Chicago, Cincinnati and Detroit; firmer at 7 to 8 per cent. at St. Louis; in good supply for legitimate business at Milwaukee; close at Omaha, Nashville and Atlanta; tight at Jacksonville but easier at Savannah, and in fair supply at New Orleans.

SUMMARY OF THE REPORTS.

Business is reported good in the east, west and north, as a rule; but at southern points it is dull, or only fair, though seriously improved at one or two localities, because of injury to cotton by heavy rains. The great industries show no important change for the week. Philadelphia describes the iron market as highly dull, and sales to makers are made at prices considerably below quotations.

Business failures occurring throughout the country during the last week number for the United States 224, and Canada 23; total, 247; against 234 last week.

Age-Herald: On the 1st of June, 1890, there were 573 prisoners in the county jails of Alabama. Of this number 98 were females; 429 were colored, and 15 were foreign born. In numerical order according to the number of prisoners Alabama stood eleventh amongst the states of the union. Georgia, with a greater population, being twelfth. There were three counties, reported as having no jails, Autauga, Baldwin and Covington. The counties that had no prisoners were Blount, Chambers, Clay, Cullman, Elmore, Lamar, Lawrence, Marion, St. Clair, Tallapoosa and Winston. Alabama's population at the time was 1,573,017, so her ratio of the prisoners was 379 to the million. The total number of prisoners in the United Sates was 19,538, showing an increase of 53.95 per cent over 1890. The increase in population was but 24.96 per cent.

OTHER SIDE OF THE QUESTION.

Some of the Causes for the Present Financial Stringency.

A short time ago a delegation of Georgia farmers waited on a very prominent capitalist of this city, who was likewise a bank president, for the purpose of getting from him some corroboration of their views that there was a dearth of money in the country.

Stating their business, the spokesman said: "Isn't the crying need of the country for more money, the present per capita circulation being wholly inadequate to the requirments of business?"

The banker replied: "We have an abundance of money; there is more idle capital in this city than ever before."

"Then why can't the people get it?" asked the farmers.

Taking a one thousand dollar bill from the cash drawer, the banker said: What have you to offer in exchange for this? I will give it to you for 1,000 bushels of wheat." no one responded.

"Then sell me 1,000 bushels of corn for it." A shake of the head by the spokesman.

Well, then, let me have 1,000 bushels of oats." Still no reply.

"Can any of you sell me 400 tons of Bermuda grass hay?" None of them had saved any hay.

"I will buy from any of you 13,000 pounds of meat." The offer was not accepted.

"Well if you have none of these products for sale, that all successful and prosperous farmers raise in abundance to sell, how would you farmers get this $1,000 if there was a billion in our safes?"

"We wish to borrow it at a reasonable rate of interest and on long time," said the spokesman.

"On what security?" said the banker.

"We each have an abundance of the only security that a farmer can offer, his lands," replied the spokesman after information.

"Well, then, said the banker, "the security being ample, suppose I lend you $1,000 each, secured by a mortgage on your lands, at 7 per cent, on twelve months' time, one of you endorsing for the other. These notes for $1,070 will fall due a year hence and how much better off will you be to pay them than year to pay for your supplies from the week, meagerly support your families, pay for guano and make at the end of the year you are likely to wind up just where you started. How can you ever get the $1,000 to pay this loan. You won't do it, and I shall have to sell your lands to get my money back. That is why you can't get money from the capitalist; and if the circulation was quintupled, you would never get a cent unless you had some product to give in exchange for it. Raise everything you eat and wear at home, and let your truck, chickens, eggs, butter, mutton, beef, etc., pay for all the dry goods and luxuries your family uses. Then your cotton crops of twenty to fifty bales will be surplus, and you will have money in the bank here with me, instead of being borrowers, and you will not hear anything more about financial stringency, or 'contracted circulation,' or 'capital grinding labor', or 'hard lines.' Revolutionize your methods and the south will flourish like the garden of Eden, and you will be princes instead of borrowers."—Americus Ga., Times-Recorder.

The Democratic Alliance.

There is much regret in the political situation in Alabama to-day.—There is much to regret in the political separation of men who for a quarter of a century have stood shoulder to shoulder in establishing law and order. There is much to regret in the differences of men who fought side by side for the establishment of white supremacy. There is much to regret in the threatened dismembership of the Democratic party. There is more to regret in the knowledge that all this is caused by men who want office and would sacrifice party and people to get office.

The rank and file of Alliance Democracy is composed of farmers, and it is said they want a third party.

For what?

They have a party that stood by the people since the creation of the states that created the government.

But it is argued the old party is corrupt.

If so, who is to blame?

The men who made it corrupt.

Who put those men in position to make it corrupt?

The majority.

Who constitute the majority?

The farmers.

If the farmers made the party corrupt, the farmers can purify the party.

But the farmer says the politician corrupted the party.

Then throw the politician overboard and go on with pure harmony.

But new leaders are wanted.

If so choose them and do not be imposed upon by self-constituted leaders.

The men who are anxious to lead, usually lead to the grind-stone. They have axes to sharpen and want the people to turn the stone.

Leadership that leads to self-emolument is demagoguery. Demagoguery is danger. The party and the people are in danger from self-constituted leaders.—Tuscumbia Alabamian.

OUR ROAD LAWS.

Their Barbarism Illustrated in Lamar County.

Vernon Courier.

The commissioners court made one step in getting into line with the procession when they decided to build crossings across the rivers in the county. It shows that equal rights to all is not altogether a myth. It is not right to take a poor man, be he white or black and make him work five or six days on the road on a stretch while his family have nothing to eat at home. Last year there came to our own observation a case in point. A white man, aged 33 years, with a wife and five children were the tenants of a man worth $5000. In the last week in July when the crop was finished the landlord told the tenant that he could furnish no more provisions until time to gather the crop and he must work around for provisions, on the same day along came the road overseer and warned the tenant to come on the next Monday and work the road. He worked the road six days and his wife and children borrowed food from the neighbors. The landlord, with all his buggies and horses, and money struck not a lick. This is a great poor man's country! Of the $1000 appropriated by the court, more than half was paid by the railroads. Railroads are in favor of good dirt roads. If there are no dirt roads there are no freights.

A Wonderful Medicine.

Mr. Frank Hoffman, a young man of Burlington, Ohio, states that he had been under the care of two prominent physicians, and used their treatment until he was not able to get around. They pronounced his case to be consumption and incurable. He was persuaded to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds and at that time was not able to walk across the street without resting. He found, before he had used half of a dollar bottle, that he was much better; he continued to use it, and is to day enjoying good health. If you have any throat, lung, or chest trouble try it. We guarantee satisfaction. Trial bottle free.

CIRCULAR.

CLANTON, ALA., July 21st, 1891.

Pursuant to a Call of Rev. A. E. Burns, who was appointed to take the initiatory steps for the organization of a County Convention of the Sunday School Workers of Chilton County, there were present Rev. A. E. Burns, Rev. J. L. Wyatt, J. P. Allen, D. J. Waterworth, T. G. Holt and H. W. Caffey.

The object of the meeting was explained by Rev. A. E. Burns, and on motion, D. J. Waterworth was chosen Chairman, and Rev. J. L. Wyatt, Secretary. A plan of organization was formulated, and H. W. Caffey and D. J. Waterworth appointed to issue a circular letter inviting every worker and well wisher in this good cause to united effort, by actively co-operating in the proposed movement.

To this end a Convention has been called to meet at Mulberry Church in this County, on the 28th of August to the 30th inclusive, and an earnest appeal is made to every Sabbath School in the county to represent itself by delegates on that occasion; we further invite all who feel an interest in such work to come and encourage the move by their presence and councels; and even if there be those who are opposed to our plans, they are cordially requested to come and hear what we have to say.

Maj. J. G. Harris, President of the International Sunday School Convention; T. L. Jones, President of the State Sunday School Convention, and J. H. Franklin, a member of the International Executive Committee, are expected to be with us and lend their voices and council to make the enterprise a success. A suitable program has been arranged and subjects of interest will be discussed.

The communities of Isabella and Mulberry churches will extend a hearty welcome to all visitors, and we earnestly invite all Christians, who have the glory of God in view and well being of their fellow men at heart, to come and take council with us.

Caheen, the great dry goods merchant, of Birmingham, will soon move his large double stores to the corner of first avenue and 21st Street, where a magnificent new building is going up for him. When you are in the Magic City and want the best dry goods at low prices, Caheen's is the place to get what you want. He has built up a fine trade both in and out of the city by his liberal advertising and low prices.

In another column will be found the announcement of the re-opening of Jemison High School on Sept. 14th, under its new principal, Prof. Tipton Mullins, a first honor graduate of Nashville Normal College. A special feature of Prof. Mullins' school, and one that deserves mention is that he proposes to take one pupil from each beat in the county free of tuition. Of course preference will be given in such cases to those most deserving and most in need of such assistance. We predict for this institution much success under its new management.

A Shoe Dealer: "I've been in the business about thirty years, and the more I live the more I learn of human nature. I can tell by the old shoes a man leaves when he buys a new pair, just what his temperament is. For instance, a shrewd, calculating man always runs his shoes down at the heel, while the slow, careless individual invariably wears the soles out at the toe. As a class the man with little feet is of a refined nature, and is an evidence of good blood. The individual whose pedals are large is usually a good worker, and earnestness characterizes all his efforts."

Clanton Items.

The barbecue at Clanton Park came off last Saturday the 8th as stated in last week's View. To say the barbecue was a grand success, but feebly expresses the meaning we desire to convey. The Clanton Ford people deserve much credit, especially W. F. Roebuck, R. B. Adams, Martin Healer and others, who gave their whole attention to barbecuing the meats. Mr. Roebuck knew what he was doing when he said $25 would be paid to any person going away from the barbecue hungry.

There were about 1,000 people on the ground and everybody enjoyed themselves.

Time prevents me giving a full account of the affair. Will try something more about it next week.

Verbena Views.

Mr. George Wragg, of the Capital City, is staying at the Clifton Hotel.

Mr. Theodore Bethea, of Montgomery, is visiting Mr. Frank Baldwin.

Mr. D. J. Waterworth, of West Chilton, and Rev. Mr. Gavin, of Plantersville, spent a night in Verbena, on their way to the District Conference at Wetumpka.

Rev. J. P. Sanders, Rev. A. A. Green and Hon. G. A Northington attended the District Conference.

At the last revival here 24 joined the Methodist church and 15 the Baptist church.

Miss Sallie Murry, of Hayneville, is visiting Mrs. Brightman.

Miss Maggie McCarty, of Anniston, is visiting Mrs. Brooks.

Messrs. John Boykin and Wallace Glover expect to move their families to Evergreen this week. We regret to lose them, but hope they will find a pleasant home in Evergreen.

Mr. John Wells and his lovely bride, of Vicksburg Miss., is visiting his father, Mr. Kin Wells.

Prof. Walls is visiting friends here.

Maplesville Dots.

Miss Re Oty has been visiting Mrs. Crumpton.

Mrs. Glover would have enjoyed the delicious barrel of LeConte pears sent from Florida by a friend if she could have shared with the editor.

Mrs. Maw DuBose has had a most happy reunion of her three living sisters, Mrs. Driskell, of Plantersville, and Mrs. Vincent, of Maryland.

Mrs. Todd has been visiting Mrs. Crumpton.

Mrs. Berry has come up to spend the summer.

Miss Hines, of Orrville, has been visiting Mrs. Patty DuBose.

Miss Lizzie Hammon has been visiting Maplesville.

The Misses Welsh, Miss Owen, of Centreville, and Miss Carrie Dawson, of Prattville, are visiting Miss Fannie Foshee.

Little Misses Mary and Lilian Bowline, of Selma, are visiting old friends here.

Mrs. Owen and Mrs. Jackson, of Randolph, are visiting Mrs. Smitherman.

Mr. Ned Todd and his sister Miss Kate, of Plantersville, are visiting Mr. William Walker.

Miss Etha Fitz and Mrs. Willie Gandy have been visiting Mrs. Mrs. Eva Gandy.

Mrs. Griffin, of Kymulga, has been visiting Mrs. Jimmie Griffin, who is now very sick.

Mrs. Giles and Miss Julia have been visiting friends here.

REVOLO.

Cox's Chapel.

The corn crop is about made and is best in several years in this section.

Miss Annie Palmer, of Fix Mile, is the guest of Mrs. Hugh Wilson this week.

Misses Ida Smitherman, Lena Nix, Ophelia Merchant, and Annie Jones attended the protracted meeting at Isabella last Thursday.

Mr. W. Y. Nix, is making some improvements on his house.

Our school is improving. Mr. Jones keeps the boys straight.

Mr. J. M. Marchbanks made a trip to Stranburg recently, and reports crops in good condition.

Jesse Garner will leave for Selma soon.

Short Mr. Russell will commence a series of meetings at Cox's Chapel the 3rd Sunday in this month.

It is rumored there will be a singing convention at Cox's Chapel the 4th Saturday and Sunday in Sept.

Lily Dots.

Buford Jones spent Thursday and Saturday at home, attending the protracted meeting.

It is Jas. Couley and not Jas. Cooley, as the printer made us say, who is sick. Mr. Couley's condition is critical.

John Wright returned from Selma Tuesday, where he has been working for the past year.

Tom Brown, of Birmingham, is spending his summer vacation with his father and friends here. He is an excellent young man and has made a host of friends in the Magic City as well as at home.

Married, at the residence of the bride's parents, Thursday eve, July 30th, at 5 o'clock, Mr. Frank Williams, to Miss Susie Baker. Rev. A. C. Wells officiating.

Mr. Calvin Lenoir is so much improved as to be able to walk about the house and yard.

Clay Jones has finished his writing school at Pierce's Chappel, and can now be found at home.

Will Dearden has taken up his residence at Mr. Wright's.

Jim Lenoir spent Saturday in Jemison on business.

Owing to inclement weather, the revival meetings of last week were not successful. Rev. A. J. Briggs, assisted by Revs. Moore and McFaden, labored faithfully and well, and the failure of the meeting cannot be attributed to them.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India Missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this recipe in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. Noyes, 820 Powers' Blk, Rochester, N. Y. apr16-y

BOTH SIDES OF THE QUESTION.

We take the following from the E...; the papers opposed ...e Alliance sometimes exercise con...rable ingenuity in misrepresenting ...demands of the Order. A complete ...conception of the object of the sub-treas... for instance, causes the general publi...n of the following:

"It looks as if it had been devised by ...regular syndicate of speculators. It ...s to the wealthy, the capitalist, op...unities for crushing the poor pro...er that no rings have ever before ...ed to ask for. The sub-treasury will ... cotton, wheat, corn and tobacco in ...hands of speculators. The mechanic, ...laborer, the farmer who do not pro... these articles would be compelled to ... such prices as the syndicate chose." ...n the talker took a piece of paper and ...pencil and proceeded to demon...te a curious problem, show ... "the power of money to op...e" under the sub-treasury idea. ...supposed one John Smith to have ...0,000 in cash and to go in for a spec...tion under the operation of the sub...sury. Smith buys $100,000 worth of ...on, puts in the sub-treasury, gets ...000 on it from the government, in...nesgain, and so on, until Mr. Smith's ... deposit of cotton will not realize ...ugh at 80 per cent. to buy another ...e. It appears from the figuring that ...n Smith, with $100,000 capital to ...rt with, could, under the sub-tre...sury ...me, buy and hold $500,000 worth of ...on for speculative purposes. He ...uld hold absolutely as long as he paid ... trifling percentage of interest and ...rehouse dues. If the entire product of ...ton in the United States is worth ...00,000,000, it would take only $60,-...,000 capital to buy and hold every ...e."

The Economist continues: The more ...n Smiths the better, under the sub...sury plan. Whereas, there was only ...0,000 in Mr. Smith's hands when he ...vised his scheme, there would be when ...was worked to its ultimate $500,000 ...ong the people and Mr. Smith's board ...uld be dissipated, as such boards ...uld be. THE ALLIANCE NOT "IN IT."

In these columns last week appeared what was supposed to be an authentic account of the promulgation, by the Reform Press Bureau at Washington, of wheat trust circulars. It seems that this was a mistake in so far as the authority of the alliance is concerned. The National Economist prints the same article, and appends thereto the following comment:

"The above is going the rounds of the press and places the Alliance and some of its members in a false position. There has not been a single wheat circular sent out from Washington by authority of the Alliance. There is no Alliance authority under which such a circular could be sent out save the executive committee, of which but one member is in this city. The Alliance as an organization has nothing to do with the matter. It is purely a local affair in which interested members act independently of the national officers and have so far been able to take care of themselves, and will no doubt do in this case. Mr. Ayer is a clerk in the office of President Polk. The constitution recognizes no such office as private secretary. What he may say or do so is no more binding on the Order, and has no more bearing on the policy of the Alliance, than that of the humblest member. His expressions are simply the opinion of an earnest member of the Alliance and nothing more; neither does Mr. Ayer presume to any thing more, as he is too much of a gentleman and too good an Alliancemen to desire to be placed in a false position. This is written in justice both to the Order and Mr. Ayer, with the hope that such explanation will be accepted in the spirit and intent in which it is given."

TAKE HEED.

Under the above caption, The Progressive Farmer. (Raleigh, N. C.,) says: "The third party seems to be on a boom among the 'straightouts' of Mississippi. According to the Clarion Ledger, the 'straightouts' in three counties bolted the conventions because they were outvoted by the Alliance people, and set up shop for themselves. Again The Progressive Farmer warns the 'straightout' leaders and press that they had better watch these Third party fellows in their own RANKS. The only men in the South thus far who have attempted to form a third party, belong to the "Simon-pure straightouts." And in every case they have violated their solemn pledge to stand by the action of the convention. We call on the champions of democratic usage and principle, to kick these traitorous fellows out of the party. First thing you know some of these 'cranky' Alliance Democrats will attempt to follow this example. Kick the traitors out! You let them off too lightly last year in South Carolina, North Carolina and Georgia and now you see it is spreading in Mississippi. The Democratic papers should look after these fellows."

FROM KANSAS.

A dispatch from Topeka, Kansas, says that the Shawnee county democratic convention, the first meeting of the kind since the democratic editors of Platte decided that the party should not fuse with the Farmers' Alliance, was held a few days ago and bolted the editors' decision. C. K. Halliday, editor of The Topeka Democrat, who led the anti-fusion faction was defeated for the chairmanship by a fusion man. Judge John Martin, the most influential democrat in the state, made a long speech in favor of fusion. He said no democratic principles were particularly involved in county politics. His counsel prevailed, and only two nominations were made. The convention then adjourned for a week. In the meantime a conference will be held with the Farmers' Alliance people, and the latter will be given the remaining parts of the ticket.

The Alliance Farmer (Los Angeles, Cal.) says: The excessive rates for transportation are crushing producers and imposing grievous burdens upon consumers. They are serious restraints upon enterprise, and unless some relief is afforded production will not only be greatly reduced but the surplus wealth of the country will continue to pass into a few hands. The fortunes which have been accumulated in railroad building and operating are beyond anything known to history, and accumulations will increase and oppression of the people will continue unless some decisive and effective steps are taken. Rates are high in order to secure income on excessive capitalization and to pay unnecessary operating expenses. The expenses which are unnecessary are the immense salaries paid the high railroad officials. What are the remedies? The answer is, ownership of the roads or control of rates by the government.

The Alliance (Tallahassee, Fla.,) says: "They say to us that the sub-treasury plan is impracticable, yet this same plan has been tried with abundant success in this country before these young Solomons had existence. Turn back a few pages of your country's history and read about the land loan scheme of the Pennsylvania colony, and the tobacco warehouse system of Virginia, which at the time saved the colonists from utter ruin; then read a little French history and see how this same warehouse plan in 1848 brought France out of an extremity of dire necessity and mad, her people prosperous and happy. Not practical! and here we have the "proof of the puddin'." We admit that it don't suit the ragtag and bobtail politicians, but it does suit the great mass of producers in this country, and they are going to have it."

Pointers (Greenfield, Mo.) says: "The merchants should certainly be on the side of their customers, the farmers, in this movement for a better state. Any measure that will help the laborer will directly benefit the merchant as well. Business drags because the people are so oppressed that they cannot afford to buy; and are obliged to ask for credit for even the few necessities which they are compelled to purchase. The merchants know this to be a fact, and they know, too, that their business can never flourish while this condition prevails. Why not come out on the side of the people and aid in the work of removing the difficulties under which every honorable occupation languishes."

GREAT ECONOMIES.

Arthur Sumner—Lend me fifty dollars to speculate, saying only the truth.

...

Industrial Educator (Fort Worth, Tex.) says: "The grandest victory for Alliance principles, including the sub-treasury plan, was won at the Fort Worth meeting. After weeks of advertising in the leading papers, only a handful were present, and the thing still born. Nothing will be left of it at the next state meeting."

NEWS OF THE SOUTH BRIEFLY PARAGRAPHED

Forming an Epitome of Daily Happenings Here and There.

The courthouse of Winston county, Alabama burned Thursday. All the records were lost.

The first bale of cotton of the new crop was received in Montgomery, Ala., Thursday and sold at auction for 8 cents a pound.

A canvass of the members of the State Colored Alliance convention, in session at Raleigh, showed a large majority in favor of the sub-treasury plan.

The Blakeney Manufacturing Company, manufacturers of bed springs, mattresses, etc., at Dallas, Tex., was closed Friday by attachments, aggregating $14,500. Total liabilities $35,000 to $40,000, with ample assets.

At Huntsville, Ala., Wednesday, the Nordyke and Morman Company filed a bill to foreclose a mortgage on the Huntsville Electric Light Company and have a receiver appointed. The register in chancery appointed C. F. Sugg, who gave bond and took charge.

A southern branch for the Colorado tin plate syndicate will be located at Middlesburg, Ky. A site covering ten acres of ground has been selected near the iron furnace and the steel plant of the Watts syndicate, where iron and steel can be furnished them at a low figure.

A telegram received at Birmingham Wednesday from Detective Stark reports that he is en route to Birmingham from Portland, Ore., with B. D. Whiden, the man who insured his life for $40,000 and had himself ostensibly drowned in the Tennessee river. His wife will welcome her husband's return to life and dismiss the suit against the insurance companies.

The Order of Railway Trackmen of the United States met in session in Birmingham, Wednesday, with about sixty delegates present from most of the southern states. The main question before the meeting was a proposition to consolidate with the North American Order of Section Foremen. Both orders are precisely similar, the only difference being that one is northern and the other southern.

The Alabama State Alliance trustee stockholders have been in session in Birmingham for three days. George F. Gaither, member of the national executive committee of the new people's party, has been general manager for a year, and has been very successful, largely more than doubling the business. Thursday afternoon J. H. Bostwick was elected to succeed him, and it is reported that Gaither's affiliation with the new party worked the change.

The biggest railroad deal of the century has just developed at Charleston, S. C. On Wednesday, A. B. Morton, vice president of the Cincinnati and Cape Fear railroad, had recorded in Berkely county a mortgage for $9,000,000 on property of that road. The project is to run the road from Norfolk to Charleston, east of the Atlantic Coast Line, entering Charleston, crossing Ashley river and going down to Savannah.

Mr. Henry Exall, the oldest architect and builder in Richmond, Va., died suddenly Wednesday evening of apoplexy. He was born near Reading, England, in 1812, and was brought to Richmond, when but five years old, and had lived there ever since. Mr. Exall was the first architect to open an office in Virginia, and designed many of the finest buildings in Richmond. He saved the state capitol from burning at the evacuation. He was passing through the square, and, detecting that one of the windows of the capitol had been set on fire by sparks, he hurried into the deserted building and saved it from destruction.

A RUMPUS IN CAMP.

The "Color Line" in the G. A. R. Convention.

A dispatch of Tuesday from Detroit, Mich., says: There is one serious dispute which threatens to mar the serenity of the silver encampment of the G. A. R. It is peculiar that, after the organization has been in existence a quarter of a century, it should be threatened with disruption by the ever-living "color question," but such is the fact. Men in the southern states who were loyal to the union in the dark days of '61, are the ones who insist that the negro has no place in the social gatherings of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Col. George T. Hedges, commander of the department of Louisiana and Mississippi, is reported as saying: "Unless the thing is straightened out during this encampment, there won't be a white member of the Grand Army of the Republic south of the Ohio or Potomac a year hence. They are outnumbering us in posts, thus putting us directly under them. That we will not stand. Now, we want to rule ourselves and have colored people go by themselves. Seven out of ten of the colored posts of New Orleans are in favor of it, but, as you know, there are always some tinkers, and I understand a delegation from the colored posts is coming to fight us. We have received information that two of Chicago's most influential colored men are on their way to assist us, and we think we will gain our point. All we ask for is a professional department, embracing Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas." As there are two sides to the question the outcome of the matter will be looked forward to with considerable interest.

THE WEEK'S NEWS.

GENERAL TELEGRAPHIC AND CABLE GLEANINGS.

Of Brief Items of Interest From Various Sources.

Dispatches of Wednesday state that the labor trouble in Omaha is spreading. More bricklayers have gone out for seven hours on Saturday with eight hours' pay.

The bodies of three men were found Tuesday in the Mayer mines, near Scottdale, Pa. They are supposed to have lost their lives at the time the mine was on fire during the strike.

The White Star line steamer, Majestic, arrived at New York Wednesday having crossed the Atlantic in five days, eighteen hours and eight minutes, beating the record by fifty-eight minutes.

In the United States district court at Greenville, S. C., Tuesday, Judge Simonton made an order requiring Receiver Chamberlain, of the Charleston, Cincinnati and Chicago road to issue receiver's certificates to the amount of $230,897 to pay the claims of a number of northern creditors.

A London cablegram says: Dillon and O'Brien appeared in the house of commons Tuesday, for the first time in many months, their absence having been due to their imprisonment in Galway jail. They were met in the lobby of the house by members of both sections of the Irish parliamentary party, and were the recipients of hearty congratulations from nearly all the Irish representatives.

A Washington dispatch of Thursday says: Treasury Agent Windom, who was detailed to select a site for the public building at Columbus, Ga., recommends that the building be located at the southeast corner of First avenue and Twelfth street. The lot is 147 feet and 10 inches square, and is part of the DeGraffenreid estate. The owners ask $22,000 for it, but the agent thinks it can be secured for less money by condemnation proceedings.

A Boston, Mass., telegram states that the Kansas City, Memphis and Birmingham road statement shows a deficit for the year ending June 30th last of $176,-000, against a surplus of $50,000 last year. The Kansas City, Fort Scott and Memphis road shows a balance for dividend for the year ending June 30th, of $256,880 against $569,157 the previous year. The figures show a deficit of $16,886 against a surplus of $128,272 in 1890.

A Salt Lake telegram states that the full returns in the Utah elections Wednesday show that the liberals have twelve members of the legislature, one-third of the whole, a large gain over the number in any previous legislature. The liberals elect three members of council and six of the house in Salt Lake by a plurality of 100. The liberals also elect the county collector, two selectmen and the county superintendent by pluralities of from three hundred to three thousand.

A New York dispatch of Wednesday says: There is a general and authoritative denial all around that there is any cut-rate war between Claus Spreckles and the sugar trust. Brokers speaking for Spreckles and Secretary Searle, of the sugar trust, and several prominent sugar dealers, concur in saying that the refiners broke the sugar market purposely to realize on a heavy accumulation of stock. They wanted to clear out the room it occupied and wanted the money it brought.

THE ALLIANCE AT THE HELM

While the Governor and Lieutenant Are Frolicking.

A dispatch of Tuesday from Linco'n, Neb., says that Governor Thayer is in Detroit at the Grand Army of the Republic encampment. Lieutenant Governor Majors' whereabouts is not known. He is not in Lincoln, and is supposed to be at Detroit also, or at least out of the state. Under the constitution the president of the senate is acting governor. Pointer, who is a strong Allianceman, slipped down to Lincoln Monday afternoon, and announced his intention of ascertaining whether Majors was in the state. He said that if he found that he was not he would assume the duties of governor and run things until Majors or Thayer turned up. He said that he would probably call a special session of the legislature to pass the maximum freight bill. Republican officers at Lincoln are panic-stricken, and the wires are kept hot calling on Thayer and Majors to return and save the state from alliance usurpation.

A Wonderful Old Man.

Old Uncle Larkin Brown, who keeps a bridge at Roswell, Ga., is a remarkable old man. He was born in Washington county, Georgia, is the youngest of a family of sixteen children, and his mother was fifty-one years old when he was born. He is now ninety-one years old, is in perfect health and bids fair to live many years. He has chewed and smoked tobacco all his life, never eats vegetables, except potatoes, drinks coffee three times a day, and was never sick but one time in his life, and that was last summer, when he made himself sick by eating too much candy. Two hour's sleep a night is sufficient for him. He has kept the bridge for the past fourteen years, and has drank no whisky in thirty years.

Tired Standing.

Old Lady (in electric car)—"Dear me! We're going to have a thunder storm."

Bad Boy (banging to strap)—"I don't see no sign of it, mum."

Old Lady—"No signs! Why, the lightning is beginning. See the flashes and hear the thunder."

Bad Boy—"That ain't outside, mum. That's in the car. I guess something's wrong with the 'lectric connections."

Old Lady—"Goodness me! Conductor! Conductor! Stop the car; I want to get off."

Bad Boy (taking her seat)—"I guess the old lady kin git into some store before she get's wet."—Street & Smith's Good News.

Mostly Fools.

Two doctors disagree about the same case. Two clergymen disagree as to the meaning of the same scripture. Two lawyers arrive at opposite conclusions on the same statement. Two financiers totally disagree as to the outcome of a certain policy. Two farmers contradict each other as to the results of the same conditions of growth. Two business men disagree on the effect to be produced by the same method. And so it is in every department of human knowledge. Why should we say our conclusion is the right one, and the other man's all wrong? We are fools, mostly, anyhow.

Tradespeople as Soldiers.

The Emperor William's remarks about volunteers, "tradesmen masquerading as soldiers," might be considerably modified by a careful reading of American history. In every crisis our nation has been saved by the volunteer soldiers drawn from the ranks of civil life. There is no record of greater heroism, more faithful service or persistent courage than was displayed by these volunteers.—Indianapolis News.

And Goldsmith—poor, miserable, delightful Goldsmith—paid tribute to the humble ...ountry of England when he wrote:

His best companions—innocence and health,
And his best riches—ignorance of wealth.

The average farmer's life makes no display in the world, and it was never intended that it should. A man has done his duty when he has filled his station according to ... capacity. There is but one Shakespeare, one Milton, one Goldsmith. There was but one Bonaparte, and that was one too many. I was perusing a book on English authors, and was surprised to find how few of them lived to a good old age. A literary life is short in years, though some of them are long in great works. Brain work is not healthy work when compared with the outdoor occupation and simple, temperate habits of the farmers. Shakespeare died at fifty-two; Addison, fifty-three; Steele, fifty four; Gray, fifty-five; Pope, fifty six; Gibbon, fifty-seven; Dickens, fifty-eight; Macaulay, fifty-nine; Charles Lamb, sixty; Scott, sixty one; Coleridge, sixty two; Bacon, sixty-three; Collins, sixty-four; Milton, sixty five; Arnold, sixty-six; Burke, sixty seven; Southey, sixty eight and Bulwer, sixty-nine. Then there was Goldsmith and Burns and Byron and Thackeray and Hood, who never reached their fiftieth year. I penned down thirty consecutive names of notable writers, and their average age was fifty-six years. It would have alarmed me if I had written anything that was any account, but considering all things I will risk it a little longer.

If a man can keep calm and serene, and has a good constitution, he can do literary work a long time; but there are a big lot of little troubles nowadays. I see a book agent coming up the walk right now, and I have to fortify myself against him and listen with patience and resignation to his little speech, and then look at his book and be courteous, and then make my little speech and let him go. I would like to buy all their books, but I can't. And there is the worry about cooks and company, and the everlasting frolics of the young people, for they are going all the time, and have run away with the town. There hasent been a day or a night, except Sunday, in five weeks that there wasent some town roonsness on hand that they were just obliged to take a hand in, for fear of giving offense, they say, and sometimes they don't get home until midnight, and I wish we were all back in the country where we came from. Most every one of these vacation days is as big a thing as a country wheat thre hing or a Sam Jones tabernacle meeting, and, to my opinion, the e long-winded frolics are not doing the young folks any good. Irregular hours and ice cream and cake and canteloupes and milk shakes have got them all churned up, and we can't get them up to breakfast or home to supper. But it seems to be the family opinion that I am getting antiquated, and unreasonable, and maybe I am, though I have heard some other paternals say it has been the bangenest vacation that ever came over Cartersville. It will soon be over, thank the good Lord, and then maybe we will get our children back again. Country people don't have such things, and they ought to be thankful. I bought a load of fodder to day from Mr. Gilreath, a good, contented farmer, and his little ten-year-old boy came with him and was proud to set up on top and drive, and he was modest and well behaved and has a good chance to make a good man, but if he lived in town he would be smoking cigarettes right now. May the Lord help us all to be content with our lot.—BILL ARP, in Atlanta Constitution.

TRAIN ROBBERS

Hold up an Express Train on the Georgia Central.

A train robbery as bold and successful as any ever planned by Rube Burrows took place in the very heart of Georgia Thursday night at 7:40 o'clock. The express car attached to the regular passeger train, No. 13, on the Central railroad, was held up by three masked men, and a large amount of money was taken from the safe. Just how much money was stolen is a matter of conjecture. The officials are positive that not more than four thousand dollars was in the safe at the time the men rifled it; although it was reported that $5,000 was taken, and later $10,000 was said to be the loss. Until the express officers can go through their lists carefully and check up the various amounts, it will be impossible to say exactly how much money the robbers made way with. The train was in charge of Conductor Read, and Express Messenger J. T. Bynes had charge of the express car.

The train left Macon, Ga., bound for Atlanta, on time. A negro woman got on there and told the conductor she wished to go to Collier's, Collier's is a small way station some thirty-five miles from Macon. The passenger train does not usually stop there unless some one wants to get off. The train slacked up at Collier's and the woman got off.

THREE MASKED MEN.

Engineer Smith saw three men standing near the platform, but thought nothing of this, and opened the throttle and pulled out. He observed these three men board the train, entering the door of the express car. After the train had gone about half a mile the bell cord was pulled vigorously by one of the robbers, and the engineer put on the air brakes as quickly as possible.

The highwaymen, at the point of pistols, had forced the express messenger to unlock the safe and give up the express company's money. When the train stopped they jumped off and made their escape.

BAKER TO HANG

On the 27th Day of November Next.

A dispatch of Tuesday from Abingdon, Va., says: In the case of the commonwealth against John P. Baker, the motion for a new trial was overruled, and the prisoner was sentenced to be hanged on Friday, November 27th next. Counsel for the defense had a consultation as to the exceptions taken for the purpose of an appeal to the circuit court.

A Little Rock, Ark., dispatch says: J. L. Bay was arrested Monday afternoon on a warrant sworn out by State Treasurer Morrill, charging him with the larceny of $100,000 state scrip. Bay is a clerk employed by the bondsmen to investigate the books of the defaulting ex-Treasurer Woodruff. A great sensation has been caused by the arrest.

A London cablegram says: There was a serious railway accident in Wales Sunday night. A passenger train crashed into a volunteer special which was stationary on the track at a point between Pont-y-Pridd and Cardiff. Fourteen persons were injured, and some of them so seriously that they will probably die. The rear of the special train was completely wrecked.

A cablegram of Tuesday from Calcutta, India, recites that the execution of the Manipur princes has created a profound sensation throughout India. The newspaper press of India printed in the native language, strongly condemns the so-called "hurried order" issued for the execution, which, the native press declares, was hastened, lest English public opinion should undergo a change in favor of the condemned princes, after the publication of their defense.

The ninth annual reunion of the ex-confederate soldiers of Missouri was held at Kansas City Wednesday. Three thousand men who wore the gray were in attendance. General Joe Shelly, the most interesting character of war times in Missouri, had been invited to command the marching veterans, but declined to have anything to do, with the reunion, believing the old wounds will heal more quickly and easily without such salve.

TRADE TOPICS.

Dun & Co.'s Report for the Past Week.

The following is R. G. Dun & Co.'s review of trade for week ended Aug. 14. The prohibition of exports of rye by Russia because of the official declaration that a famine is impending has suddenly affected the grain markets of the whole world. Russia usually exports about fifty million bushels of rye, and many reason that other grain in large quantities will be required. Not enough attention is paid to the fact that European consumption may be greatly reduced by high prices, and speculation goes on the theory that every person must have so many bushels, or there will be starvation. Before the year is over this notion will probably be corrected. Wheat rose 8¼ cents on moderate sales, and prominent operators at Chicago went down. Corn rose 6½ cents and oats 2½ cents with small sales. Crop prospects grow brighter every day and with the assurance that the country will will not only have enormous supplies of grain, but a market for it at good prices. Business is improving throughout the north. The improvement begins close to the farms; country merchants are buying more freely and their purchases are felt by the wholesalers and manufacturers.

At Boston and Philadelphia there is a general improvement. At Cleveland, trade shows some improvement, though iron is demoralized. At Cincinnati trade is only fair, southern business being smaller. At Chicago an increase is noted in almost every branch of trade except cured meat, wheat receipts being five fold over last year, and money is in good demand, though the call from the country is not as great as was expected. At St. Louis business is increasing in almost all lines, though lumber and building materials are dull, and at Kansas City cattle and packing hides were light and wheat not moving freely, but general trade is improving and healthy. At St. Paul business is unusually brisk, and country merchants are buying freely. The south is in a difficult condition. The great surplus of cotton last year and the prospect of an equally large crop this year, threaten lower prices than the producers can stand, and trade and collections are both poor.

An improvement in iron is felt at Philadelphia as to better grades, but No. 2 foundry has been offered at $15 for cash, and southern gray forge is selling at $9.75. The money market at New York continues easy on call, and commercial paper is rather more saleable in other eastern cities, but there is still a vague sense of uneasiness. The treasury has taken in $1,800,000 more than it has paid out, but reports indicate that the government will probably have to disburse $25,000,000 or more about September 1st for 4½ per cent bonds which the holders do not offer for extension. Foreign trade continues to improve, for while imports decline largely, the exports for two weeks of August have exceeded by nearly 19 per cent of the corresponding week last year. In the main interior money markets are in fairly good condition excepting at the south and at Philadelphia. If Europe is able to send cash for all the food it will require this year it is probable that this country will not lack money long.

YELLOW JACK

Making Fearful Headway in Vera Cruz.

The Ward line passenger steamer, City of Washington, arrived at New York Monday morning from Mexican ports and Havana, and, as a precautionary measure, was detained for thorough inspection and fumigation by the health officer at quarantine. The steamer left Vera Cruz early in August, and then yellow fever was prevalent to an alarming extent in that city. The hospitals were filled, and though the health authorities were striving to check the spread of the disease, their efforts were apparently unavailing. Their first attempts were to isolate the patients as soon as the malady made its appearance, but the disease spread so rapidly that it was impossible to cope with it. Many deaths have occurred during the last six weeks, and it was a common sight, officers of the vessel say, to see a string of funerals half a mile long, stretching from the gates of the city to the cemetery, each funeral party moving patiently, [illegible] ... hour's ... [illegible] ... hearse ... [illegible] ... the dead.

DALLAS ABLAZE.

A Beautiful Texas City Suffers from Fire.

A Dallas, Tex., dispatch says: Simultaneously at half-past 8 o'clock Thursday night fire broke out in a residence on Commerce street, and in the three-story wholesale dry goods house of Ardinger & Rose and B. W. Rose & Co., corner of Elm and Murphy streets. The residence was licked up in a twinkling, and this allowed the fire to get under headway in the Ardinger & Rose building. The fire spread to the shoe store of F. M. Smith & Co., and the gun store of E. A. Wordan, thence south of the Ardinger & Rose building to the William A. Watkins Music company warehouse and W. F. Snook & Co.'s drug store, on Main street. The losers by the fire so far are the Ardinger & Rose and B. W. Rose & Co.'s stock, valued at $125,000, insured for $5,000; F. M. Smith & Co., shoes, $25,000; E. A. Wyrdan, $15,000 on stock and building; Hill's Business college, $50,000; Dallas Telegraph college, $1,000; Dr. J. W. Gurly, $1,000. The insurance on the last-named losses is not known. Several were badly hurt by falling walls, but their names cannot be learned.

A SWINDLER SENTENCED.

Ex-Assistant Cashier Lawrence Gets Seven Years.

A Philadelphia dispatch says: Charles Lawrence, ex-assistant cashier of the broken Keystone National Bank, who, on Monday, plead guilty in the United States district court to two indictments, charging him with making false entries in the bank's books, and with conspiracy with Gideon W. Marsh, causing the bank to make false entries, was on Tuesday morning sentenced by Judge Biddle to seven years' imprisonment in the Eastern penitentiary at hard labor, and pay a fine of $100 and costs.

Goldsmith—poor, miserable, delightful Goldsmith—paid tribute to the humble ...try of England when he wrote:

...est companions—innocence and health, ... his best riches—ignorance of wealth.

...average farmer's life makes no dis... in the world, and it was never intended ... should. A man has done his duty ... has filled his station according to ... capacity. There is but one Shakespeare, one Milton, one Goldsmith. There was but one Bonaparte, and that was one too many. I was perusing a book on English authors, and was surprised to find how few of them lived to a good old age. A literary life is short in years, though some of them are long in great works. Brain work is not healthy work when compared with the outdoor occupation and simple, temperate habits of the farmers. Shakespeare died at fifty-two; Addison, fifty-three; Steele, fifty four; Gray, fifty-five; Pope, fifty six; Gibbon, fifty-seven: Dickens, fifty-eight; Macaulay, fifty-nine: Charles Lamb, sixty; Scott, sixty one; Coleridge, sixty two; Bacon, sixty-three; Collins, sixty-four; Milton, sixty five; Arnold, sixty-six; Burke, sixty seven; Southey, sixty eight and Bulwer, sixty-nine. Then there was Goldsmith and Burns and Byron and Thackeray and Hood, who never reached their fiftieth year. I penned down thirty consecutive names of notable writers, and their average age was fifty-six years. It would have alarmed me if I had written anything that was any account, but considering all things I will risk it a little longer.

If a man can keep calm and serene, and has a good constitution, he can do literary work a long time; but there are a big lot of little troubles nowadays. I see a book agent coming up the walk right now, and I have to fortify myself against him and listen with patience and resignation to his little speech, and then look at his book and be courteous, and then make my little speech and let him go. I would like to buy all their books, but I can't. And there is the worry about cooks and company, and the everlasting frolics of the young people, for they are going all the time, and have run away with the town. There hasent been a day or a night, except Sunday, in five weeks that there wasent some town roonsuness on hand that they were just obliged to take a hand in, for fear of giving offense, they say, and sometimes they don't get home until midnight, and I wish we were all back in the country where we came from. Most every one of these vacation days is as big a thing as a country wheat thre hing or a Sam Jones tabernacle meeting, and, to my opinion, the e long-winded frolics are not doing the young folks any good. Irregular hours and ice cream and cake and canteloupes and milk shakes have got them all churned up, and we can't get them up to breakfast or home to supper. But it seems to be the family opinion that I am getting antiquated, and unreasonable, and maybe I am, though I have heard some other paternals say it has been the bangenest vacation that ever came over Cartersville. It will soon be over, thank the good Lord, and then maybe we will get our children back again. Country people don't have such things, and they ought to be thankful. I bought a load of fodder to day from Mr. Gilreath, a good, contented farmer, and his little ten-year-old boy came with him and was proud to set up on top and drive, and he was modest and well behaved and has a good chance to make a good man, but if he lived in town he would be smoking cigarettes right now. May the Lord help us all to be content with our lot.—BILL ARP, in Atlanta Constitution.

TRAIN ROBBERS

Hold up an Express Train on the Georgia Central.

A train robbery as bold and successful as any ever planned by Rube Burrows took place in the very heart of Georgia Thursday night at 7:40 o'clock. The express car attached to the regular passeger train, No. 18, on the Central railroad, was held up by three masked men, and a large amount of money was taken from the safe. Just how much money was stolen is a matter of conjecture. The officials are positive that not more than four thousand dollars was in the safe at the time the men rifled it; although it was reported that $5,000 was taken, and later $10,000 was said to be the loss. Until the express officers can go through their lists carefully and check up the various amounts, it will be impossible to say exactly how much money the robbers made way with. The train was in charge of Conductor Read, and Express Messenger J. T. Bynes had charge of the express car.

The train left Macon, Ga., bound for Atlanta, on time. A negro woman got on there and told the conductor she wished to go to Collier's. Collier's is a small way station some thirty-five miles from Macon. The passenger train does not usually stop there unless some one wants to get off. The train slacked up at Collier's and the woman got off.

THREE MASKED MEN.

Engineer Smith saw three men standing near the platform, but thought nothing of this, and opened the throttle and pulled out. He observed these three men board the train, entering the door of the express car. After the train had gone about half a mile the bell cord was pulled vigorously by one of the robbers, and the engineer put on the air brakes as quickly as possible.

The highwaymen, at the point of pistols, had forced the express messenger to unlock the safe and give up the express company's money. When the train stopped they jumped off and made their escape.

The ninth annual reunion of the ex-confederate soldiers of Missouri was held at Kansas City Wednesday. Three thousand men who wore the gray were in attendance. General Joe Shelly, the most interesting character of war-times in Missouri, had been invited to command the marching veterans, but declined to have anything to do with the reunion,—believing the old wounds will heal more quickly and easily without such efforts.

A New York dispatch says: Judge O'Brien, on Monday, heard the argument and reserved decision upon the motions to continue the injunction granted by A. Myers, Bros. & Co., of Savannah, Ga., against the Merchants' National bank restraining them, Abraham Backer and Backer's assignee, Benjamin F. Einstein, from disposing of certain southern securities, consisting of stocks and bonds of the Savannah and Atlantic Railroad Company and the Muscogee Real Estate Company and notes.

TRADE TOPICS.

Dun & Co.'s Report for the Past Week.

The following is R. G. Dun & Co.'s review of trade for week ended Aug. 14. The prohibition of exports of rye by Russia because of the official declaration that a famine is impending has suddenly affected the grain markets of the whole world. Russia usually exports about fifty million bushels of rye, and many reason that other grain in large quantities will be required. Not enough attention is paid to the fact that European consumption may be greatly reduced by high prices, and speculation goes on the theory that every person must have so many bushels, or there will be starvation. Before the year is over this notion will probably be corrected. Wheat rose 8¼ cents on moderate sales, and prominent operators at Chicago went down. Corn rose 6½ cents and oats 2½ cents with small sales. Crop prospects grow brighter every day and with the assurance that the country will will not only have enormous supplies of grain, but a market for it at good prices. Business is improving throughout the north. The improvement begins close to the farms; country merchants are buying more freely and their purchases are felt by the wholesalers and manufacturers.

At Boston and Philadelphia there is a general improvement. At Cleveland, trade shows some improvement, though iron is demoralized. At Cincinnati trade is only fair, southern business being smaller. At Chicago an increase is noted in almost every branch of trade except cured meat, wheat receipts being five fold over last year, and money is in good demand, though the call from the country is not as great as was expected. At St. Louis business is increasing in almost all lines, though lumber and building materials are dull, and at Kansas City cattle and packing hides were light and wheat not moving freely, but general trade is improving and healthy. At St. Paul business is unusually brisk, and country merchants are buying freely. The south is in a difficult condition. The great surplus of cotton last year and the prospect of an equally large crop this year, threaten lower prices than the producers can stand, and trade and collections are both poor.

An improvement in iron is felt at Philadelphia as to better grades, but No. 2 foundry has been offered at $15 for cash, and southern gray forge is selling at $9.75. The money market at New York continues easy on call, and commercial paper is rather more saleable in other eastern cities, but there is still a vague sense of uneasiness. The treasury has taken in $1,800,000 more than it has paid out, but reports indicate that the government will probably have to disburse $25,000,000 or more about September 1st for 4½ per cent bonds which the holders do not offer for extension. Foreign trade continues to improve, for while imports decline largely, the exports for two weeks of August have exceeded by nearly 19 per cent of the corresponding week last year. In the main interior money markets are in fairly good condition excepting at the south and at Philadelphia. If Europe is able to send cash for all the food it will require this year it is probable that this country will not lack money long.

Business failures occurring throughout the country during last week number for the United States 202, Canada 25. Total 227 against 231 last week.

YELLOW JACK

Making Fearful Headway in Vera Cruz.

The Ward line passenger steamer, City of Washington, arrived at New York Monday morning from Mexican ports and Havana, and, as a precautionary measure, was detained for thorough inspection and fumigation by the health officer at quarantine. The steamer left Vera Cruz early in August, and then yellow fever was prevalent to an alarming extent in that city. The hospitals were filled, and though the health authorities were striving to check the spread of the disease, their efforts were apparently unavailing. Their first attempts were to isolate the patients as soon as the malady made its appearance, but the disease spread so rapidly that it was impossible to cope with it. Many deaths have occurred during the last six weeks, and it was a common sight, officers of the vessel say, to see a string of funerals half a mile long, stretching from the gates of the city to the cemetery, each funeral party waiting patiently for a chance to bury its dead.

DALLAS ABLAZE.

A Beautiful Texas City Suffers from Fire.

A Dallas, Tex., dispatch says: Sunday night fire broke out in a residence on Commerce street, and in the three-story wholesale dry goods house of Ardinger & Rose and B. W. Rose & Co., corner of Elm and Murphy streets. The residence was licked up in a twinkling, and this allowed the fire to get under headway in the Ardinger & Rose building. The fire spread to the shoe store of F. M. Smith & Co., and the gun store of E. A. Wordan, thence south of the Ardinger & Rose building to the William A. Watkins Music company warehouse and W. F. Snook & Co.'s drug store, on Main street. The losers by the fire so far are the Ardinger & Rose and B. W. Rose & Co.'s stock, valued at $125,000, insured for $5,000; F. M. Smith & Co., shoes, $25,000; E. A. Wyrdan, $15,000 on stock and building; Hill's Business college, $50,000; Dallas Telegraph college, $1,000; Dr. J. W. Gurly, $1,000. The insurance on the last-named losses is not known. Several were badly hurt by falling walls, but their names cannot be learned.

A SWINDLER SENTENCED.

Ex-Assistant Cashier Lawrence Gets Seven Years.

A Philadelphia dispatch says: Charles Lawrence, ex-assistant cashier of the broken Keystone National Bank, who, on Monday, plead guilty in the United States district court to two indictments, charging him with making false entries in the bank's books, and with conspiracy with Gideon W. Marsh, causing the bank to make false entries, was on Tuesday morning sentenced by Judge Biddle to seven years' imprisonment in the Eastern penitentiary at hard labor, and pay a fine of $100 and costs.

How They Got Rid of Mamma.

A FREE CIRCUS.

How an Elephant Went Up-stairs and How He Came Down.

Mrs. Marvin lived in East Fifty-seventh street, New York, a rather quiet part of the city, and one not accustomed to getting itself into the papers. Opposite her house was a queer-looking building which was the cause of considerable comment in the neighborhood. Downstairs appears to be a stable with wide doors. Above the hall door was a small room, used as a kitchen, and over the stable a large room in which lived Mr. and Mrs. Brown and their six children.

They knew the secret of that stable, and were paid for not letting the cat out of the bag. But there is a saying that "Murder will out," and little did the Browns surmise what a trick Fanchon was to play on them.

Fanchon? Yes, the baby elephant which was owned by Mr. Reiche, the importer of foreign birds and animals, and was taken care of by Mr. Brown, and kept in safety and seclusion until the time arrived for her to appear in public. But Fanchon grew impatient; she wished to see a little more of the strange new world into which she had been brought. So one day when her keeper was absent she took it into her head to go on an expedition.

She marched quietly out into the hall and climbing up a narrow stairway—how she did it no one knows—found herself on an upper landing whence she easily made her way into the kitchen where Mrs. Brown was preparing dinner. This good woman, hearing a step behind her, turned and saw a sight that almost froze the blood in her veins. For a moment she stood as one paralyzed; then, recovering herself, threw open the window and screamed for dear life.

It was a February afternoon, and Mrs Marvin sat busily sewing, when she heard a most unearthly shriek that made her spring to the window in great haste and all her neighbors did likewise. There stood Mrs. Brown at her own window, screaming and wringing her hands in an agony of despair, while over her head was stretched out—what? Could it be possible? Was it really the trunk of a elephant? Yes, unmistakably so, and Fanchon appeared to enjoy the situation and to take great delight in breathing the fresh outdoor air.

The newspapers and the small boy kept alive the excitement in the street, but that was nothing to the excitement in Mrs. Brown's rooms where an elephant had taken up its quarters and was making itself decidedly at home.

Fanchon was as contented as she could be, and seemed bent on having a good time; but she was an elephant, and her pranks were naturally on a large scale. Now and then she would go to the kitchen sink and help herself to a drink in the cleverest and neatest way. Occasionally she would come to the window with the youngest pickaninny in her trunk, and poor Mrs. Brown could be seen following, and wringing her hands in an agony of fear.

Presently, carpenters with lumber made their appearance, and five men worked like beavers to make a toboggan slide for Mistress Fanchon. It was finished at the end of three days. It went from the upper window to the top of the stone wall—not a very steep slope—then took a turn and a gradual descent into the open space below, leading directly into the stable.

Well, the day came when everything was in readiness for Fanchon's removal, and long before noon the street was packed with people gathered there to see the circus. The crowd were prepared to give Fanchon a tremendous cheering, but after they had been requested to be as silent as possible you could have heard a pin drop. It was a most remarkable situation.

Out of the window stepped Fanchon, preceded by young Mr. Reiche, who patted her on the trunk and quietly urged her along, and all went well until they came to the end of the platform resting on top of the stone wall. Here Fanchon was at a loss to know what she was to do. What was expected of her? She stretched out her hind leg in search of some support, and, finding none, swayed her body against Mr. Reiche and threw him violently down upon the grass-plot, a distance of at least twelve feet. A thrill of horror went through the crowd. It seemed to Mrs. Marvin that the poor young man stood on his head with his feet in the air for fully five minutes. It was a wonder his neck was not broken.

Fanchon turned, made a minstrel and fell, partly on the wall, and partly on the lower platform. Up to this time she had behaved exceedingly well and was as gentle as a kitten, but roused at the accident she trumpeted forth a blast that must have been heard several blocks away. The keepers came at once to her rescue, placing timbers and boards under her, so that she would fall no further. Then they rolled out five bales of hay, and as these Fanchon put a foot on and was quickly led down into the stable.

ALABAMA IRON

Being Shipped Via Baltimore to San Francisco.

A Baltimore telegram of Tuesday says: The growth of the iron industry in Alabama is shown by shipments of pig iron arriving in Baltimore by the York Mail line of steamers. One consignment now being received from Bailey, Ala., by that route will amount to 800 tons. The iron leaves Bailey over the Birmingham and Danville railroad, and is transferred at West Point, Va., to the York line steamers. When it reaches Baltimore it is delivered to the ship at Locust Point, which will take it to San Francisco.

Oliver Wendell Holmes has said a multitude of good things, but none better than this: "The human race is divided into two classes—those who go ahead and do something, and those who sit still and inquire, 'Why wasn't it done the other way?'"

In this age of keen competition a man must advertise and advertise wisely. He must give the same attention to his advertising as he does to his stock and store. An advertisement forms an impression on the mind of the reader, and it means a great deal to the advertiser that that impression be a favorable one and that it be fully sustained in the establishment.—Druggist's Circular.

The Ashville Aegis, in discussing the sub-treasury scheme, now being put forward by the some of the Alliancemen, says: "Sixty per cent. of the Farmers' Alliance in favor of the sub-treasury scheme means a minority of the people. It is studiously made to appear that about sixty per cent. of the Alliance is a large majority of the people in favor of the Ocala demands, when the contrary is clearly demonstrated. There is a large majority of the people non-Alliance, and if forty per cent. inside of the organization are opposed to the political scheme of its third party movement, a thorough organization of the Democracy on this basis will secure the most wholesome results. Let us organize.

Just now we have been wondering what Montgomery is doing with the work of pushing the organization of her trust company. It has been proposed to organize a trust company with the assets of Moses Bros. If a home man like W. F. Vandiver is made President with a home board of directors, the trust company might do much for Montgomery. Mr. Vandiver is capable of managing big things, and managing them well, and the VIEW as one of the depositors, is ready to go into the trust company if it is properly organized and officered. We give this after canvassing among the depositors in this section, all of whom we have been able to see want the trust company managed by the right man or they are not in it.

Greensboro Beacon: The Alliance says if any one can offer anything better than the sub-treasury they will accept it and be thankful. Now we have a plan to submit, which we are satisfied will fill their wants if they adopt it. The plan is not altogether an entirely new one and we hope the farmers of this section will adopt it. The plan is this: Raise less cotton, more corn, and save more fodder and hay, plant a good quantity of peas and potatoes. Raise your own meat and other things to eat. And raise one or two mules or horses every year. If this plan is adopted the farmers will in a few years have plenty of money without even paying the government two per cent for their loans. Then they can circulate their money when and where they please. Try it farmers.

We received a communication from a friend recently who wants to enter "journalism" and who desired our advice. Not being in that business we are not able to advise him, but will tell him what little we may know about "journalism." As a good printer we have been able to hold our own and get along tolerably well, and as a printer we have made about $10 where the journalist would not have made $1. We have in that way managed to keep out of debt and not go hungry. To illustrate, we have recently been turning out some job printing, which our customer remarked was as good as he could get done in Chicago. But we could not get out a newspaper here like Chicago, because the news is not here to fill it, the people are not here to read it, nor is the money here to sustain it. We once may have had a wild ambition to be a "journalist" but on learning the amount of salary the journalist receives in the cities, and that the unfortunate gentleman didn't get any salary at all outside of theatines, we deferred that ambition until after the millenium.

ABSTRACT OF ASSESSMENT.

The Increase in Values Goes Steadily Onward in Spite of Financial Depression.

The abstract of assessment for Chilton county for 1891, which has been handed us by Judge H. J. Cullen, shows an encouraging increase in taxable values over 1890. The total value of real estate is $904,206, and personal property reaches $1,436,411.58, making a full total of property subject to taxation of $2,340,617.58, upon which a revenue of $9,360.20 is derived for State and county taxes.

Property exempt from taxation, such as mechanical tools, farming implements, sheep, hogs, &c., amounts to $206,104.04.

The total value of the taxable property of the county for last year (1890) was $2,184,992.74, which shows an increase for the present year over last of $155,-624.84.

The total amount collected as poll tax, which amount goes to the school fund, is $2,712.00

The special tax in our county for needy Confederate soldiers and widows amounts to $1,169.70, which will allow each applicant for benefit under this fund, about $40.

The total value of real and personal property in the county in 1882 was $1,-462,512. From which a state tax of $9,511.85, and a county tax of $5,853.46 was received, making the total taxes that year taken from the property $15,-853.46. At that time taxes were high and the railroads paid a state tax of $4,271.24, and a county tax of $2,628.46. The tax rate has been gradually lowered and the present year the people will pay only $10,638.99, including the soldier special tax, on a property valuation nearly double that of 1882. This is something the Democratic party has done for the people. The comparison with 1882 is made because that was the first assessment published in the VIEW, the paper having been established but eight months before. The comparison would be even more favorable if we went back further.

The first bale of cotton has arrived and the first of September will open up the new business year with bright prospects for this section and for Alabama. While the price of cotton is low, yet there is an abundant food crop on hand to supply the needs of all. Though many may have met with serious losses during the year, still the future may enable all to retrieve them. The VIEW feels grateful to friends for patronage it did not look for; and which has enabled us to bear up under unfortunate experience with the "Moses miasma," in good trim. That misfortune enabled us to discover more friends than we thought were here, and we assure them that their substantial favors are much appreciated, and their kindly feelings reciprocated.

An exchange sensibly says: Because A differs from B is no proof of the dishonesty of either. But if one condemn the other it is prima facie evidence of his own narrow mind. Happily the South is politically, even professedly Democratic; in practice, it is rapidly approaching what we so much condemned in the Yankee brother. While you arrogate the right to think as you please, do not prove yourself unworthy that right by an intolerable bigotry which denies it to others. Much can be accomplished by temperate argument, nothing by intemperate abuse and condemnation.

The Age-Herald gave all the credit for the capture of the negro Porter, murderer of Henry Parr, to a Birmingham detective. Mr. Ben Williams and other citizens of Verbena deserve that credit.

Prof. S. J. Strock, who has a fine school at Harpersville, Shelby county, is at home visiting his relatives near Verbena. He was in Clanton Thursday. He says the Harpersville people want Maj. Jno. W. Pitts to run for Congress in this district next year.

Married, at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. S. E. Gardner on the 23d, Miss Alma Gardner to Mr. Dan Gaines. Rev. J. M. McCord performing the ceremony. The bride is one of Chilton's most lovely young ladies, while the groom is one of Avondale's noble young men. They go to their future home at Avondale where their many friends wish for them a long life of sunshine and happiness.

Mr. Lee Bivings visited Clanton Sunday.

Miss Minnie Phillips has returned home.

Mr. Fox Maull, of Elmore, visited Clanton Sunday.

Mrs. Croswell visited relatives at Robinson Springs last week.

Mrs. Lamar, of Deatsville, visited friends and relatives in town Tuesday.

Mrs. Givhan and little son Collier Givhan visited Troy, Ala. last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Hall, of Florida, are visiting their mother, Mrs. Mamie Hall here.

The merchants are laying in new stocks of goods for the fall and winter trade.

Miss Kate Campbell, of Montgomery, was the guest of Mrs. W. A. Collier last week.

We can do your job printing as good and as cheap as anybody, and will appreciate your favors.

Mr. Jno. McDonald, of Montgomery, spent Sunday with his family who have been here for the past two weeks.

Mrs. W. F. Vandiver and two sons, of Montgomery, are in our burg and are the guests of Mr. W. H. Merritt.

Mrs. Lucien Day of Morgan county is visiting her old home here. She is accompanied by young Lucien.

It was necessary to "boil down" some of our correspondence in this issue because of its length and of limited space.

Mr. F. J. Davis will move his family to Woodlawn the first of next month. Mr. Davis is in the lumber business at that place.

W. H. Merritt invites you to call and examine a large stock of new fancy goods, notions, clothing and dry goods, now being received.

The first bale of the new crop of cotton we learn reached Clanton Friday. It was brought by Mr. Dick Aldridge and sold to W. H. Merritt for 7c.

The merchant who does not advertise should not kick when business is dull. He does nothing to bring business to the town.—Sheffield Enterprise.

We regret to learn of the death of Mr. Will Cooper, which occurred at Cooper's Station on Thursday. He was a young man. His death was caused from typhoid fever.

We regret to learn that Mr. J. M. Ponder has decided to remove with his family to his old home in Georgia this fall. We hope he may yet be prevailed upon to change this decision.

Rev. R. M. Hunter is up again after several days of sickness, and is able to assist Rev. Catt Smith in the protracted meeting at the Baptist church, which began Monday morning.

The management of the Southern Exposition, Montgomery, have our thanks for a complimentary ticket to its coming exhibition. Preparations are being made for the grandest display ever had.

Mr. W. H. Parr, father of Henry Parr, will now pump the water into the Clanton tank. The railroad authorities think of moving the pump house below the depot and digging a well at the creek, as the creek above the depot does not furnish enough water for their use.

The celebrated Hamilton-Brown Shoe Company's goods can be had at W. L. Sampey's store at reasonable prices. They are first class shoes and wear well.

Terrible Crime.

Avenged by a Speedy Lynching.

IT IS THE FIRST HANGING KNOWN TO HAVE TAKEN PLACE IN CHILTON COUNTY.

Henry Parr, a white boy 16 years of age, was brutally and shockingly murdered by a negro on Friday morning at the railroad pump house near town. The murdered boy's head was almost severed from his body by three blows from an axe which was found lying near by, and his pockets were found rifled. Upon learning of the horrible crime a posse was organized and with blood hounds went in pursuit of the murderer.

Suspicion fell upon a negro who had passed through town about noon and stopped to learn where the section hands were working. He was given directions and went on. The dogs found the trail and followed it to Verbena, where the negro was found already being guarded by citizens who had been apprised of the murder. The murderer at first was disposed to implicate others in the crime, stating that two other negroes had helped him. This was not believed. The murdered boy's watch, railroad pass and pocket book were found in posession of the captured negro, and he then confessed that he alone was guilty of the crime. He was placed on train number four and brought to Clanton, and at the depot was met by a body of earnest and determined men who had been wrought up by the horrible crime and the prisoner was taken from the small posse by force and caried to the outskirts of the town and hanged.

Young Parr, the murdered boy, had been employed for a number of years by the railroad as pumpman at this place and Clear Creek. He was paid $20 per month. The pay car stopped at the pump house near town Friday morning and it is said that the negro saw Parr go into the car presumably to get his wages, and the murderer waited around the pump house until the train passed and the young man had laid down on a bench to sleep. He then slipped up on him and with an axe which he probably found at the pump house committed the awful crime.

As to the lynching it is the first hanging that we can authentically announce as having taken place in Chilton county, and the only regret that we have heard expressed is that it was not a legal hanging. It was an easier death than the demon deserved, is the general opinion here.

A well known negro, Dan DeJarnette, was arrested and held on suspicion, and after the capture of the murderer DeJarnette was released, and it is reported that after assisting in the lynching of the real criminal Dan went on to his work rejoicing that his own neck was still sound.

THE MURDERED BOY.

The remains of the dead boy were carried to the home of his parents near Providence Church for burial. It is the second violent death in that family within a year, an elder brother of Henry's having been killed in a railroad collision at Clear Creek sometime last summer.

Young Parr was a bright and industrious lad, and was for a time employed as roller boy at the VIEW office. He would pump the tank full at Clear Creek on Wednesday morning and come down to Clanton on the freight train and roll off the papers in the afternoon, get his money and return on the accommodation the same evening. Being provided with a railroad pass he kept this up about six months and when he quit he said he was going west. He took his western trip and was gone some months. He was still absent at the time his brother was killed in the accident at Clear Creek, but returned when he heard of his brother's terrible death, and now he has met even a worse fate than did his unfortunate brother.

NNUAL MEETING

THE GEORGIA STATE ALLIANCE IN ATLANTA.

ntine Work of the Convention Epitomized.

Promptly at 10 o'clock Wednesday rning President Livingston called the vention to order in Concordia hall, lanta. Nearly every delegate was pres- , and about three or four hundred alli- ymen, who were present as spectators. ery available inch of space in the large m was occupied by the enthusiastic anceman. The convention was opened h prayer by the state chaplain, Rev. R. Davies, of Habersham county. e first business was the report of the mmittee on credentials. Immediately r the reading of the report Rev. J. Gibson, of Oglethorpe county, rose to question of personal privilege, but was ed out of order by President Living- n. Governor Northen then took the r and said he believed Mr. Gibson had ght to be heard. However, the chair ld hold that Mr. Gibson was out of or- . Governor Northen then appealed m the decision of the chair. A vote s taken and the house sustained the sident. After this tilt President Liv- ston delivered his annual address. hen he arose great cheering greeted . Among other things he said:

"Brethren of the alliance: We are met day under the most auspicious circum- nces, and have the great satisfaction feeling that we have well performed solemn obligations we have taken, as far, and have advanced the great and cial interests of our order. We have ery reason to be proud of our success d the record we have made. In Geor- a the alliance has had much of valuable ucation. Our lecturers have visited sub-alliances, and have spoken with belligence and enthusiasm, and have oused the members to study, their ongs and to come to a clearer under- nding of our principles and to solid alty to our order. The consequence is at I find our people everywhere through- t the state are more confident that we e right in our methods, and that our ccess is but a matter of time. Unity, nor and energy will bring us the adest of victories in the not far dis- nt future. Speaking for Georgia alli- cemen I feel authorized to say that ey are more determined than ever to sh their battle to the very gates of the emy. All the enthroned forms of op- ression and robbery must be assailed ith unflagging valor until the last of em is hurled from place and power, d the people—the honest people—the oducing people—are restored to their rthrights and are masters of their homes d capitals. Our enemies, meanwhile, e not idle. They are both alarmed d active. They have begun to organize ainst us in some places, and in nearly l instances they trust to their ingenuity d money to produce dissensions and nflict in our ranks. But they are mis- lculating the strength, the honor and e unwavering faith of the alliancemen. e can never be misled and defeated by ch tactics. But what must we do to ntinue our success?

1. We must remain united and cultivate that fraternity of feeling and iden- ty of interests which will knit us to- ether into an individual body.

2. We must turn a deaf ear to the arpings and complaints of those who re on the outside of the alliance, and o the factious growlings of the disgrun- led who are in our fold.

3. We must stand solidly on our na- ional platform. It needs no apology rom any of us. It speaks for itself and or us. It is the broad basis of our na- ional union and mutual interests. It nits men of our persuasion in every sec- ion. Let us not abandon it nor be driv- n from it. With that creed we con- uer.

4. We must co-operate in our plans nd labors with our brethren in the other tates and sections of the union. This bligation is part of our Ocala acts, and must be fairly and fully redeemed.

5. We must prepare for a hard and bitter warfare against our order and its principles. No organization seeking reform of the political and economic onditions of the United States has ever been assailed as we have been. But that which has been done against us is noth- ing to what we will have to combat in the future. We must set our flags for- ward, compact our ranks and break our enemies to pieces upon the solid breast of linked and loyal alliancemen.

And now I have a few words personal to myself. I have done the best I could for you and the cause. I have suffered much without complaining. I have been true to my obligation and my re- sponsibilities, and stand ready to answer for all my words and deeds.

Our demands are just, liberal and in harmony with the golden rule. Our or- der and platform are becoming more popular every day, and the greatest ca- lamity the toilers of America could suffer to-day would be failure, from any course, of this grand and glorious reform gov- ernment.

We are charged with making it a suc- cess, and it would be an everlasting dis- grace to us if it should fail through our own follies, mistake or cowardice. I promise you, on the other hand, a com plete, brilliant and beneficient victory if we are but united, faithful and true to our opportunities."

President Livingston then explained what the mission of General Weaver, Jer- ry Simpson and Mrs. Lease had been in Georgia. It was not for personal or par- ty ends, but they were here on a cam- paign of education and for the instruc- tions of Georgians and the cultivation of fraternity. He then recommended that the state alliance purchase The Southern Alliance Farmer, and place it in the hands of proper officials selected for that purpose. He said that the paper could be had for half the present price under that arrangement. He spoke at length upon this subject, dwelling upon the im- portance of a good organ.

He then touched upon the national labor convention to be held in Cincinnati February next. He said that matters of vital importance were to be settled there, and said that the decisions made there would have a great effect on the politics of the alliance. A national con- vention might be found necessary at that time. It depended entirely upon the con- dition of things at that time.

The speech was pronounced by many as being the ablest one they had ever heard delivered, and loud and continued ap- plause greeted its close.

The hours of meeting were fixed at 9 a. m. to 12:30 o'clock p. m., 2 p. m. to [illegible], and 8 p. m. to 10 p. m.

The convention was called to order at 9 o'clock.

A telegram from President Evan Jones, of the Texas State Alliance, was read, in which he sent greetings to the Georgia alliancemen, and announcing that the Texas alliancemen were still on the Ocala Platform. The secretary was instructed to reply for the Georgia alliancemen.

A resolution thanking General Weaver, Congressman Jerry Simpson and Mrs. Lease for their labors in Georgia, in be- half of the alliance, was adopted. The resolution provided also for the payment of the expenses of Messrs. Weaver and Simpson while in Georgia.

The following resolution was intro- duced and adopted with enthusiastic unanimity:

Resolved, That the state alliance con- vention do most unqualifiedly condemn the course of the Atlanta Journal, Macon Telegraph, Savannah News, Cuthbert Liberal-Enterprise, Albany News and Advertiser, Dahlonega Signal, Alpha- retta Free Press, and all other papers who have antagonized the alliance.

Resolved further, That all alliancemen are requested not to subscribe to or read these sheets.

President Livingston introduced a re- solution requesting the legislature to ac- cept the soldiers' home, but the resolu- tion was defeated. A large number of delegates were dissatisfied with the fate of the resolution. The following resolu- tion was also introduced:

Resolved, That our members of con- gress are instructed to vote for no man for speaker of the national house of re- presentatives who is not in full accord with our principles and who does not stand squarely on the Ocala platform.

On motion it was indefinitely postpon- ed.

Mr. S. F. Duncan, delegate from the South Carolina alliance, was introduced to the alliance. He asked that a com- mittee from the Georgia alliance be ap- pointed to meet the committees from other cotton growing states in a cotton growers' convention, to meet in Atlanta September the 15th, this year.

Felix Corput, chairman of the execu- tive committee, then presented his re- port signed by J. J. Stephens, A. F. Pope, A. W. Ivey and J. W. Taylor, members of the committee. The report states that during the past fiscal year sixty-one sub-alliances had been organ- ized, making a total of 2,271 in the state. "We find," says the report, "the books of your secretary neatly and cor- rectly kept. Your present secretary will not be a candidate for re-election. He demands the appointment of an expert to investigate his books, so that he may have undoubted credit for returning the trust placed in his hands as clean as when he assumed charge of the same. Your committee concur in this demand, and suggest that the expense attending this expert examination be divided be- tween Secretary Burks and the state alliance." The report was adopted with- out any amendment.

Dr. Gibson then introduced the following resolution: Resolved, That arrangements now being made looking to the presentation of charges against President L. F. Livingston, and that the election of presi- dent be postponed until after such charges be presented and investigated.

This resolution was also indefinitely postponed.

The following special committee to give information to the press was ap- pointed: Dr. J. W. Taylor, chairman; J. H. Wooldridge, Chattahoochee; Rev. H. R. Davies, Habersham; L. J. Newton, Butts; M. C. Davis, Newton.

And the following standing committee:

Committee on Good of the Order—Dr. M. A. Baldwin, W. W. Webb, R. Asbury, C. T. Zachry, J. J. Barrett.

Grievance Committee—W. E. A. Searcy, M. L. Everett, W. H. Warner, C. F. Barry, J. L. Johnson.

A resolution was adopted making dis- trict lecturers ex-officio members of the state alliance convention. A committee was appointed on alliance literature. The old committee on cotton bagging was re-appointed. Committees on cotton acreage for 1892 and the insurance of live stock were appointed.

A resolution was adopted providing for the appointment of one from each congressional district and two from the state at large to attend the national labor conference at Cincinnati next February. A large number of other resolutions of minor importance were introduced and referred to appropriate committees. Just before the hour of adjournment arrived the following resolution was introduced with Congressman Everett in the chair:

Resolved, That we hereby assert our utmost confidence in President Living- ston's uprightness and integrity.

The resolution was endorsed with only one dissenting vote, Mr. Gibson, of Ogle- thorpe being the sole opponent to the re- solution. The convention then adjourn- ed to meet Thursday.

A GIGANTIC COMBINE

To be Formed by Kansas Labor Organization.

A Topeka Kan., dispatch says: The leaders of the alliance organization of Kansas are in session here to form one of the most gigantic organizations ever or- ganized in this country. The convention is composed of the members of the Far- mers' Alliance, Industrial Union, the Na- tional Industrial Alliance, the Knights of Labor, the Farmers Mutual Benefit So- ciety, the Kansas Alliance Exchange Company, the Alliance Insurance Company, the Elevator Company and other commercial offsprings from the Farmers' Alliance. The object of the convention is to ex- change ideas upon the importance and necessity of maintaining and building up the numerous co operative associations now in existence or hereafter to be or- ganized, such as insurance companies, fire, life and mutual protective associa- tions, Kansas Alliance Exchange Com- pany and other kindred organizations. The intention is to economize by placing all these institutions under one manage- ment, and thus simplify the machinery by which they are operated.

TO SAVE THEIR BROTHER.

Two Little Girls Rush in the Water—All Three Drowned.

A dispatch from Attalla, Ala., says: three children of Steven Armstead, a prominent citizen of that place, were drowned late Tuesday afternoon. A boy, aged ten, and the two girls, aged thirteen and fifteen, went to Big Mills creek, a short distance away. The little boy went in bathing, and after disporting for awhile in the water, he got beyond his depth and was drowned. His sisters, who were playing on the creek bank, a short distance away, heard the cries of their brother, and ran to his assistance. He was struggling when they reached the water's edge. Forgetful of personal danger, the little girls plunged into the water to save their brother, and getting beyond their depths, they also were

The stockholders of the Opelika, Ala., Milling company met a few days ago and increased its capital stock from $25,000 to $45,000. The mill is doing an excel- lent business and finding a ready market for all its products.

A Nashville, Tenn., dispatch states that on Tuesday the sub-lessees of the prisoners now at Briceville made application to the board of prison in- spectors to have the order for the removal of the convicts from Briceville rescinded. The board, however, refused to modify their order, and the matter will possibly be taken to the courts.

A Nashville dispatch says: Judge Mc- Allister, on Thursday, appointed a re- ceiver for Baxter court, the nine-story hotel and office building erected by Jere Baxter. Numerous attachments have been brought under the lien law, and a suit for the foreclosure of a sixty-thousand-dol- lar mortgage was brought a day or two ago.

The corner stone of the Baroness Erlan- anger hospital at Chattanooga was laid Thursday afternoon with imposing Ma- sonic ceremonies. Baron Erlanger, of the Alabama Great Southern and Cincinnati Southern railroads, made a handsome donation to the hospital, provided it should bear his wife's name. The build- ings are to cost $100,000.

A telegram of Sunday from Gaines- ville, Fla., says that the man shot near Bronson, Saturday, and supposed to be Harmon Murray, the negro desperado, has turned out to be Jesse Burton, the negro who shot Deputy Sheriff Carson, at Branford, Fla., about six months ago. He was a desperate character, only sec- ond to Murray in crime and bloodshed.

A Raleigh dispatch says: The young- est convict ever convicted of highway robbery in the state, was placed in the penitentiary at Raleigh, on Wednesday. His name is Will Edwards, and he is only thirteen years old. He committed the crime in Orange county, in June, and was successful in obtaining money from his victim. He gets a sentence of seven years.

A meeting of southern stove manufac- turers was held at Nashville Thursday for the purpose of taking some steps to- wards securing relief from the rate on hollow ware, adopted a month ago by the southern railroads. A committee was appointed to wait upon the classifi- cation committee, which meets in At- lanta, Ga., in a few days. It is claimed that the new rate would ruin southern manufacturers.

A special of Sunday from Cullman, Ala., says a few days ago Monroe Evans and his son John were arrested at Bailey- ton, in that county, charged with shoot- ing Pierce Mooney last May. On Satur- day they were taken before a local jus- tice of the peace, who declined to try them, but bound them over without bail. They were put under guard at a neigh- bor's house over night. About midnight they were taken from the house and hung to a tree.

The employes in the machine shops of of the South Carolina railway, at Charles- ton, quit work Monday, leaving only two men at work in the entire establish- ment. The strike was caused by the re- fusal of the railroad to increase the wages 25 cents a day. The present pay is $2.50 to $2.75 a day. The strike is inaugurated under the International As- sociation of Machinists, and the strikers hope to obtain the support of the Broth- erhood of Locomotive Engineers and other unions.

THE JUMP IN WHEAT

Causes Pandemonium in the New York Stock Exchange.

Dispatches from New York report that the dealings of the produce ex- change were again at fever heat with the beginning of trade Monday morning. There was an attempt to run a further radical bull movement on top of the re- markable advance of Saturday, and it was successful for a short time. December wheat option, in which there was the most active trading, ran up 1½ cents to $1.13, and September made $1.15. There was great nervousness and a feel- ing that affairs had been strained.

Soon there came along heavy selling orders on foreign account, and local longs became anxious. They began throwing overboard large lines, and prices were soon forced down, December going off to $1.14 and September to $1.12¾. From these figures there were fitful reactions and much calmer feeling. However, there was evidently fear of taking either the long or the short side, and brokers in operating demanded large margins.

A peculiar feature of the dealings Monday was that at no time were prices alike, there being a difference of fully two cents per bushel at the same mo- ment in various parts of the pit. The radical advance has a bad look in its driving exporters out of the market, who for the day are remarkably indifferent. In fact, they are attempting to resell their wheat. Selling orders in part came along from the fact that Russia was trying urgently for markets for its wheat, especially upon the continent, in order to be ahead of the order forbidding export- tation, which goes into effect August 27th.

MEETING OF STOCKHOLDERS

Of the Georgia State Alliance Exchange.

A meeting of the trustee stockholders of the Georgia State Alliance Exchange was held at Atlanta Tuesday. The meet- ing was a very busy one. It was called to order promptly at 10 o'clock by President Peek, and was in session all day and part of the night. There were present 130 trustees, representing almost every county in the state. The meeting was characterized by entire harmony throughout and there was no factional differences of trouble.

After perfecting the roll call the re- port of President Peek was received and read. Then came the report of Secretary Ledbetter, followed by the report of the directors. After these had been read the report of the experts appointed to examine ex-Business Agent Wynn's books and accounts was submitted. The reports of the experts and directors was complete and exhaustive, showing the entire defalcation and exonerating Col- onel Peek in every particular and from every standpoint from all blame. The old directors were then unanimously re- elected, and they were requested to re- elect Colonel Peek as president of the exchange and ex-officio chairman of the board of directors of the exchange. The following resolution was then introduced by Mr. Barry, of Cuthbert.

"Resolved, That the trustee stock- holders' convention now in session do most emphatically and most unqualified- ly condemn the course of The Atlanta Journal, The Macon Telegraph and other papers in the limits of the state now pursuing the same policy towards the state exchange and state alliance, in their false and malicious statements concern- ing Colonel Peek and other officers of the state exchange. We believe that this conduct is but a part of a programme to destroy the alliance order, and all that pertains to the same, and beg the broth- erhood to beware of such influences."

This resolution was unanimously adopted by a rising vote. After hearing all the facts in connection with the alli- ance exchange, a special committee of seven was appointed to draft resolutions endorsing the action of Colonel Peek and expressing the entire confidence of the trustee stockholders in his integrity. They presented the following resolution:

"After hearing all the evidence in de- tail in relation to the alliance exchange and Brother Peek's connection therewith.

"Resolved, by the stockholders' con- vention assembled, That W. L. Peek has conducted the affairs of the exchange in a way that meets our entire approval, and that our confidence in him is firm and un- shaken, and that our confidence in his ability and integrity is unbounded."

The afternoon session was devoted to receiving reports of the trustee stock- holders from the different counties, and no discussion was indulged in. The night session was largely attended, but no busi- ness was transacted. The proposed plan to establish a central purchasing agency and also sub-exchange was thoroughly discussed, but no action was taken. The meeting adjourned till Wednesday morn- ing.

THE DIRECTORS MEET.

At a meeting of the new board, all the old officers of the board were re-elected as follows. W. L. Peek, president; L. F. Livingston, vice president; L. S. Led- better, secretary.

MILLIONS IN SMOKE.

One Day's Record of Disastrous Fires.

On Tuesday Jacksonville, Fla., had one of the biggest fires in her history. The fire broke out in the three-story crockery house of R. D. Knight, in the center of the business portion of the city. The heat ignited the Hubbard block, the largest building in the city, four stories high, and containing the Hubbard hard- ware store, Western Union Telegraph office, Southern Savings and Trust Com- pany, Jacksonville Light infantry armory and the telephone central office. Thence it jumped across the street to the Semi- nole Club house, three stories high, and communicated to the Smith building and the Mattier building. In the Smith building a large amount of dynamite had been stored. This exploded and started fires blocks away to the northwest. The sound was not heard, but the effects of the explosion was seen fifty miles away. In the city the effect was stunning. Men fell in the streets and many were injured. Plate glass for four and five squares was shattered, and the sidewalks covered with broken glass. The firemen could have stopped the fire at this point, but for the explosion. That rendered them about helpless. Residences, stores and hotels broke into flames, and the fire became a terrible conflagration, and was not stopped until after daylight in the middle of the square, bounded by Church, Ashley, Laura and Main streets.

The burnt district covers about ten blocks in area, six long and two wide, embracing some of the finest blocks and best dwellings in the city. A heavy wind was the cause of the fire spreading so much. The city has a desolate look; many families are camping out in the park, as the weather is warm, and they haven't had time to engage new quarters. This is the heaviest blow in this line Jacksonville has ever sustained. An estimate of the loss and insurance is as follows: Total losses about eight hun- dred and fifty thousand dollars. Total insurance $498,805.

A CAN FACTORY DESTROYED.

The Pocock can factory, in St. Louis, an extensive establishment, on the corner of Franklin and Second streets, was burned Tuesday morning, and two or three other smaller adjoining concerns were gutted. The total loss is about one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. Pocock's loss is about one hundred thous- and dollars, with an insurance of $78,000. The other property was well insured.

SAFE WORKS BURN.

The Damon Iron and Safe Works in Cambridge, Mass., burned Tuesday. Edward Kendall & Co., machinists, oc- cupied part of the Damon building, and they also were burned out. The entire loss of the Damon Safe and Iron Com- pany will approximate $200,000, on which there is but partial insurance. In the Kendall shop $50,000 worth of pat- terns were destroyed, and the stock and machinery ruined were valued at $50,- 000. There is $30,000 insurance.

Pittman & Co's mattress factory, on Congress street, was also burned out Tues- day afternoon. The building was brick, six stories high. It was completely gutted. Loss $200,000.

Opportunity.

A golden bird sat in a tree,
And sang. "O people, list to me,
For I am Opportunity.

You have me now—at least you may
This very hour, this very day;
But no one knows how long I stay.

So catch me quick before I fly,
For you in vain may strain your eye
And long for me with fruitless sign.

'Tis passing strange that you, who know
How swift the moments onward flow,
Would still delay and let me go!

Pale Hesitation oft, I ween,
Has brought about that sorrow keen—
That heart-break for the 'might have been.'

Can nought stir up your sluggish will?
Your lives are grinding in Time's mill,
Which whirleth, and stands never still.

Be firm and strong, the moments save,
And let not sad-eyed Failure wave
Her dreary arms above your grave."

—[Lady William Lennox.

AT CONEY ISLAND.

BY AMY RANDOLPH.

"I do so dote on the ocean," said Jenny Smith, ecstatically.

Jenny Smith was going to treat her- to a trip to Coney Island. She a pretty black-eyed young millin- who worked hard behind a counter Grand street most of her time, and ose seldom occurring holidays were ects of real enjoyment. Jerome liff, the young man who kept the ber's shop next door, was going h Hatty Field, who made artificial buds, and John Jelliff had asked Jenny Smith, to go, too.

"I don't know that I can spare the ," said Jenny, thoughtfully.

"Nonsense," said John Jelliff, who s a wagon in the hardware busi- . "'All work and no play,' you w the proverb Jenny!"

Jenny said she'd think of it.

She sat up half the night to "do " her pink muslin dress with the rred back and the immitation Val- iennes lace on the flounces, and to rim the little black chip hat, with moss-pinks hanging over the m—and the next morning John ll looked admiringly at her.

"Good land, Jenny," said he, "you look, for all the world, like a pic- e!"

And the happy young quartette sat y close together beside the guards the Bay Ridge boat, with their ch-baskets hidden by the flaring perics of the girls' dresses, and Harold Dover, who played the net in the steamboat band, and on speaking acquaintance with rriet Field, was ready to tear his r with envy.

And the tall, gaunt spinster oppo- looked on with lofty disdain.

"What fools folks are!" she said to self. "Just because a girl has got k cheeks and a round chin and lashes to her eyes, men think 's a divinity. I know that Jack liff; he put up a new stove-pipe in school-room last fall. And I ow Miss Smith—a port, affected le minx, that trims bonnets for a ing. But I'd just as soon not rec- nize 'em in a public place like this."

If Miss Jane Smith, fourth assistant primary school No. 499, had pos- sed a ready tongue at quotations, could have said: "Noblesse ob- e." But, instead, of that she turned her nose and looked very hard at fortifications on Governor's Island. o recognized the necessity of keep- her place.

When at last they reached the ugly shores of the great Atlantic, merry quartette of working people ablished themselves on the sand, t out of reach of the creeping frin- of the tide, and opened their bas- of cream pie, tongue sandwiches d apricot puffs. While Miss Smith Primary No. 499, who was a deal genteel to go "picnicking," ate repetitious crackers out of her cket, and was exceedingly uncom- fortable upon one of the railed seats alone.

But when the time came for wooing old Neptune in the briny surf, all this became altered. "One touch of nature," says the poet, "makes the whole world kin—" and the same may be said regarding one touch of salt water.

"Valuables, miss?" said the young man at the window, and Jenny Smith put her dollar necklace and one little garnet ring into the envelope and wrote her name, "Jane Smith," across it, as she was bidden to do.

"We must do at Coney Island as the Coney Islanders do," said she.

"But I haven't got any valuables," said Hattie Field, with a cherry-lipped moue.

"Then don't leave 'em," advised Jenny.

Miss Smith, of Primary 499, stalked into the surf like Medea going to her own funeral procession, and rather resented the liberties taken by the sea—until Mr. Jelliff picked up her bathing hat and restored it to her with a bow.

"You are very kind," Miss Smith said, as well as she could articulate with a mouthful of salt water. "Perhaps you wouldn't mind just taking me in to the ropes; I've somhow—"

But here a huge wave tumbled them both over together, and Miss Smith could scarcely have made her way conveniently to land if it had not been for Mr. Jelliff's strong arm.

"The water is rather rough today," Mr. Jelliff remarked, courteously.

"I think I'd better go in," said Miss Smith, the end of whose Grecian nose was beginning to turn of an ominous blue color.

"Well, perhaps you had," observed Mr. Jelliff, who was in a hurry to get back to Hatty Field, whose dimples were something absolutely bewitching under the shadow of her flapping straw hat. But when he returned to the other side of the ropes, Hatty and her companion were nowhere to be seen.

"Where are they, John?" disconsolately spoke Mr. Jelliff.

"Gone, sir!" returned the other. "Said the water was cold and they'd had enough of it. They'll meet us opposite the fireworks inclosure presently."

Pretty soon, Jenny Smith, blooming as a rose, came into the pretty circular room, where the canary-birds sing and the hanging-baskets stretch their green fingers toward the sunshine, with Hatty at her side.

"My valuables, please," said she, with dignity.

"Name?" said the clerk.

"Jane Smith."

"Number, please?"

"16."

The clerk glanced incidently at her badge as he flung it into the drawer, and handed out the big patent envelope which was supposed to be proof against all mistake or deception.

"Dear me!" said Jenny. I didn't think my little ring and necklace would make so portly a parcel!"

And she tore open the envelope. Out rattled a watch and chain, three rings, a plated bracelet and—a double set of false teeth, grinning at her as if they saw the joke of the thing! Jenny Smith uttered an exclamation of surprise.

"Goodness me!" she cried. "This isn't mine!"

"Not yours!" cried the clerk. "Ain't the name Jane Smith!"

"Of course it's Jane Smith."

"And the number 16?"

"Of course it's 16."

"Then it's yours," said the clerk serenely. "We never make mistakes here. Our method is infallible."

"But I never owned a watch and chain in all my life," faltered Jenny, beginning to feel as if she were under a spell. "And those false teeth certainly don't belong to me. And I want my own, own little garnet ring that—"

"That John Jelliff gave me," she was about to add in her bewilderment, but fortunately she checked herself just in time.

"But No. 16 is No. 16," persisted the clerk, "unless—hallo! I say! I'll have to give in mistaken! I was holding the metal badge upside down! It isn't 16 at all—its 91! And I've given you the wrong envelope."

At that identical moment, Miss Smith of Primary No. 499, came mincing through the enclosure.

"My envelope," said she; "No. 91. The name is Jane Smith."

The clerk turned very red.

"I beg pardon. I'm sure," said he, "but there's been a slight mistake. The numbers got upside down. I gave yours to this Miss Jane Smith, and—"

The old maid clutched at her own envelope with a shriek.

"But you'll find all the contents quite right," said Jenny Smith, demurely.

Miss Jane Smith, however, lingered to hear no explanation, but darted out of the pavilion, and has neither been seen nor heard of since.

"It wasn't my fault," said Jenny, gravely.

"Nor mine," said the clerk.

"Nor anybody's," said Hatty Field with a malicious giggle.

And so the Coney Island party went home, much refreshed by their salt bath and day's holiday.

But Miss Jane Smith still remains to be heard from on the subject of sea-bathing and the envelope system. —[New York Ledger.

Reading the Human Face.

Everyone knows that men's passions, propensities and peculiarities, as well as their callings are reflected in their faces, but it is only the few who have made the study of physiognomy an especial pursuit who are gifted with the power of reading those faces. Judges who have served long terms on the bench, lawyers in large practice, and doctors of eminence, possess the power of interpreting physiognomies more largely than other people, but anyone can acquire the rudiments of the art by dint of hard study.

It is as impossible to disguise a face (without putting on a mask) as it is to disguise one's handwriting. When the expert comes the disguise is torn off and the face tells the true story of the spirit inside the body. One only needs to visit the penitentiary to realize how undeniably vice writes its sign-manual upon the features. It is not the drunkard only whose red nose, flabby cheeks and watery eyes betray him; it is the sensualist whose vice is read in his lips, the knave whose propensity is revealed by the shape of his mouth, and the man of violence who has been betrayed by his eyes. An experienced detective or a trained jailer seldom asks the crime of which a prisoner is guilty; he can tell it on the criminal's face. In short, all the advantages which Fowler told us we were going to derive from the study of phrenology we may possibly gain from the older and more mysterious science of face-reading.—[St. Louis Republic.

Sunstroke in Arid Regions.

In the arid regions of our Southwest it has been observed by military surgeons that sunstroke is extremely infrequent when the water supply was not cut off. During our recent war, as long as the troops on forced marches could keep their canteens well filled they suffered little from sunstrokes. But when the water gave out and the soldier's skin became dry, so that the cooling due to evaporation from the skin was arrested, the danger from heat prostration soon became imminent.—[N.Y. Herald.

ARP'S SUNDAY CHAT

He Talks About the Reunions of the Veterans.

And Changes of the Past Twelve Years---How Time Is Destroying Sectional Animosities---Other Topics.

It was good to be there. Twenty years ago a reunion of the soldier boys was a lively gathering. They greeted one another with loud hilarity. They stepped around with a double quick and joked and laughed and cheered immensely. Most of the boys now then between thirty and forty [illegible] they are nearing sixty, and [illegible] twenty years make a difference. Rolling years will change and Anno Domini will tell. The years are all coming this way, and every one gives us a lick somewhere. I used to think that General Young was the finest looking man in the state, and was getting the best of the fight with old Father Time, but I noticed him at this reunion, and he carried a cane and limped. Old Anno Domini struck him on the hip, they say. Most all of the veterans looked older than usual—a little stooped—a little stiffer in the joints. As they sat together in front of the speakers' stand they made a goodly picture, and the picture should have been taken. How solid, how thoughtful, how serene they looked. A consciousness of duty done was set in every feature—no shame, no repentance, no fear, no boasting—they went through the fires and were refined. You can tell a veteran when you meet him in the road. It is said that Jerry Simpson, the reckless statesman, looked upon a gathering of Georgia farmers and said: "My friends, this is the first time in my life that I ever stood up before a native American audience." Where he came from more than half the people are foreigners If the institution of slavery did our region no other good it did that. It kept the foreigners away and it is doing it yet. We are all one people—the descendants of revolutionary sires. Senator Ingalls has been down here and professed conversion. He ought to have been baptized just as soon as he finished that speech so as to make his conversion stick. It was such a sudden conversion that our people are dubious. If a northern man will come down here and live awhile he always gets converted. I never knew but one exception, and that was William H. Seward. He taught school in Putnam county when he was a young man, and the old settlers told me that he courted a pretty girl, and her plantation and niggers, too, and because she wouldent have him he gave up his school and went back and began to write us down as barbarians. Because he couldn't get the niggers he dident want anybody to have them.

But all the other yankee school teachers that I ever knew became good, warm hearted southern men. Dr. Alonzo Church, the time-honored president of our state college, and Hiram Warner, the chief justice of our supreme court, were two of them. I have before me now The News-Democrat, of Canton, O., which has a marked letter written by a citizen of that town and state, who says he came to Georgia in 1839 and taught school in Danielsville, Madison county, for two years, and then studied medicine, and in a few years his personal advantage called him back to Ohio, where he is now practicing medicine. But even the two years in Danielsville implanted a love for those people, and his letter is tender and kind concerning the south, and this last spring on his return from Florida he went to Athens and rode horseback from there to Danielsville, eighteen miles, just to see the old place that had lived in his memory for fifty years, and to inquire after his pupils. What devotion, what affection is that to come from a stranger, a northern man who came south with prejudices and went back without them. Strange to say, he did not find a man, woman or child in the village who lived there when he did. He heard of four of his pupils who still live, only four. Sad and lonely he walked about and repeated to himself the old song:

I feel like one who treads alone, etc.

He says he visited the same old courthouse, where he used to see Garnett Andrews presiding and where he heard Toombs and Stephens and Howell Cobb and Bill Yancy speak. He attended the old time barbecues and heard the band play Old Dan Tucker. He went coon hunting with the young men and helped to hold the dogs while the darkies were cutting down the tree. He defends our people from the slanders that have so long been heaped upon them and says: "My relations to the school and its patrons and the outside public were most pleasant and agreeable. There is a quality of southern blood whether derived from Huguenot or Cavalier which gives them a hospitality unknown in the north—a cordial welcome and a sociality to which we are strangers."

In speaking of slavery he says, "I have seen them sold on the block and at administrators' sales for division, but I never witnessed any such scenes as are depicted in Uncle Tom's Cabin, and kindred works of fiction. The internal suggestions of humanity and self-interest were as rife in slave as in free territory." * * *

While this happy reunion was going on it occurred to me that it had been about two hundred and forty years since Milton said, "Peace hath her victories no less renowned than war." It has been over one hundred years since Ben Franklin said, "There never was a good war nor a bad peace." This seems to be the common verdict of mankind, and yet as long as the devil runs loose there will be wars. In fact, I don't know but what there would be somebody the devil was dead, for we are taught to believe that there is such a thing as original sin; which the devil nurses into total depravity.

Nevertheless, it is our duty to get all the good that we can out of the evil that befalls us. In fact, we would hardly know what good is if there was no evil. We wouldent enjoy health if there was no sickness. We wouldent enjoy prosperity if there was no adversity. And so if there had been no war we would have no reunions of the old soldiers, no glorious greetings, no camping encounters, no thrilling recollections. In fact, we wouldent be here at all, and there would be no eloquent speeches, and words of all, nothing to eat.

Very frequently we are asked questions by our children or the youths of this generation concerning the war that we cannot answer. How many soldiers did Georgia send to the war? How many were killed in battle ordered in the service? How many died in prison? How many have since died? Most of these things are guessed at. Only a few months ago our legislature determined to pension the confederate widows, and the committee had no data to go by and guessed there was about six hundred and fifty, and so they voted them $100 a piece and appropriated $65,000 to pay it. But most of the committee were young men who dident know how long a confederate widow lived, especially if the rival in Carroll county. They say now that over four thousand have been heard from and 140 of them are from Carroll and only half the county heard from.

Now there is some explanation for this. Those were game women who sent their husbands to the war. "Go and fight, and whip them yankees," they said, "I'll run the farm and take care of the children until you come back." Game women are like game chickens—they live a long time—and as for Carroll having so many it was because Sherman ran all the women and children out of this region, and they just dropped over in Carroll, where there was no railroad and a heap of hiding places, and after the war they were too poor to get back again, and they are there yet.

The trouble that now concerns the legislature is how to get out of the scrape, for they have pensioned these widows $100 a piece, and it will take half a million dollars a year to pay it.

Now there are some facts that we do not have to guess at. For instance we know that there were sent from Georgia to the war—

66 regiments of infantry numbering	56,000
25 battalions of infantry numbering	12,500
11 regiments of cavalry numbering	9,350
35 battalions of cavalry numbering	10,200
66 companies of artillery numbering	4,000
Making a total of	92,350

These were the original volunteers, and there were added to them by recruits, 25,000, making a total of 117,350. Not including the home guards.

Now, this is about one-sixth of all the confederate army. Georgia showed her faith by her works.

But what proportion of all the soldiers still survive is a question whose guessing is in order, but it is on record that over 30,000 of them fell or died during the war, and 4,200 of these died in northerns prisions. It is probable that 40 000 have since died, and if that be a fair guess, then about one third of the confederate army survives. The veterans are passing away very rapidly now, and we see before us many an old soldier who will not attend many more reunions. We have no pension rolls to tell us from year to year how many have fallen before the reaper. I believe that pension rolls would tell us down here, though they do not seem to show any deaths up north. I was talking to Dr. Headen about it yesterday, and he said that men who lived on pensions and the bounty of the government and had no care or apprehension about food and clothing, did naturally live a long time. Well, that may account for their not dying, but how does it account for the number increasing. They have now about seven hundred thousand on the rolls, just as many as the confederacy had soldiers, and their records say they lost about seven hundred thousand during the war. Good gracious, what a record. These veterans helped to do it. They did their full share in swelling these pensions to $160,000,000 for the year 1891. They ought to be ashamed of themselves for saddling such a debt upon the country.

But they keep opening the pension door wider and wider. A man can now get a pension if he can't see as good or hear as good or walk as good as he used to, provided he will swear that he believes it came about by reason of his service in the war. The Youth's Companion, of Boston, told us not long ago about a man applying for a pension because he had recently cut his foot with an axe that he brought home from the army. And another paper told of a soldier who recently died and had been drawing three pensions for eleven years. He volunteered as John Tomson, got sick and was discharged; got well and hired as a substitute, and put his name down John Thomson, got wounded and discharged, and hired again as a substitute with the name of John Thompson, with a P. He soon became an invalid and drew three pensions under three different names, and they never found it out until his widow applied and got things mixed up.

But enough of that. It is all mighty bad, but the good of it is they have to pay more of it than we do, and they are getting awful tired of it.

Our reunion was of the survivors of the Fortieth Georgia, commanded by Colonel Abda Johnson, and Phillip's legion, commanded by General William Phillips. Colonel Johnson is dead, but General Phillips was present in the flesh, and looks like he is good for many years to come. It is said that the Fortieth Georgia is the only regiment that never changed its staff officers. The legion was not so fortunate. Excepting the general, the staff was changed many times. Indeed, there six different lieutenant colonels, four majors and four adjutants. I remember that the Eighth Georgia changed its commander four times, and that Company A in the First Georgia regulars, that went out under Captain H. D. D. Twiggs, changed its captain eleven times during the war. Most of these changes are marked "k. i. b." killed in battle, but some are from resignations and some from promotions and some from transfers. The privates did not change much. Death was their main chance. Sometimes the company fought down to the ragged edge. I heard Captain Neal say yesterday that one company in his regiment fought down to one man, and had to stack his arms with another company, for one gun won't stand alone. This reminded me of Jones—poor faithful Jones—an Israelite indeed, whom any town boy could slap around before the war, and he never resented it. But he joined one of the Rome companies, and never left a roll call or missed a battle or struggled on a march. I remember that after a hard day's march, Colonel Towers called up his companies to see how many men he had, and when he called for Company I poor meek-hearted, sore-footed Jones stepped forward and saluted the colonel. "Where is your company?" said the colonel. Jones gave another salute and meekly said: "Kinder kompny." He did not go to the war from courage or for glory, but from a sense of duty. That duty he performed.—BILL ARP, in Atlanta Constitution.

STATISTICAL comparisons show that wages are independent of the form of government. Mexico, a Republic, Malta and Ceylon, under British rule, Algiers and Tunis, French dependencies, pay less than Russia or Spain. The Anglo-Saxon pays more than the German, the German more than the Latin, the Latin more than the Semitic and the Semitic more than the Malay and Mongolian. The highest average wages are paid in the Australian colonies, and the highest in the United States at San Francisco.

Street Driving in Paris.

The noise of the streets in Paris would cause an American to fancy himself at home on the Fourth of July. The average Parisian is no more to be trusted with a whip than he is with a locomotive whistle. From dawn till dawn the cracking of cabmen's whips makes the air tremulous with resonant agitation. Every man who drives a horse carries a long whip-lash, and cracks it incessantly. Crack, spat, spatter, spatter, crack, crack, crack, go the whips in a never-ending chorus all around you wherever you walk, and, apparently in your apartment when you try to sleep. If you want to imagine what it sounds like, just fancy every third or fifth man in New York going about firing giant torpedoes all day and night. These terrible inflictions, the drivers, are quite picturesque. They wear red waistcoats as a rule, and invariably sport tall hats of some shiny material that looks like patent leather. Their hatbands are often of metal, silvered or gilded. They are a pestiferous lot, as noisy with their mouths as with their whip-lashes, and though I had no quarrel with any, I heard of or saw quarrels between them and their fares on all sides. They have no silly scruples against a battle of tongues with a woman, and the American ladies in Paris were often quite terrorized by these noisy malcontents.

There are few, if any, hansoms in Paris, the small barouche being the favored public conveyance. To see a myriad of these flitting about at night is like looking at a festival of lanterns. In places Paris is brilliantly lighted by masses of lights, always gaslights; but in the open places, like parts of the Champs Elysees, where the foliage flings dense shadows, the lamps of the cabs produce a beautiful effect. Buses are plenty, but lest the driver should fail to make the necessary amount of noise with his whip and voice, he is re-enforced by the use of a horn fixed beneath his foot-board, and working by a sort of bellows process. An expert driver is therefore able to make three sorts of noises at once. In Paris the public vehicles are too few and too slow. Paris is as far behind London in means of public conveyance as London is behind New York.—[Harper's Weekly.

The Fast of Ramadan.

Ramadan, the Mussulman's terrible month of daily fasting, is, like the Chinaman's New Year, governed by the moon. This year, precisely at the moment the new moon became visible on the morning of April 8, Ramadan began and continued throughout the lunar month. The origin of this long fast seems shrouded in mystery, as it is said to have been observed by the fire-worshippers long before the time of Mahomet Ali, who thought the command to all true believers to fast for eleven months of the year was too much to require of mortal flesh; through the angel Gabriel he therefore besought the Great Spirit to reduce the time one-half. Finding this still a heavy trial, he again interceded and got the time fixed at one lunar month, where it still remains. During this awful month nothing in the way of food passes the true Mohammedan's mouth between dawn and sunset. In the morning, as soon as a white thread can be distinguished from a black one, the fast begins.—[St. Louis Republic.

There are already seventeen candidates announced in the Wilcox New Era for the various offices to be filled in Wilcox county in August, 1892.

The census of wealth of the country gives nearly $100 per capita. Alabama has increased $74,000,000, ruting well up among her southern sisters.

Mr. Jos. Shackleford, of Elmore, county was elected general manager of the State Alliance Exchange on Monday last to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Mr. J. H. Bostwick.

Hon. Hector D. Lane, of Limestone, has been appointed State Commissioner of Agriculture by the Governor, and Commissioner Kolb will contest his right to the position in the courts.

Henry Clews predicts a steady advance to good times commercially speaking. He makes the point that panics never follow each other in close succession, which is historically true. He sees signs in all the features of the situation of better and more prosperous business, and he sees only what every shrewd man of affairs sees. If we are fully prepared to take advantage of the coming boom of the country we will be in the swim fully and for all we are worth.--Chattanooga Times.

In Tuskaloosa county bad feeling is already being aroused by too much politics and too much public speaking. The next State election is nearly a year ahead, and it appears unnecessary, impolitic and unwise to bring on the war with such a rush. The Democratic and Conservative party is the party that saved the South from the rapacious plunderer. If the fiery element of the party should succeed in eliminating or reading out the conservative element, then the party will be weakened by more than one-half. The conservatives are in the majority everywhere, and their counsel will be worth much in a prospective clashing of the classes.

Lower Cotton Estimates.

The only hope of better prices for cotton is a smaller turnout of the present crop than the one of last year. That was by odds the largest ever raised and there was until three weeks ago good promise of it being duplicated. The latest reports, however, show from various causes, principally rust, that there will be a tremendous falling off from expected yield. It will be difficult to make those who expect to buy believe that this is so, but the testimony is too universal not to force conviction of its truthfulness upon the most doubting. The price of an 8,500,000 bale crop meant an average of not over 6 cents per pound and that meant ruin to thousands engaged in its cultivation. We believe we are in bounds in saying that the crop will hardly go over 7,000,000 bales, and as this will about even up last year's excess at least such a price ought to be realized for the bulk of the crop as well as prevent loss if it does not yield a profit. It is fortunate, too, that there has been such an overwhelming corn crop made. There ought to be no corn brought into Alabama during the next twelve months. There are mill interests in Florida and along the Mississippi coast that ought to be supplied from our great crop. The iron and coal mines, and the towns and villages of Alabama ought to buy Alabama raised corn, there will be enough to do this and it will put many a dollar to circulating here that has been in the habit of finding its home in the pocket of a Western farmer. Live at home and make your own supplies is a much surer road to independence than expecting the Government to become a great pawn shop.—Montgomery Advertiser.

An Independent Farmer.

One day last week a Crenshaw county farmer came to town with 11 bushels of nice water ground meal, 86 pounds of home made bacon, 7 pounds of butter and a basket of eggs. He got $1 per bushel for his meal, 9 cents for his meat, 20 cents for his butter and ten cents for his eggs. He didn't owe anybody and went home with the cash in his pocket.

Making Rain.

The Government experiments to produce rain in the arid region of the Texas Pan-Handle are reported a success. A dispatch from Midland, Tex., to the St. Louis Republic gives the following report of what was done:

Ten days ago the experimenters began operations, and they have kept up a continual skirmish since that time. Some of the most powerful apparatus has not been used to a great extent, but large quantities of rock-a-rock mixture, dynamite and oxhydrogen gas have been exploded on the ground, from kites and balloons. The reading of the instruments which Professor Curtis of the Smithsonian institute brought from the Weather Bureau at Washington clearly show that the operations have marked effects upon meteorological conditions and have produced definite and practical results. The continued series of explosions last week resulted Monday night in an unsettled condition of the atmosphere; light broken clouds floated overhead, and the moonlight shone brightly between them. A heavy charge of rock-a-rock was fired for more than fifty seconds, and forty seconds after the explosion followed the observers were treated to the rare sight of a beatiful lunar rainbow. This operation was repeated four times during the evening, when a light cloud came directedly overhead, and in every case the rain fell in from twelve to forty seconds. The firing was redoubled Tuesday, and the clouds gathered and formed steadily all day until 6 p. m. the rain again began to fall. Before 10 o'clock this whole region was drenched and soaked.

Reciprocity at Home.

The following from the Greenville Advocate contains some excellent advice, and we reproduce it for the benefit of our readers. What is true of Greenville in the particular mentioned, is also true of Clanton:

A young lady recently asked her lover to explain the meaning of reciprocity, and he gave the following definition: "If I should kiss you and you kiss me in return, that is reciprocity." "Why that is nice," she replied, "I thought it meant something bad."

Now we do not mean by this that business men should kiss each other, but it does seem that it is their duty to practice reciprocity at home and help each other along in business. We are sorry to see so many of our people, when they want a few dollars worth of goods go to Montgomery and Mobile to get them, instead of patronizing their friends and neighbors at home. Friends, this is wrong. Each of us are more or less dependent upon one another, and while these little bills seem to be small matters, yet in a year they count up in the thousands. Some say the merchants don't keep the stock. They can't afford to keep it when not one in a dozen will call for the goods. If you will go to the merchants and make known your wants, they will order any goods you may desire, and by giving them your trade it would be an inducement for them to keep larger and more varied stocks, and you would be able to find any article you desired. Help home industry and try to build up your town. A town divided against itself cannot thrive.

Our merchants buy their goods from manufacturers and jobbers and sell as cheap as any town in Alabama. It is all a notion about goods being cheaper in cities than in small towns.

Hundreds of dollars are spent in other towns every year by the citizens of Greenville which ought to be spent with our home merchants. Think of this, citizens, and spend money at home where it will soon come back to you.

And some of our merchants are short-sighted enough to send away from home for their job printing, because some drummer makes him believe that his house in Montgomery, Mobile, Atlanta or some where else will do it cheaper than we will. If they promise to do the work for less, they will either give short count or inferior paper.

INCURRED DIVINE WRATH

It Looks Like Fate is Against the Lotteries. Many Singular Facts.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., Aug. 26.—The fates seem to be against the Louisiana State Lottery Company in its fight for a new charter. When the bill was introduced in the Legislature the lottery leader was stricken with paralysis from which he never recovered. When it was placed on its final passage a stroke of lightning struck the state house, stunning a score of members of the Assembly and extinguishing the lights.

After the passage of nine members who had voted died within two months, some of them committing suicide through remorse. One of them who committed suicide left a note that he was going to hell and he deserved his fate for voting for the lottery bill. His name was Warren and he was a Baptist preacher.

But the most remarkable things have occurred since the campaign opened this summer. In every instance in which the Lottery attempted to hold a meeting or a demonstration the very elements seemed to be against them. In every parish where a lottery meeting was announced the day has been stormy and the country deluged with rain. In a number of instances where the Lotteries have attempted to hold their meetings on these stormy days and in pavilions lightning has played havoc and killed persons who were participating in the meetings.

The anti-lotteryites have been favored with fine weather in all their demonstrations, and their success in fighting the lottery has been beyond their most sanguine expectations.

Their combination with the Farmers' Alliance will defeat the lottery, and its doom is sealed. A large number of people firmly believe that the lottery has incurred divine wrath.

The Drunkard's Bargain.

There's my money—give me drink! There's my clothing and food and fire for my wife and children—give me drink! There's the education of the family, and the peace of the house—give me drink! There's the rent I have robbed from my landlord, fees that I have robbed from my school master and innumerable articles I have robbed from the shop-keeper—give me drink! Pour me out a drink, yet more. I will pay for it!

There's my health, body and peace of mind, there's my character as a Christian; I give up all—give me drink! More yet have I to give! There's my heavenly inheritance, and the eternal friendship of the redeemed; there, there is all hope of salvation! I give up my Savior! I give up my God! I give up all there is great, and good, and glorious in the universe; I resign all forever that I may be drunk.—Selected.

Mostly Fools.

Two doctors disagree about the same case. Two clergymen disagree as to the meaning of the same scripture. Two lawyers arrive at opposite conclusions on the same statement. Two financiers totally disagree as to the outcome of a certain policy. Two farmers contradict each other as to the results of the same condition of growth. Two business men disagree on the effect to be produced by the same method. And so it is in every department of human knowledge. Why should we say our conclusion is the right one, and the other man's all wrong? We are fools, mostly, anyhow.—Exchange.

The Alliance may be counted on always to take the correct stand in a moral fight. Down in Louisiana the Alliance has formed a league with the anti-lottery workers. They will nominate an anti-lottery State ticket, and will make things powerful hot and will probably win too.--Tuskegee News.

Happy Hoosiers.

Wm. Timmons, Postmaster of Idaville, Ind., writes: "Electric bitters has done more for me than all other medicines combined, for that bad feeling arising from Kidney and Liver trouble." John Leslie, farmer and stockman of same place, says: "I find Electric Bitters to be the best Kidney and Liver medicine, made me feel like a new man." J. W. Gardner, hardware merchant, same town, says: Electric Bitters is just the thing for a man who is all run down and don't care whether he lives or dies; he found new strength, good appetite and felt just like he had a new lease on life. Only 50c a bottle. jun11

LOCAL LACONICS.

Chancery Court convenes September 17th.

Mr. R. Q. Lane's mother is visiting his family here.

Grandma Sexton is visiting relatives in Birmingham.

Mrs. Brown, of Lily, is visiting her son, Mr. W. H. Foshee.

Mrs. W. A. Collier is spending awhile at Talladega Springs.

Miss Ada Goodgame, of Clanton, is visiting in Lily neighborhood.

Mrs. L. McCants and children are visiting Dr. Bivings' family here.

Mr. W. B. Duke and family, of Luverne, Ala., are visiting relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Foshee attended the Sunday School Convention at Mulberry church.

Mrs. Dr. J. S. Johnson, of Lily, has been visiting relatives in our town during the week.

Miss Gamma Midleton has returned home after a pleasant visit in different parts of Georgia.

Col. Miles Collier, of Memphis, Tenn., spent one day last week with his brother, Mr. W. A. Collier.

The protracted meeting at the Baptist Church closed Sunday night. There were ten accessions to the church.

Rev. A. J. Briggs has been assisting in a protracted meeting at Seale, Ala. Mr. Briggs was accompanied by his wife.

There is an impression that men like to be petted when they are sick. As a matter of fact, men like to be petted when they are well and can enjoy it.

Mr. O. R. Bell has donated a one acre lot upon which to build a new Baptist Church. The lot is well located and the out look for another new church building is encouraging.

Glaucus Evans, the handsome and accommodating ticket agent at the Union depot at Anniston, has been visiting his relatives in our town. Glaucus is still rising in the world and he deserves his success.

Little Mary Bell Bentley, aged fifteen months, died Sunday afternoon after a lingering illness of several months, and was buried here Monday morning. Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Bentley have the sympathy of the entire community in their bereavement.

The VIEW erroneously announced the death of Mr. William Cooper, at Cooper's Station, last week. The death in the family was that of Mr. Peter Cooper. We are glad to learn that Mr William Cooper is improving. He too has been very low with the fever which carried off his brother.

In our advertising columns will be found the law card of E. M. Barrett, Esq., who has removed to Clanton to practice his profession. Mr. Barrett is a protege of that grand old man and lawyer, ex-Gov. Thos. H. Watts, and Gov. Watts says of him, "Eugene Barrett will surely succeed and reflect credit upon his tutors, and honor upon his own name."

The Clanton Sunbeams had a very interesting meeting last Sunday evening. Six months ago Rev. R. M. Hunter, president of the society, gave twenty of the members a nickle to speculate upon, promising that the two who made the most on their nickle, should receive as a reward a nice book a piece. Fourteen of the Sunbeams reported, bringing up 16.16. John Hayes took the first prize and Claude McCree the second.

The celebrated Hamilton-Brown Shoe Company's goods can be had at W. L. Sampey's store at reasonable prices. They are first class shoes and wear well.

The Colliers Drug Co., with William A. Collier, of Clanton, president, Capt. Jos. P. Johnston, of Birmingham, vice-president, and Mr. E. K. Austin, secretary and treasurer. We wish the enterprise of these gentlemen may meet with abundant success.

We had the pleasure of attending the Sunday School Convention held at Mulberry Church last Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Several denominations were represented and about twenty different Sunday Schools. People from all over the county were there and were well cared for by the good people in the communities of Isabella and Mulberry Churches. A most bountiful dinner was spread in the grove around the church Friday and Saturday. The crowd enjoyed and felt much benefitted by the convention.

Democratic Executive Committee.

By request we publish the names of the county Democratic executive committee as selected by the union convention last summer. Mr. J. H. Bostwick was elected chairman of the committee:

Beat 1—H. C. Young.
Beat 2—J. P. Vanderveer,
Beat 3—D. A. White,
Beat 4—W. E. Stewart,
Beat 5—J. H. Bostwick,
Beat 6—J. W. Scott,
Beat 7—W. A. Raney,
Beat 8—P. M. Moore.

How is This?

The Stanton correspondent of the Age-Herald gives this bit of news:

A report is in circulation that Mr. James A. Stephens, the farmers' alliance merchant at Stanton, will be Chilton county's next probate judge, or, in other words, he has been centered upon by the alliance folks, which, if true, means almost to a certainty that he will be the next judge. Mr. Stephens is a good man and doubtless would fill the office to the best of his ability.

The same correspondent gives the Age-Herald credit for the wide circulation of Mr. A. G. White's good fortune. The item was copied from the VIEW into every daily in the State and then got into the "Alabama News" columns of the Newspaper Unions at Atlanta and Birmingham and in that way got all over the country.

Alliance Lectures.

ED. VIEW: Dear Sir—Please give notice that I will deliver a public lecture at 10 o'clock a. m. to the following Alliances in this county on the dates given below. Anyone opposed to the Ocala demands wishing to join me in an amicable discussion of the same are cordially invited and I will divide time with them and extend to them every courtesy.

Cedar Grove Alliance, August 31st,
Reform South, September 1st,
Evergreen, September 2d,
Shady Grove, September 3d,
Poplar Springs, September 4th,
Center, Sept. 4th, at 7 o'clock p. m.
Providence, September 5th,
Clanton, September 7th,
Walnut Creek, September 8th,
Coosa River, September 9th,
Cane Creek September 10th,
Mount. Zion, September 11th,
Mineral Springs, September 12th,
Collin's Chapel, September 17th,
Union, September 18th,
Rocky Mount, September 19th.

I will also organize Citizen's Alliances at same time if so desired.

LOUIS H. REYNOLDS,
Lecturer for Chilton Co. Alliance, and District Organizer for Citizen's Alliance.

Jemison.

We think the health of the community is as good as could be expected after such extreme changes in the weather. Everything but the open cotton is needing rain.

At Pleasant Grove church, four miles west of Jemison, the Sabbath School Convention of the Mulberry Association, convened on the 29th of August, holding two days. There were many delegates from sister churches to tell of the interest manifested for the little ones. The attendance was large. The sermons and discussions were interesting, while harmony and love prevailed so that all could see the beauty of holiness. The good people failed not to remember that the appetite was to be satisfied, while the soul was being strengthened. On the whole, the occasion will be sweetly remembered by all who love the cause of the Sabbath school.

Three miles east of us, there is an enterprise coming up with mush-room speed. It is a gold mine being worked by a competent company. An engine and machinery have already gone to the gold bed. A MOTHER.

Verbena Views.

Mrs. George L. Smith, of Prattville, is visiting relatives in Verbena.

Miss Annie DeJarnette, of the Capital City and visiting Miss Hightman.

We have had two runaways lately. Mr. Ed. Wingate's horse ran away and tore his road cart to pieces. The horse while running, caused Mr. Frank Baldwin's horse to throw him against a bridge, and hurt him slightly. Mr. George Meriwether's horse ran away with his buggy, but only buggy and harness were injured.

Messrs. Ben and William Strock, Dr. Claughton and Rev. J. M. McCord attended the Sunday School Convention, at Mulberry church.

Misses Nettie and Allie White, of New Orleans, are visiting the family of Mr. G. W. Barnett, of our city.

Capt. C. L. Brown, and Miss Mary Brown, of Autauga, have been visiting friends in Verbena.

Miss Dot Northington, is visiting friends in Autauga.

Mr. Anderson Baker, brought in the first bale of the new cotton, and got 7 cents for it. The cotton crop is very short in this section.

Several gentlemen from Birmingham have been prospecting for gold near Verbena, and it is reported they found some.

I see the Birmingham News has again appropriated one of my pieces from your paper without giving any credit. It was in the issue of Sunday 23d. They call it a special from Verbena.

Contentment.

A lady writer in a Chicago paper thus muses sentimentally. It fits our case just as well as anybody's. It is poetry and truth in prose:

"There is the width of the sea between the meaning of the words contented and satisfied. I may be contented with my lot, but satisfied—never. Owing to the exigencies of the case, I may be forced to be contented with meager surroundings, but satisfied I shall never be. The soul that is content is a sweet soul; the soul that is satisfied is an ignoble one. If the Lord see fit, for some strange purpose of his own, to cast me into the trenches of hard and uncongenial work; if, having given me the taste to enjoy fine favors, he keeps me in the environments of the common place, I may, perhaps, learn to be contented, but when I learn to be satisfied with coarse and cheap things it is all up with any splendid hereafter for me and my soul. The charity boy eating treacle soup out of a wooden bowl is content; the swine dozing in its wallow, the boa constrictor basking in the sunshine of repletion, is contented, but the immortal soul, homesick for heaven and disheartened with destiny, should never be satisfied until the white sail of its release flashes into view."

Tit For Tat.

A rather queer and significant coincidence reported from Americus, Ga., happened on Tuesday of last week, when the third partyists had their great rally. The story is told in this way by the Times Recorder:

"On Tuesday at the big alliance rally the speakers scored national banks generally, loan companies likewise, and the Georgia Loan and Trust company in particular, holding this institution up by name to the detestation of all good alliancemen at the very hour that this was going on, the Georgia Loan and Trust Company had before it an application for a loan of $5,000 from the most noted Allianceman in Georgia, who asked an answer by wire that day.

The Georgia Loan and Trust company sent the following telegram:

"Owing to hostile legislation in Georgia, and the fact that Jerry Simpson is at this very moment engaged here in 'knocking the socks' off this institution, we will call in all loans as they mature, and will have to refuse your application."

An Atchison girl recently refused to marry a man, giving as her reason that she hated the thought that some day she would meet him on the streets and he would not tip his hat to her.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Morris, of Birmingham, spent Monday in our burg and were the guest of Dr. Bivings.

A RIGHTEOUS MOVEMENT.

The New Orleans Picayune says: "However much reason and argument may be opposed to the sub-treasury scheme, the fact remains that it is the backbone of the alliance movement. It is all that seriously separates them from the democratic party. If the sub-treasury plan should be abandoned, there would be nothing distinctive for the farmers to rally around. But it is useless to tell the farmers that there are no constitutional provisions permitting the government to go into the business of lending money. Everybody knows well enough that the government, constitution or no constitution, has loaned money and guaranteed bonds for the benefit of private corporations. The farmers are at the fore, and they are determined to do something for their own salvation. Their measures are crude and will have to be greatly modified to make some of them practicable, but in the end they will accomplish much. They will find in the democratic party much of the relief they demand, and this they will soon discover. But they are engaged in a righteous movement, and we wish them all the success they deserve."

The Iowa Tribune (Des Moines, Iowa) says: Under our wonderful system of finance—"the most perfect ever devised"—the administration declares it to be necessary, to avoid contraction of the currency at a time when more money will be needed to move the crops, to extend its interest bearing obligations as a basis for the issuance of a circulating medium. The simple farmers, also recognize the need of plenty of money at harvest time, and have proposed a plan for supplying it. Under the administrative plan, bonds based upon the credit of the nation are the basis of the additional circulation upon these bonds the government pays 2 per cent. interest, and upon the 90 per cent. of bank notes based thereon, the people pay all the way from 6 to 60 per cent., all of which goes to supply a class who produce nothing and who render no essential service to the country. Under the farmers' plan the government would issue notes on the same security on which the national bank notes ultimately rest, to the men on whose labor depends all real prosperity at a rate of interest to the government which the government now pays on its bonds.

Cottonwood (Tex.) Prodigal says: "There is a tendency among some people to kick at any and everything the Alliance may favor, more (on their part) because it is the Alliance who favor or demand it, irrespective as to whether or not the demands may be good or bad. In the past the Alliance has taken all of the kicks and abuse that has been heaped upon them, not caring to enter into a dispute as to the questions at issue, but that time has passed and the Alliance is not only prepared to hold its own against all comers, but is in a position to assume the aggressive; and as far as Callahan county is concerned, when they are kicked they will certainly kick back, no matter who is the kickee, and they are now strong enough and in a position to do some vigorous kicking on their own account. In the future, if the chronic kickers at the Alliance do not wish to get their feathers ruffled they had better stand from under. Under these circumstances the Alliance will prove themselves to be a full team and a grange dog under the wagon. Babe."

The North Carolina State Alliance made changes in its officers, continuing in office only the State business agent and and secretary. Under the constitution the president is ineligible for a third term. Marion Butler, of Sampson county was elected president; T. B. Long, of Buncombe, vice-president; J. S. Bell, of Clay, lecturer, and the executive committee unchanged. Delegates to the next Grand Council: S. B. Alexander, Elias Cow, W. H. Lindsey and W. L. Williams. A number of resolutions of much importance were passed and several amendments will be made to the Constitution. A resolution went through recommending a change in the ballot system. This demands that North Carolina's next legislature pass a secret ballot law with a provision so arranged as not to disfranchise illiterate voters.

GEORGIA ALLIANCES MEET.

The Georgia State Alliances held their annual convention in Atlanta last week. The meeting lasted three days, and during that time a vast amount of routine business was transacted.

President Livingston was unanimously re-elected as were all of the old board of officers. The convention declared solidly for the Ocala demands, and adopted unanimously a large number of resolutions and measures looking to the benefit of the order.

A more successful or harmonious meeting was never held within the state. Delegates to the national convention to be held in Indianapolis next November were elected. They are: L. F. Livingston, M. I. Branch, K. P. Bell, A. P. Smith and M. A. Baldwin.

Dakota Ruralist, (Huron, S. D.) says: "No better evidence is desired that the Alliance is doing splendid work than is shown in the fact that the entire partisan press of the country is unitedly engaged in a war to break it down. It is thoroughly understood by the power behind the throne of party, that the success of the principles advocated by the Farmers' Alliance and industrial organizations means the destruction of present political parties, as well as to take from money the power it now possesses to rob production. Brethren, resist the effort by putting more zeal in your labor."

The Texas state alliance in recent session at Dallas ratified every plank in the ...ple platform by unanimous vote. The election of ... Jones resulted in the re-endorsement of his ... and the anti-sub-treasury alliancemen ... fused the privilege of the floor, and called a meeting of their own. Nearly all the delegates to the state alliance convention are for the third party.

The Pike County (Ala.) Alliance has petitioned the State Alliance to put in motion some plan for a general reduction all over the South of cotton acreage. It thinks that 8,000,000 bales of cotton for the South means "empty corn cribs, poor stock, half paid preachers, illiterate children and ill, scowling wives."

The following states which have held their annual meetings, have declared solidly for the Ocala demands and the sub-treasury plan: North Dakota, Oregon, South Carolina, Maryland, Alabama, West Virginia, North Carolina, Louisiana and Tennessee.

In the Tennessee State Alliance, in accordance with a general demand throughout the order of the state, the constitution was so amended as to permit the re-election of President McDowell, as an evidence that the Alliance held him vindicated from the foul aspersions of the plutocratic press.

Up to the first of August the Alliance tobacco warehouse at Lynchburg, Va., has proved a valuable help to the farmers of that section, saving them about $7,000 in the storage and sale of over 5,000,000 pounds of tobacco.

LINTLESS COTTON.

A New Discovery Which Promises Wonders.

H. T. Ferguson, a prominent planter of Spartanburg county, S. C., has succeeded, after several years' patient experimenting, in producing a new variety of lintless cotton, which promises to completely revolutionize the production of cotton seed. Mr. Ferguson has been exhibiting a stalk of his new variety. It contains about thirty bolls, each completely filled with large seed, which, when ripe, are black, resembling much in appearance the seed of sea island cotton. The seed produce themselves every year. Mr. Ferguson has taken much pains to perfect the variety, and this year he will have enough seed to plant the entire state. The estimated yield of average land with moderate cultivation, is 400 bushels to the acre. It is as easily gathered as the ordinary cotton, but must be gathered just as the bolls crack, else the seed will drop out. Four hundred bushels of seed to the acre is equal to several sacks of guano as a fertilizer. And the cost of raising 400 bushels is nothing in comparison with the cost of commercial fertilizers. Mr. Ferguson says the yield of oil is about one-third more than ordinary seed.

COLORED BOOMERS

Will be on Hand to Claim Indian Lands.

Dispatches of Wednesday from Guthrie, Oklahoma Territory, state that a movement is on foot to colonize with negroes the Indian lands which are to be thrown open to general settlement on September 12th. It has its origin at Langston City, the metropolis of a negro settlement not far from Guthrie. Agents, 850 in number, of the Langston Colonization Society, are now laboring in the southern states to persuade negroes to come to the new country. Hundreds of negroes have already gone to Langston and have been cared for by colored friends until the time for invasion arrives. Many negroes are arriving daily, and by the time the lands are proclaimed open to settlement, it is believed that thousands of colored people will have arrived on the scene.

THE ROBBERS CAPTURED.

The Leader Makes a Full Confession.

The real robbers of the Central express train at Colliers, Ga., last week were captured Tuesday. The leader of the trio is a young man named Thornton, who was at one time a newsbutcher on the Central road. Thornton made a full even confession, directing the officers to where his part of the boodle was secreted, which amounted to $951. Thornton gave the names of his accomplices in the robbery as Safford and Norton. These men were located by the detectives—one in Macon and the other in Savannah—and were soon landed safely behind the bars.

FEARFUL WRECK.

TWENTY-ONE PEOPLE HURLED INTO ETERNITY.

A Midnight Horror on a North Carolina Railroad.

The fast mail on the Western North Carolina railroad, due at Statesville, N. C., at 2 o'clock Thursday morning, went crashing through Bostin's bridge. Twenty-one human beings were killed outright; a large number were wounded, and Statesville was converted into a morgue. The night was dark; heavy rains had been falling; the creek was high, and what mangling failed to do the rushing waters completed. Of the fifteen passengers asleep in the Pullman coach, not one came out alive.

STORY OF THE ACCIDENT.

Passenger train No. 9, known as the fast mail, which is made up at Salisbury, pulled out on time, 1 o'clock a. m., loaded with passengers. It was composed of a baggage and mail car, second and first-class coaches, a Pullman sleeper and Superintendent Bridger's private car, the "Daisy." This sleeper, which comes from Goldsboro, usually contains a good number of passengers from northern points, and Thursday night was no exception.

The run to Statesville was made on time, a distance of twenty-five miles; but, just after leaving Statesville, there is a high stone bridge, spanning Third creek, and down into this creek plunged the entire train, a distance of at least sixty-five feet, wrecking the train and carrying death and destruction with it.

SCENE AT THE WRECK.

The scene at the wreck beggars description. The night was dismal, and to addto the horror of the situation, the water in the creek was up. It was only through the most heroic efforts of those who had hurried to the scene of the wreck that the injured were not drowned.

The following is a list of the killed: William West, engineer, Salisbury, N. C.; Warren Fry, fireman, Hickory, N. C.; H. B. Lister, baggage master, Statesville, N. C.; W. M. Houston, Greensboro, N. C.; P. Barnett, Asheville, N. C.; Samuel Gorman, Asheville, N. C.; W. E. Winslow, Asheville, N. C.; Charles Bennett, Hendersonville, N. C.; W. J. Fisher, Campobella, S. C.; J. R. ...in, Hickory, N. C.; T. Bradie, drummer, New York; Miss Julia Moore, Helena, Ark.; Pool, Williamston, N. ville, Tenn.; Mrs. traveling salesman; Doc Wells, Pullman porter; John Davis, Statesville, N. C.; Mr. McCormick, Alexandria, Va.; a lady unknown; ticket in pocket reading, "Mrs. George McCormick and mother," Elmwood to Alexander's; unknown old lady; unknown lady, ring on finger, inside of which is engraved, "T. H. W. to M. R. R;" unknown colored man.

Among the injured are: Dr. G. W. Landerlin, state auditor; Colonel E. B. Cameron, Northampton county, N. C.; Otto Ransan, of Norfolk, Va.; Worth Elliott, of Hickory, N. C.; George Bowly, of Atlanta; Colonel O. W. Lawson, of Louisville, Ky.; Miss Lewellan Poole, of Williamston; Mrs. R. C. Moore, Helena, Ark.; A. S. Link and wife, Lexington, Ky.; B. N. Estes, Jr., Memphis, Tenn.; John Gage, Asheville; R. E. Johnston, Newberry, S. C.; Conductor Spaugh; Sleeping Car Conductor H. C. Cleeper; Flagman Shoaf;

LATEST.

Latest dispatches say: It is thought that all the bodies have not been taken out of the debris, which is piled up so high that it is impossible to make a thorough examination. Crowds flocked to the scene all day Thursday and the accident has cast a gloom over the entire community. Not a soul came out of the sleeper alive.

ADDITIONAL PARTICULARS.

Friday's dispatches from Statesville reveal that fearful as were the details of the wreck of the Western North Carolina passenger train at the Third creek bridge, as sent out Thursday, there was no exaggeration about them. The full horrors of the accident can be realized from no written account. It was the most disastrous railroad accident that has ever occurred in the state. All night long Thursday night corpses were being dressed and placed in coffins, and doctors and nurses went sleepless, assiduously attending to the needs of the wounded, who were scattered throughout the town. Statesville never knew such a night. The dead were never more tenderly cared for, or the injured more faithfully attended.

Friday all the stores in the town were closed, business was abandoned and the whole people of the town set about caring, as good as they could, for the dead and the injured. At nightfall they found that in their care were twenty-one dead bodies and twenty eight wounded people. Nearly every one of the dead was crushed in the head.

THE WORK OF TWO TRAMPS.

It now appears pretty plain that this awful disaster was the work of tramps. A rail had been loosened. After the accident it was seen that the nuts had been unscrewed and placed on a rock near the bridge, and that the spikes had been drawn. A short while previous to the accident, two tramps had been put off a train near the bridge. They were troublesome fellows, and the conductor had to use force to eject them. The belief is that these tramps took up a rail in a spirit of revenge.

ADDITIONAL VICTIMS.

The following is a list of the dead not mentioned in previous dispatches: Chas. Webber, Pittsburg, Pa.; Mrs. Frank White, Memphis, Tenn.; Henry Patterson, colored; Unknown man with ticket from Reidsville to Corinth, Miss., and a testament containing the name of A. L. Bigham. The total dead now foot up twenty-two and the number of injured twenty-six FAIR PREMIUMS.

$150,000 for Live Stock at the World's Exposition.

A Chicago dispatch of Thursday says: Chief Buschanne has announced his schedule of premiums in the live stock department of the world's fair. The directors have appropriated $150,000 for this purpose, and, in accordance with an order from the board of control, a scheme has been arranged for a division among the various classes which are expected to compete. The scheme, as presented to the executive committee, provides for horses, about $52,000; for cattle, about $30,000; for swine, about $20,000; for sheep, about $15,000; for poultry and pet stock, about $10,000; for dogs, about $4,000, making a total of $131,000. This leaves a contingent fund of $19,000, which has been reserved by Chief Buschanne for use as premiums in case it is desired to admit classes of animals not included in the present schedule.

THE WIDE WORLD.

GENERAL TELEGRAPHIC AND CABLE CULLINGS

Of Brief Items of Interest From Various Sources.

The American Bar Association commenced its first day's session at Boston, Mass., Thursday.

Charleston, Ark., was visited Tuesday by a $50,000 fire. The courthouse and records were burned.

Up to Wednesday morning sixty-two bodies had been recovered from the ruins in Park place, New York.

Wednesday's dispatches state that an agreemant has been reached between the Lake Erie and Western railroad men and the officers of that company, and the men are returning to work.

A dispatch of Tuesday from Little Rock, Ark., reports great damage being done to cotton in Pulaski county by the army worm. The damage already done is estimated at 20 per cent.

The auditors of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad Company have found a shortage of $15,000 on the books of George S. Osborn, the elevator superintendent, who suicided.

A cablegram of Wednesday from China says: Cholera broke out on the steamer, Namchow, which sailed from Singapore, with 800 coolies for Pen Sing market, and over sixty of the coolies died with the disease, and their bodies were thrown into the sea.

An Indianapolis dispatch says: In accordance with the policy decided upon by the state board of tax commissioners, bankers representing each of the three classes of banks—national, state and private—were arrested Wednesday evening for refusing to deliver to the board the names of their depositors and the amount to their credit on April 1st.

A Washington dispatch of Thursday, says: Bank Examiner Campbell, in a report to Acting Comptroller Nixon, says that the present indications are that the Farley National bank, of Montgomery, Ala., which closed its doors a few days ago, will resume business. The depositors and stockholders, he thinks, will not lose a cent.

A dispatch of Monday from Haverhill, Mass., says: Chick Bros., shoe manufacturers, have discharged all their international union help, owing to inability to arrange a new price list. The old list expired July 1st, since which time unsuccessful efforts have been made to fix pay the ... new one. The firm is willing to advance asked for ... but will not grant the workmen.

Fifty-two well to do colored ... der the leadership of Q. H. Waterford, of Memphis, Tenn., left Kansas City, Mo., Thursday for Oklahoma, where they will await the opening of the Indian lands soon to be thrown open to general settlement. These negroes are from various parts of the South, and expect to found a colony of their own in these lands. It is expected the colony will ultimately number 100,000 members.

Assistant Secretary Crounse at Washington, has issued a circular to customs officers as follows: "In all cases of seizures of spirituous liquors made on account of violations of the customs laws in states wherein local laws forbid the public sale of spirituous liquors, collectors will hereafter hold the articles seized and report each case to this department for such action as will not contravene local statutes."

The Pennsylvania prohibition state convention met at Harrisonburg, Wednesday, and adopted a platform having twenty planks. W. W. Hague was nominated for auditor general, and George Drayton for state treasurer. The first five and concluding four planks of the platform are devoted to phases of the liquor question. The remainder touch upon labor, sufferage, naturalization, education, civil service, taxation, monopolies and and impartial denunciation of the democratic and republican parties.

A dispatch of Thursday from Caldwell, Kans., says: All day Tuesday this town was enveloped in a cloud of smoke, coming from the Cherokee strip. The action of the administration in allowing the Cherokees to hold cattle in the strip has so incensed the home seekers that a meeting was called, and although it was held with closed doors, it is now known that it was held for the purpose of calling volunteers to burn every spear of grass in the Cherokee strip. These volunteers took their departure Monday night and scattered in all directions, and the work of Tuesday is only the beginning of what will be done.

AT FORTY DEGREES.

Phenominal Cold Wave in the Northwest.

Dispatches from Burlington, Iowa, say that the most phenominal cold wave for years prevailed over southwest Iowa Monday. It came unexpectedly, and was so sharp that late garden truck had a narrow escape. The mercury fell from ninety degrees in the shade to thirty-five in less than twenty-four hours, and nothing but cloudy weather and heavy winds prevented killing frosts. Crops in southwest Iowa and adjoining portions of Illinois and Missouri are unusually large, and there is nothing but long continued rains and an early freeze that can injure them. Farmers are not apprehensive of either. The mercury is now about forty degrees above zero.

FROST IN WISCONSIN.

A Milwaukee, Wis., dispatch says: The frost Monday night did great damage to the tobacco and cranberries. Hecodah reports that half of the cranberry crop in that district is destroyed, involving great loss.

BALMACEDA OVERTHROWN

And Valparaiso in the Hands of Congressionalists.

A San Francisco dispatch says: The firm of John D. Spreckels & Bro., of this city, received the following cablegram direct from Valparaiso, Chile, Friday afternoon: "Opposition defeated. Valparaiso is in control of the congressionalists."

Another telegram from Washington says: Acting Secretary of State Wharton, also received the following cablegram from Valparaiso Friday night: "A battle was fought near this city Thursday morning. The government forces were badly beaten. Heavy loss on both sides. The city surrendered to the opposition, but is in the hands of admirals of the American German, French and English fleets for good order. No communication with Santiago. The opposition forces are now entering the city."

McCURRAN, Consignee, Valparaiso.

How to Get Along.

Don't stop to kill cattle in business hours.

If you have a place of business be found there when wanted.

No man can get rich by sitting around stores and saloons.

Never fool in business matters.

Have order, system, regularity, and ...ab promptness.

Do not meddle with business you know nothing of.

Do not kick everyone in your path.

More miles can be made in one day by going steadily, than by stopping.

Pay as you go.

A man of honor respects his word as he does his bond.

Help others when you can, but never give what you cannot afford because it is fashionable.

Learn to say no. No necessity of snapping it out dog-fashion, but say it firmly and respectfully.

Use your own brains rather than those of others.

Learn to think and act for yourself.

Keep ahead rather than behind the time.

He Saw the Point.

A Brooklyn lawyer received a visit the other day from a farmer-looking man, who said he would pay $3 for a little advice.

"Very well," replied the lawyer as he pocketed the cash; "what is it?"

"I want to borrow $200 from a bank."

"That's easy enough. Make a note for thirty or sixty days, and have some responsible party endorse it."

"But I'd have to pay it."

"Certainly—certainly."

"I know how to borrow money without asking legal advice," protested the client. "What I want of you it to advise me how to beat either the bank or the indorser, and come out $200 ahead!"

Betrayed.

People who are sly should be discreet. A lady who had a servant somewhat given to curiosity inquired upon returning from a visit one afternoon:

"Did the carrier leave any mail, Mary?"

"Nothing but a postal card ma'am."

"Whom is it from, Mary?"

"And did you think I'd be reading it, ma'am?" said the girl with an injured air.

"Perhaps not, but any one who sends me messages on postal cards is stupid and impertinent—that's all."

"You'll excuse me ma'am," said the servant, loftily, "but that's a nice, purty way to be talkin' about your own mother!"—Youths Companion.

"German Syrup"

G. Gloger, Druggist, Watertown, Wis. This is the opinion of a man who keeps a drug store, sells all medicines, comes in direct contact with the patients and their families, and knows better than anyone else how remedies sell, and what true merit they have. He hears of all the failures and successes, and can therefore judge: "I know of no medicine for Coughs, Sore Throat, or Hoarseness that had done such effective work in my family as Boschee's German Syrup. Last winter a lady called at my store, who was suffering from a very severe cold. She could hardly talk, and I told her about German Syrup and that a few doses would give relief; but she had no confidence in patent medicines. I told her to take a bottle, and if the results were not satisfactory I would make no charge for it. A few days after she called and paid for it, saying that she would never be without it in future as a few doses had given her relief."

The smallest is the best in pills, other things being equal. But, with Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, nothing else is equal. They're the best, not only because they're the smallest, and the easiest to take—but because they do more good. They cleanse and regulate the liver, stomach and bowels in a way the huge, old-fashioned pill doesn't dream of. Think of trying to regulate the system with the ordinary pill. It's only good for upsetting it.

These are mild and gentle—but thorough and effective, no pain—no griping. One little pellet for a laxative—three for a cathartic. The best Liver Pill known. Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels are prevented, relieved and cured.

Put up in sealed vials—a perfect vest-pocket remedy, always convenient, fresh and reliable.

He Answers A Howling Hyena Up North.

Who Is Angry Because Arp Favors Pensioning the Widows of Confederate Soldiers—New England's Rum Traffic.

"Fret not thyself because of evil doers." The philosophic mind should always be calm and serene, though in these dog-days it is right hard to be composed when Sirius is hurling his malignant influences and the wild spirits are filling the air and hatching discord among men. Paracelsus says that the air is not so full of flies in August as it is with invisible devils. But I know some that are visible, and the Jewish Talmud says they did not descend from Eve, but that Adam had another wife called Lilis, and of her nothing was born but devils, and they overran the country until the flood. How they dodged the deluge the Talmud does not tell us, but I reckon some of them had boats of their own. Certain it is that the germ of malignity was not altogether destroyed, and it has multiplied and replenished like bacteria, and has impregnated the souls of human kind to an alarming extent.

The wicked plotteth against the just, And gnasheth upon him with his teeth.

I was ruminating about this because I had just received a paper from Hutchinson, Kan., called The Interior Herald, which seems to be the malignant republican organ of that region, and its editor came straight down from Madam Lilis, I reckon, and is quite proud of his pedigree. One of my ranch letters about pensions was his text—one of my mild, good-tempered, harmonizing letters that I thought would find a tender spot in the northern heart, for I was asking for pensions for our confederate widows; but it sees us to have disturbed his tranquility and he gnasheth upon us with his teeth and gives my letter great big double-column head lines, and then goes to using language upon us with malice aforethought. He is mad because we build monuments and decorate graves and make speeches and put into requisition all the "rivers of oratory and clouds and waves and cyclones of eloquence to laud the cause and the rebels and Jeff Davis, a murdering, thieving old rebel and traitor." His liver seems to be inflamed because some of the northern republicans are crying out "forget and forgive."

"Let bygones be bygones," and he says they are in line following after Polk and Pennington and Terrell, who once led the rebels, and that "if justice had been done, every murdering rebel would have been hung."

Good gracious! what a sight of rope it would have taken. I'll bet this Herald man would have got up a corner on jute.

Well, of course, all that sort of talk would be funny and fantastic if Hutchinson wasent a right smart town of 9,000 people, and this paper the leading paper in it. What an editor says nowadays is of but little consequence if it expressed his individual opinion; but as a general rule the editor does not lead the people—he follows them—and so it looks bad to see the sign of so much hate and venom still existing among our western brethren. I am certain it is some of his subscribers have left off the red shirt and put on a white one and sworn off from the party, and that is what is the matter.

I thought that all these sentimental questions were settled, and that it was generally agreed that we might love and honor our dead and build monuments and throw flowers and have reunions and hurrah for our side, considering that nothing but sentiment was left us. If a big boy whips a little boy he ought to be willing for the little fellow to cry some and shake his fist and threaten—many a schoolboy has vowed to whip the teacher when he got to be a man. This is what all we are doing—when we get grown we'll lick you. See if we don't. We'll do it by and by how if you'll walk outside the corporation. I'll bet the editor of the Herald never was in the war or he wouldn't talk so big about hanging us. I'll bet he imposed on the little boys at school and fudged when he played marbles. He is in a perfect rage about that confederate monument at Jackson, Miss.—wish he would go down there and live like he writes. He says that a northern man is not safe down south and "is in danger of assassination or open brutal murder" when he proclaims his love for the lost cause and its treason." That is the same old lie that has been denounced a hundred times by northern republicans who live here, but it is a lie as far as the editor of the Herald is concerned. He wouldn't be safe. His old cronies wouldn't hold shucks by the time he got off the depot platform—our boys can stand slander and lies afar off, but a man that is not being it to them. So let Mr. Herald stay at home and shinney on his own side and we will send some missionaries up there as soon as we can. We have no language fitten to use on him. He can consider himself called all the appropriate things that Falstaff called Prince Hal and Prince Hal called Falstaff.

We've got to send missionaries up north or the devil will get more than his share of that people. Boston seems to be his headquarters just now. Mr. Field say in his last Evangelist that a ship has just sailed from Boston with a cargo of sixty thousand dollars' worth of rum for the negroes in Africa. He says the rum traffic between Boston and Africa from July, 1889, to July, 1890, was $656,000, and from July, 1890 to July, 1891, was $1,000,000, which is nearly double the year before. He says that one of the most forcible preachers in Boston asserted recently in his pulpit that the merchants in this business were New England men, and were members of Christian churches, and his assertion has not been contradicted. Mr. Field says: "This rum trade is as disgraceful to humanity as is the slave trade, against which we are fond of protesting. It is carried on not by ignorant pagans, but by cultured Bostonians. How can we shall the church go on spending money and valuable lives for the Christianization of Africa, and at the same time shutting its eyes to the demoralizing of this country by the rum traffic?"

That is a conundrum that we can't answer. It has been long since been demonstrated that New England cared nothing for the negro. Old England won't stop the traffic in opium with the Chinese. Neither will New England stop selling rum to the negro as long as there is money in it. Five hundred dollars a year to the church will hide many a barrel in the hold of a vessel. Rev. Joe Cook denounced Henry Grady and his speech in Boston because he told the truth about the negro, and Cook was cheered to the encore, and he boasted that what he said would be published in over two thousand northern papers and would be believed wherever read, and all of Mr. Grady's clap-trap would go for nought. That is the kind of reception that Rev. Cook gave Henry Grady's overture for peace. And Rev. Theodore Cuyler says that Rev. Cook is a great and good man and he has lately enjoyed his companionship immensely. And so I am done with Cook and Cuyler, too. I have no respect for a man who companions with a man who denounced Grady's Boston speech, and keeps on denouncing us for what we didn't do. Rev. Cuyler wouldn't have denounced it, but I'm afraid he would hire a man to do his cursing.

I saw in your paper not long since a communication signed H. M. D., that proposes to knock all the romance out of Captain John Smith and Pocahontas. He seems to have been traveling up the James river with Colonel George, and Colonel George told him that an old farmer told him that his grandfather told him that his great grandmother told him that Pocahontas was not her name, but it was Tetehee, and she was not a daughter of Powhatan; that she fell in love with Homer Castalwain, a white man, and this made her Indian lover, Bankee, mad, and one day while she was gathering corn he and his followers seized her and carried her away to his tribe. Castalwain appealed to Captain John Smith for aid to recover his girl, and Smith got old Powhatan to lend him some of his warriors, and they made a raid and recaptured the maid and Bankee, too, and Powhatan ordered Bankee to have his brains beaten out with a club, and just as the club was raised to strike the first blow Tetehee threw herself in the way and saved his life—not from love but from pity—and she soon after married Homer Castalwain, and the old farmer who tells the story is her last living descendant.

Well, now it is all wrong to try to spoil the old-time honored story—a story made sacred by the traditions of our fathers, but fortunately it cannot be done in this way, for we still have preserved the colonial history of Virginia, written in 1624, and Captain John Smith himself writes the story of Pocahontas and calls her "King Powhatan's dearest daughter," and tells how she laid her own head upon his and saved him from death, and how John Rolfe fell in love with her and married her, and she afterwards called Lady Rebecca. Captain John Smith then wrote a letter to Princess Queen Anne, of Great Britain, begging that the marriage might be recognized by her and approved.

Rolfe also wrote a letter to Sir Thomas Dale in 1615, giving his reasons for marrying an Indian, which letter I have before me, as taken from the colonial records. I do not suppose that there is any event of colonial history more carefully preserved and authenticated than this heroic act of Pocahontas, and I hope that our children's faith in it will not be destroyed by this uncertain narrative of the last living descendent of somebody named Tetehee. Let the old farmer die in his faith if he wants to.—BILL ARP, in Atlanta Constitution.

UNCLE SAM'S FINANCES.

Debt Statement for August—The Redemption of Bonds.

A Washington dispatch of Tuesday says: The debt statement just issued shows the total interest-bearing outstanding debt to be $610,629,420; decrease since March 1, 1889, $228,576,800; decrease during August, $1,091,216.60; total debt of all kinds, $1,562,956,845.11; total cash in the treasury, $766,602,247.79; net cash balance, $60,274,394.93; gold certificates outstanding, $145,994,350; silver certificates outstanding, $324,218,209; currency certificates $29,185,000; treasury notes of 1890 (bullion purchase notes), $59,686,085; Pacific railroad bonds not included in the above amount of 4½ per cent. bonds continued at 2 per cent. today, $186,000 making the total to date, $23,408,550. There are also about five hundred thousand dollars more bonds in process of continuation.

A circular has been issued extending for an indefinite period the privilege of continuing the 4½ per cent. bonds at 2 per cent. So far $2,500,000 has been received for redemption, and it is expected that the balance of outstanding uncontinued bonds, estimated to aggregate $20,000,000, will be presented for redemption during the next two months.

The net amount of gold in the treasury at present to meet this liability is $132,471,408, an increase of $14,803,686 since the 1st of July, and an increase of $11,858,384 since the 1st of August. Should the entire $20,000,000 be paid in gold, it would not trench on the $100,000,000 of gold reserved for the redemption of legal tender notes.

ANOTHER WRECK

In Which Five People Lose their Lives.

A dispatch from Evansville, Ind., says that Monday morning between Poll City and Troy, Perry county, Indiana, a mixed train, in which were twenty passengers, encountered a broken rail. The engine left the track and dashed down a steep embankment, killing five people and wounding many others. Those killed were: Mrs. John Cavanaugh, Troy, Ind., John Cavanaugh, Troy, Ind., Miss Barbara Namier, Harris township, Ind., Emma Schue, Meinreed, Ind., unknown farmer of Hancock county, Kentucky.

Twittering Swallows.

In and out and under the eaves,
Blown about like the falling leaves,
  Twittering swallows spend the season.
Now the days are shorter and chill,
There come from many a musical bill
  Notes of instinct that sound like reason.

Well have they dined on bug and midge.
Now they are perched upon the ridge
  Of the old barn, that's warped and hoary.
There they sit, bright birds of a feather,
Holding twitter-talk all together,
  Each telling an after-dinner story.

They will follow the summer bland;
To them no land is a foreign land.
  One exclaimed, with a joyous flitter,
"True cosmopolitans are we,
Home is where we happen to be,
  And swallows understand our twitter."

Then, in soft notes I scarce could catch,
One spoke of a nest under the thatch
  Of a cottage where waves the willow.
Another shook his velvet head,
And with his noisy neighbors plead
  To fly with him o'er field and billow.

They talked about all sorts of things;
Sharpened their bills and preened their wings;
  Then away, away, the tourists started,
Sailing over river and main.
Will they ever return again
  To the old homes from which they've parted?

O happy tourists of the air,
Unburdened, free of debt and care,
  Would that I had swift wings to follow
In the flight over land and sea,
With heart as light and wing as free
  As the happy traveling swallow!

Other tourists have gone to Rome;
They will chatter about the dome
  Of magnificent St. Peter's.
Some will to classic Athens fly;
Some to Smyrna's golden sky,
  And dreamy lands for dainty eaters.

And some will sail to Germany,
And sunny France, where they will see
  The Fair, the fashions, beauties, sages;
Some to old England; some to Spain.
Then they will flutter back again,
  And twitter in our printed pages.

TWO DEBTS.

BY GEORGE L. PUTNAM.

When Ashbel Dean died, and his earthly debits and credits were looked into, it was discovered that the credit page was nearly as spotless as the sheet that had covered Ashbel's still form, while mortgages for the full value of the farm were recorded on the other side. Ashbel had been considered forhanded. His neighbors said he "speculated West," and were astonished when his death revealed the fact that he had sacrificed all in an endeavor to save some shreds of his financial reputation.

None were more surprised than his own family. This included the widow and Amanda and Israel, twins, twenty years old. They were crushed. They shrank from it as from the presence of the death—the first one—in the family. For days they dared not speak of it, but it was always in their thoughts. At last the widow roused her energies, and summoned her children.

"We can save the farm," she said. "'Manda, you can keep the district school; Israel and I will carry on the farm. We must all stand together."

For twenty years they were possessed of that one thought, urged by that one motive—to pay the debt.

They stood together twenty years, and at the end of that time they owed no man anything.

The mother looked scarcely a day older. The work of directing had kept her faculties fresh and vigorous. But son and daughter had passed from antipathetic youth into fuller middle age. The debt, unscrupulous and avaricious, had left them no enjoyment. It had robbed them of life's most desirable part.

When Amanda was twenty she was pretty. Gatherings had been incomplete without her. After that she never attended another. The attentions of young men, which came unsolicited, were refused. How she had become this and seldom, she knew she could hope for no return of love's pleasures. [illegible] crowded itself upon her she shook it off as unwelcome. She could give up her school now and devote her time to home, to her mother and brother.

And Israel was free. He took a long breath and stood up straight, easing his galled shoulders of the burden he had just cast off. Life looked pleasant suddenly. He would make some needed improvements on the place. The house should have a coat of paint. He stood in the sunshine, and, looking up through the June foliage of the maples, thought the seed-pods looked like the legs of so many elfin painters dangling there painting the sky. Then he laughed at himself, and said he must be getting young and frisky.

When he was twenty he had thought to be married. Now, at forty, he thought it again. When he stopped his visits to Harriet Downer, she understood why. She had had no "company," he told himself, since then, and his heart gave a great bound at the thought. Why should he not?

One day he came to his mother and sister, and said, bluntly, "I am going to be married to Harriet Downer."

There was silence for a long moment; then his mother said coldly, "We know it."

By the tone and attitude, Israel understood that his mother and sister would not welcome the woman he meant to marry. He understood that they thought the tie of constant effort of the past twenty years as binding as wedlock, and did not wish it broken.

But once after that Israel spoke of his marriage: "I am to marry Harriet to-morrow. Shall you be there?"

And his mother answered, "No."

But Israel would keep his vow to Harriet. The twenty years' struggle had cultivated in him the dogged resolution inherited from his mother.

He married Harriet, and after a week brought her home. No one appeared to greet them.

"Mother," he called, as he went through the house. In two remote rooms he found his mother and sister.

"Harriet is out there," said he.

"And we are here; we shall stay here," said his mother.

Israel looked about dazed. He remembered afterwards that he saw a stove, with pots and pans and dishes, and in the other room a bed, a table and chairs. The two women had made all preparations for living by themselves.

And this was the bride's home-coming!

Yet the married two lived a happy life together. Israel felt keenly the mental misery his wife must endure, and strove to alleviate it by every kindly attention in his power, and she understood his motive, and resolutely hid all traces of pain. Life for each was as the other made it.

There was no communication between the two parts of the house, and no messages passed, no visits were exchanged.

Thus for two years, when a baby was born. Then one day Harriet said to Israel, "Take the baby, and go to your mother." He understood, and taking the child in his arm, went and knocked at the door.

"Who is it?" said his mother's voice.

"Your son and grandson," he replied.

There was a slight noise and a pause within. Then Amanda said, "We are too busy to see you."

He returned, and laid the baby by his wife. She did not need to question him by word of mouth.

Two years more went by. One morning Israel called his wife to come down into the garden. She had [illegible]

Then toddle, toddle away—the little feet knew the path that was forbidden them—straight on through the unused passageway to the door at the end. He pushed and shuffled babily against it.

"What's that queer noise at the door, 'Manda?"

"Sounds like a dog," said Amanda.

But when the door opened, in tottered a baby, triumphant, happy, eager. Every line of his baby face, every curl, had been graven in the widow's heart for forty years, and it suddenly opened to show her the likeness.

"It's Israel over again!" she cried. And in a moment she was on the floor caressing, kissing, the little one.

Blighted Amanda leaned on her broom bewildered, looking at this strange happening. And Israel and Harriet, hastening after the child, stood in the doorway witnessing the first step in a reconciliation.

"Come to mamma, Israel," said Harriet to the child. He looked at her, laughing, over his grandmother's shoulder.

"Tum to mamma," he repeated, taking a step and pulling at her finger.

The widow hesitated but a moment between mother's love and hard, selfish pride. "I will," said she, firmly. "And, 'Manda, put down your broom and come too."

Then, led by the little truant, she came toward Israel and Harriet.

"My children!" she cried.—[Harper's Weekly.

Modes of Burying the Dead.

The modes of burying the dead differ widely among various people. Among some the dead are buried lying, others sitting—as is the case with several of the Indian tribes, among whom it is related, warriors or leaders in the nations have been buried upon their favorite war horses. This was the manner of burial of the famous Indian chief Blackbird, of the once powerful Omahas. There is a remarkable agreement of custom, however, in the practice of placing the body east and west. It is held by some writers that this custom is due to solar symbolism, and the head is placed to the east or to the west according as the dead are thought of in connection with the sunrise, the reputed home of the deity, or the sunset, the reputed home of the dead. There are, however, some tribes that lay their dead north and south, and others bury men with the face to the north and women with the face to the south; while among some of the African tribes, if one happens to die away from his home, he is buried facing his native village.—[Detroit Free Press.

An Accomplished Necromancer.

There is a Makatese witch doctor in the vicinity of Pretoria who puts the famous Indian jugglers completely in the shade. An eye-witness who has adopted the Christian faith, stoutly avers, and he says no missionary will convince him that he is wrong, that the doctor threw an ox hide in the air and it remained suspended in nothing and without support several feet from the ground, so that man sat beneath its shade. This occurred in broad daylight, and a number of natives saw it along with him. The same doctor also took one of the slender Kaffir needles and balanced a mealie-peg pot on it while he made fire beneath and boiled his meat.—[Transvaal (South Africa) Star.

A Lonely Bridal Tour.

Some years ago, while looking at the clock at Strasburg, says Chauncey Depew, I noticed a large party of American tourists making the rounds of that celebrated ancient city. I was told by one of them that while most of the visitors hugely enjoyed the trip, there was, by way of contrast, one among them whom nothing wonderful in nature or art could teach.

The landscape had no charms for him; the Alps did not impress him; the beauties of Paris and Vienna did not evoke his ecstacies. Nothing that he saw had the slightest effect of drawing out the least expression of admiration. Weeks and weeks passed and the rest of the party were dumbfounded at his lack of appreciation of the sights which met them on all sides.

Finally it was decided to send a committee of four, two gentlemen and two ladies, to his room and inquire what it was prevented his enjoyment of the trip.

"Old man," said one of the committee, "tell us what is the matter. If anyone in the party has displeased you we shall dismiss him. If any wrong has been done you, we shall see that it is remedied, but do tell us what the trouble is, for we are trying hard to please you."

"Well," said the unappreciative tourist, "I do not care to say anything about my trouble. I wanted to keep it to myself, but as you have asked me I may as well out with it. The matter is just this: This is my wedding trip—the first wedding trip I ever made, and I am so blamed poor that I did not have money enough to take my wife with me."

A Pure Air Indicator.

One of the many curiously devised instruments patented during the last few years is an apparatus for measuring the amount of impure air which may gather in a room within a given length of time. This odd machine "evolated" from the fertile brain of Professor Wolpert of Nuremberg, Germany. It is well known that air is very poisonous to the human system when the carbonic acid gas in the air exceeds 1 part in 1000.

In order to test the matter and tell exactly when the one-thousandth part limit has been reached, Dr. Wolpert has provided an instrument or apparatus consisting of a vessel containing a solution of soda and phenolphthalein, from which, every 100 seconds, three emerges a red drop through a syphon, which is so arranged as to travel down along a prepared white thread about a foot and a half in length. Behind the thread is a scale beginning with "pure air" (up to 0.7 per 1000), at the bottom, and ending above with "extremely bad" at the top. In pure air the drop continues red down to the bottom, but it loses its color by the action of the carbonic acid gas; the sooner the more there is of that gas present.—[St. Louis Republic.

A Railroad Ballasted With Salt.

There is a vast bed of pure rock salt in the Colorado desert, and the Southern Pacific railway, in laying their tracks to the salt mines, crossed a point where, for over 3000 feet, they were obliged to make a fill and ballast the track with beautiful lumps of pure salt crystals. This is perhaps the first instance in the history of railroading where a track has been laid in and ballasted with salt. Millions of grasshoppers and legions of giant centipedes fell into the salt when it was in a liquid state, and now, after having remained there for thousands of years, they are found perfectly preserved. [illegible]

The Trained Ear.

The master of a locomotive gets to know his engine as a mother does her child. In the darkest night, with the train dashing along at the rate of 45 miles an hour, the engineer hears a slight sound which is out of the ordinary. He not only becomes aware of it by reason of hearing it, but if he were deaf as a post the disorder would be communicated to him through the medium of the throttle. He would feel a slight jar which would indicate as clearly as the sound that something was out of order, and if the occasion warranted a stop would be made at once or the matter would be attended to at the next station.

Telegraphers work entirely by sound, but strange as it may seem, many of them are wholly deaf to sounds other than those of their instruments, says the Philadelphia Record. Any of the chief operators in the main office of the Western Union Telegraph Company can, from one end of their long great room, distinguish with never-failing accuracy which of the several hundred instruments in the room are calling Philadelphia, notwithstanding the constant din of the other instruments. More than this, many of them can determine instantly which operator is sending on certain circuits with which they have become familiar by long service.

The Spider as a Weather Sharp.

One of the simplest and at the same time one of the best barometers is the common garden spider. When there is a prospect of rain or wind the spider always shortens the stays or filaments from which his web is suspended, and leaves things in that state as long as the weather is variable. If the insect elongates his thread it is a sign of fine, calm weather, the duration of which may be judged by the length of the webs.

If the spider remains inactive it is a sign of rain; but if, on the contrary, it keeps at work during a shower the rain will be of short duration, followed by fine weather. Other observations have taught naturalists that the spider makes changes in its web every twenty-four hours, and that if such changes are made in the evening, just before sunset, the night will be clear and beautiful, and the thoughtful spider will stand a fair chance of getting some tender, night-flying insect for his breakfast, the rapture of the spider's nets being made with that point in view.—[New York Journal.

Dragon's Blood.

After a young woman in Philadelphia had made a purchase and had gone the druggist remarked: "That's the first time in five years I've had a call for dragon's blood. What is it? Well, it's a vegetable substance, obtained from the fruits of several small palms in the East Indies. Many years ago it was in great demand among women who wished to win back their recreant lovers, they burning a small lump of it with a certain form of incantation. It was also used as an astringent. That girl has probably to get rid of it from her grandmother, and has determined to test its virtues. Will it work? Well, that I can't say."—[Chicago Herald.

It seems from a telegram published elsewhere that the Alliance of Kansas is burdened with an anarchistic element who want blood. In a conversation with a gentleman last week who had but recently traveled through the States of Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas, we learn that this unfortunate state of affairs is only too true. He stated that the order in the west had a large per cent of foreigners among its membership who had nothing but bitter feeling for the people of the United States and their government, and that if they could by revolutionary means wreck the government their ambition would be achieved.

Under the mortgage and land loan system Eastern capitalists own or control about all the most productive lands in the States mentioned, and the outlook was bad for the farmers in those States. He felt satisfied that this third party movement was but a ruse to divide the South, in hopes of bringing desolation upon this section, and then the western farmer would come south to buy our lands for a song and start out anew. We have heard this view advanced before and have come to think there is much truth in it.

R. G. Dun & Co's report of improvement in business all over the country is encouraging. The report which was published Saturday has the following to say of the crops and monetary situation:

Wheat crop is out of danger and is enormous, undoubtedly the largest ever grown and moving with usual rapidity. Corn crop has been saved and is very large in most of the surplus producing States and even within the range of recent frosts appears to have been in part beyond injury.

Cotton has been damaged seriously in some States, an Alabama correspondent thinks 30 per cent, and New Orleans dispatches represent fifteen to 25 in Louisiana and Mississippi. Some allowances may be made for usual disposition to exaggerate effects of any misfortune, but loss of some part of the entire crop would not reduce the year's supply below the world's requirement, while by causing higher prices it might benefit producers and business in cotton growing states. The fact is that there is serious danger of disastrous over production of cotton in spite of rapid increase in the world's consumption.

Monetary situation is also decidedly clearer and more favorable. Imports of $15,000,000 gold have been ordered through inducements offered by one of the banks, possibly with shrewd regard for interest of customers in the stock market. Foreign news appears less urgent and danger of resistance to American demands for gold is diminished. Removal of German prohibition of American pork imports promises a largely increased demand for important products, and considerable addition to merchandise exports for the year.

JUDGE J. E. DOWDELL.

He Makes Good Arguments Against the Sub-Treasury.

While in the city recently the News took occasion to obtain a short interview with Judge Dowdell, of the Fifth Judicial Circuit. The Judge was free in his views, which showed that he had given the matter study.

"The most serious objections to the Ocala platform," said the judge "are the sub-treasury and the government ownership of railroads. The sub-treasury plank is not feasible, is impracticable and unconstitutional, and therefore can never become a law. There are many serious objections to the present financial system, and just reason for complaint and the discussion of the financial question brought out by the introduction of the sub-treasury plan, will in my opinion, call out a feasible plan which will be adopted. Hence the sub-treasury will do good indirectly in that it cannot do directly.

"What are your views, Judge, on the government ownership of railroads?"

"Have you read Mr. George's letter? He covers the ground. The government in the first place is not able to buy the railroads. The value of the railroads of the United States run up into the billions, and to buy them the government will have to place bonds to the amount of billions; and it would then be a question with the owners of these railroads whether or not they would accept them. Besides it would be hazardous for the government to undertake to operate the railroads, a business which requires so many operatives to conduct. The effect would tend to centralization. The South would be a greater sufferer from a political and financial point of view, should this scheme be inaugurated. Too many offices to fill, and too many negroes to fill them with when the Republicans are in power."

Judge Dowdell is a practical thinker, and handles the question from a logical standpoint, and his views are always valuable on any subject on which he will give an expression. He is in full sympathy with the farmer in his effort for relief, and is an honest sentinel on the watchtower to lookout for the breakers.

To the Farmers.

The following circular has been sent out with the request that "all newspapers friendly to the Agriculturalists will please publish this."

STATE OF ALABAMA,
DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE,
Montgomery, Ala., Aug. 26, 1891.

To the Farmers of Alabama.

In consideration of the probable low price at which the present crop of cotton must be sold, and the high price which all provision crops will command for the next twelve months. In consideration too of the financial crisis now upon us and all the consequent difficulty, not to say impossibility of securing the usual credit for supplies with which to cultivate the crop of 1892; it behooves all prudent men to provide as far as practicable the means of independent subsistence for man and stock at home.

The experience, during the present year of those who failed to produce the necessary supplies at home and in consequence bought corn at one dollar per bushel to be paid for with cotton at seven cents per pound should be sufficient warning to all thoughtful men against a repetititon of such folly.

While the effects of unwise distribution of crop areas cannot be completely overcome before another summer has passed; still much may be done, by wise and prudent forethought, to lessen the baleful effects of the mistake of the current season.

The following suggestions are worth the consideration of every farmer in the State under normal circumstances, and are especially emphasized by the contingencies which becloud our immediate future.

IN THE GARDEN.

The Irish potato, the bread crop of the Irish people, may yet be planted in the lower half of the State with reasonable hope of a successful fall crop. Bed the small tubers from the spring crop, as sweet potatoes are bedded, in some shady place convenient to water; mulch lightly to prevent the surface from baking and keep moist until the tubers sprout. As the plants show above the ground remove both plant and tuber to well prepared soil. Good results are sometime secured by planting the whole tubers, and mulching heavily, where they are to remain. Allow this crop to remain in the ground during the winter, using as needed. If they form near enough to the surface to be in danger of freezing, throw two good turn plow furrows over them. The small tubers from this crop will furnish seed for the spring planting.

Beets and salsify, or vegetable oysters may be sown now and used from the row during the winter.

Continue to sow turnips during September to prolong the salad season into spring. Plant onion sets and sow onion seed in September for early spring use. Sow in a protected southern exposure, cabbage seed, and provide the means of protecting the plants from threatened severe freezes. These will make stalky, hard plants ready for transplanting in February or March next, and will produce earlier and finer heads than plants from hot-bed.

AT THE LOT AND IN THE FIELD.

Sow at once Southern grown rye in drills eighteen inches apart upon vacant beds in the garden, or on a highly fertilized lot near the barn, to be cut green and fed to the cows and mules during the fall and winter. If Southern seed cannot be secured use seed from the spring rye in the North. Northern winter seed will not answer. Sow again in November an area sufficient to grow seed for next season. On very fertile, stiff soils barley will answer as well as rye and is more relished by stock. Sow also some wheat and oats in drills to supply a succession of green crops in the spring. Rye is also the best winter grass to furnish pasturage through the winter in our climate. Sow early varieties of wheat for both stock food and for bread, and sow on the best land after cotton. Sow a liberal area in oats in October of the rust proof variety, and in January or February of some early variety such as the Burt or Ewing.

In early spring when the first corn is planted split cane Irish or sugarcane. Luckily, up north these feed crops to be cut for green-eating may and make during the spring and summer. With this provision for feeding the cows with and abundant supply of green food during the entire year, every family may be supplied with rich milk and choice butter.

Kill part of the pork last of November and the balance early in January. Retain the sides and joints for use in summer.

Have a beef to kill in December and another the first of February. Hang the hams or round steak in a dark cool room without salt and cut fresh steak from it as needed. It may be kept in this way three or four weeks. Rub a little corn meal over the fresh cut surface to prevent crusting and slip a sack over it closely if flies threaten. Salt down the remainder using a "pinch" of saltpetre upon each piece to induce a redder color. Let it remain in salt four days then take up, wipe off all salt and moisture and "corn" down in brine. This will keep perfectly sweet and choice until June, or until the weather becomes permanently warm. By using beef in this way in winter and spring much less bacon will answer.

With proper attention to the garden and poultry the family expenses are reduced to a minimum and yet the table be abundantly supplied with the most delicious and wholesome food.

Begin at once to accumulate material for the compost heap. Keep the cotton seed on the farm, unless exchanged for more than their equivalent in manurial value, and buy only phosphates to mix with these home materials.

Very truly yours,
R. F. KOLB,
Commissioner.

IF BALLOTS FAIL—BULLETS.

Is There a Secret Force Party in the Farmers' Alliance?

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 31.—The Star says it became known during the recent State meeting of the Farmers' Alliance at Warrenbury, Mo., that there was an organization within the Alliance which believed in force as a means of attaining their objects.

It was a knowledge of the existence of this "force element" which defeated the Sub-Treasury resolution. Many delegates who favored the measure, continues the Star, voted against it simply because they desired to defeat the force party.

The force party had forty eight delegates in the Convention. One of them told a reporter about the organization and said: "If the minority will not do what the majority wills, it is high time for the majority to hang the minority. If ballots won't do the business bullets will, and there are a lot of us pledged to go that far."

The secret order is said to call itself "The Anti-Monopolist." Very few if any farmers belong to it. Its strength lies mainly in the cities.

The merchants of Livingston invested $15,000 in western corn before the rise in the crop, and then paid $20,000 for freight on the same to this State, and yet it pays better to raise cotton at 7 cents, than it does to grow corn at 70 cents.

Tax collectors over the State are now on their rounds for 1891. There's nothing so sure as death and taxes.

We have been gladened by a visit from Mrs. Eva McCary and Miss Ella Dudley.

Stanton Notes.

Misses Mattie and Florrie Lister, two of Uniontown's loviest flowers, are visiting Mrs. O. H. P. Wright, of this place.

Mrs. Richard Coe gave the young ladies a very pleasant entertainment last Thursday night which was highly enjoyed by the young folks.

It is generally believed by those who have traveled the road and are familiar with the old, old story, that two young men living no great distance from Stanton and whom we will call "Jack and Bill" for short, have lost their hearts. We do not tell this boys to make you feel confused neither do we blame you, surrounded by such charming and irresistable beauties it would be impossible also selfish not to divide your hearts.

We have a "high" young man in our town who at times seems very glad, at others very sad, and occasionally right mad, but of late he seems to have worn off the madness and is again rejoicing and singing the happy songs of Zion. We would like to know what magic influence is producing these grand and peculiar spells and changes.

Rev. L. G. Hames who has for the past few months been occupying the pulpits at Vine Hill and Stanton Presbyterian Churches, preached his farewell sermon here last sabbath. Mr. Hames leaves his churches to resume his theological course at Clarksville, Tenn. Mr. Hames has won the hearts of all our people and we are exceedingly sorry to give him up.

New cotton is coming rapidly. Ten bales have been shipped up to this date.

The Gregory and Coe Lumber Co., saw mill has been partially stopped for the past two days on account of broken machinery. This is the first time they have been forced to stop this summer, and we believe this is the only mill in this section that has not closed down on account of dull times and scarcity of lumber orders.

Several Stantonites have gone to Selma to-day to see and hear that grand old chieftan, John T. Morgan. We hope Adams and his crew will be there too, and lend attentive ears to wisdom as it freely flows from the tongue of the old "war horse."

Verbena Views.

Mr. and Mrs. Copeland, of the Capital City, have been staying at the Clifton Hotel.

Mr. Rube Duke and Eugene Barrett, of Clanton, attended the dance at the Clifton on the evening of the 1st inst.

Messrs. Barnett Merriwether and Frank B. Baldwin, are visiting friends in Kentucky.

Mr. O. P. Bentley, of Clanton, has been visiting friends in Verbena.

Miss Irene Caffey, of the Judson Institute, is visiting her brother, Dr. Caffey.

Dr. Rousseau's family who have been spending the summer here, have returned to their home in Montgomery.

Pratt Saw Mill has shut down. We don't know how long they are going to stop, but we think they will start up again soon.

Rev. J. M. McCord and family have been visiting friends in Coosa county.

Prof. Lovett, of Shelby, is going to teach school here. We think he will get a fine school.

Prof. Wade, of Marion is stopping at the Clifton Hotel. Miss Abbott Spratling has returned home after a most enjoyable visit to Ashville, N. C. and other places.

Mr. F. M. Billing's family have returned to their home in Montgomery.

Mr. Gurley Gibson, of Fort Deposit, is visiting his brother, Major. J. C. Gibson.

Mr. W. L. Wells, of Vicksburg, Miss., is visiting his father, Mr. Kin Wells.

A mistake in the last issue of your paper made me say, "Miss Annie DeJarnette was again visiting Major Gibson." Instead of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Bentley, of the Capital City, are visiting the family of Major J. C. Gibson.

Dr. O. J. Bivings, of Wetumpka, is visiting his parents here.

Miss Willie Brightman has departed for her home in Hayneville.

Miss Julia Bestwick, of Lowndes, is visiting her brother, Mr. J. H. Bestwick.

Mr. G. L. Werth, of Montgomery, has been visiting Verbena.

Mrs. G. H. Green has returned home after a pleasant visit to relatives in North Alabama.

Died,

On last Sunday evening little Mary Bell Bentley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Bentley. Just 14 months God spared the little flower that its parents might know its sweetness, and then after battling with disease for several weeks, 'twas too weak to combat with death, so with that seeming resignation that might characterize mature men and women, she passed away seeming to realize in the last moment that she was in death's cold grasp, and with one lingering last look her little spirit winged it's flight to God who gave it, only to make Heaven sweeter and make stronger the golden chorus that bids it's loved ones to that beautiful city.

Many cares confront us,
And sorrows, how they sweep,
Round and round us daily,
You and I must weep.

But in Heaven is no sorrow,
Eternal bliss there reigns,
Let earth's dark clouds,
Leave us in shrouds,
Eternity is ours.

The Price of Cotton Advancing.

Low middling cotton went up to 8 cents in Montgomery on August 31st, and on last Monday, the 7th inst., the price held up well at 8¼. The short crop will cause it to take another jump to 9 cents very soon it is thought. Merchants are complaining of dullness and light trade, but that complaint is due to the fact that everybody on the farm is busy gathering the crop.

Citizens' Alliance.

Mr. Louis H. Reynolds, lecturer for Chilton county Alliance, delivered a lecturer at the courthouse Monday afternoon to the public generally. A fairly large audience was in attendance. After the lecture, the speaker proceeded to organize a Citizens Alliance for this beat. The officers elected were the following:

O. P. Bentley, President, W. H. Foshee, Vice President, G. C. Hanks, Secretary, W. B. Nolen, Lecturer, W. M Wilson, Treasurer, J. B. Marlar, Door Keeper.

Lost.

A bright metal key four inches long. Any one finding it, please deliver at the VIEW office.

Many farmers in the vicinity of Selma have in the past few years taken the advantage of their opportunity to borrow money on long time and under real securities. They spent the money with a recklessness prompted by the time they had to repay. Today they own no more property than when they borrowed, they have saved no money and are in debt to the amount of the mortgages. These are falling due, and they only wait a foreclosure to sink them beyond reparation. This would be the most general result of a loan by the government on lands, with the additional fact that the government would own a lot of land upon which they could not realize the money advanced.—Bibb Blade.

We notice from our exchanges that those farmers who have been borrowing money from foreign syndicates are being sold out in many counties. It was fortunate for the people of Chilton that no loans were made in this county. In Elmore, Shelby and Coosa a number of farmers have lost all their land to satisfy the claims of the money lender. This surely makes a bad showing for the farm that is cultivated with borrowed money.

A widow lady was asked the other day what her ideal of happiness was. She promptly replied: "Three h's—husband, health and home." Surely, this was an ideal history summed up in three words.—Decatur Advertiser.

We wish to preserve in mind of our Alliance exchanges a matter most prejudicial which cannot be otherwise than injurious to the great cause of the farmers. It is certainly a mistake to stir up bad blood between classes, to create enmity between country people and city dealers. All classes are required to make a world; there will always be rich people and poor people to the end of time (though we hope the day may come when there will not be so great a disparity as now in the conditions of mankind); these two classes must live together and the happiness of each is more or less largely dependent upon the other.

Lampoons convict nobody, in reality is no argument, sarcasm does not correct old and deep-seated abuses. Violent and bitter denunciation is generally an indication of weakness. We may well take a lesson from our opponents. The newspapers which are the organs of the "money power" discuss every measure in a dispassionate manner; there is no violence and bitterness in their pages; there is the cool and calm conversation of conscious power. They laugh in their sleeves when they read wild and violent diatribes, for they know full well that still waters run deep and that there will be little or no difficulty in damming up or turning aside these noisy and shallow streams.—Alliance Department in Fireside, Farmer and Fruit Grower.

Dr. A. S. Woolley advertises his place at Maplesville for sale. It consists of fifteen acres of fine land with a nine room dwelling, and all necessary outhouses and a large store house on the lot. The premises also afford good water, orchards and a large stable suitable for livery business. A bargain is offered at the price asked. See the "ad."

Specimen Cases.

S. H. Clifford, New Cassell, Wis., was troubled with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, his Stomach was disordered, his liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters Cured him.

Edward Shepherd, Harrisburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Catawba, O., had five large fever sores on his leg, doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India Missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this recipe in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. Noyes, 820 Powers' Blk, Rochester, N. Y. apr16-y

ALLIANCE TALKS.

NEWS OF THE ORDER FROM ALL SECTIONS.

Items of Interest to Alliancemen Everywhere.

The Texas State Alliance, the mother of them all, has held a most harmonious session. There was no division, and everything went off smoothly and amid enthusiasm.

It is not because the Alliance does not know what it wants, but because it does know, that is bringing out such a tirade of abuse from the cess-pool of corruption against it.—Western Call.

The Alliance Vindicator (Sulphur Springs, Tex.) says: "Alliancemen everywhere are learning to ask questions about the stewardship of public servants that are simply paralyzing to a lot of bosses who constitute the court-house rings of our county seats.

The Arkansas Farmer, (Little Rock,) puts it thus: "If this government must depend upon wheat and cotton to bring back our gold from Europe, and keep the balance of trade in its favor, cannot these same products be depended on to hold the gold at home and keep up the balance of trade between our own people? The farmers think so.

The subtreasury column grows. Since our last issue several other states have wheeled into line and declared solid for the Ocala demands. The list up to the present is as follows:

North Dakota, Oregon, South Carolina, Maryland, Alabama, West, Virginia, North, Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia Texas, Georgia and Arkansas.

In all these thirteen conventions there were but three votes against the subtreasury plan.

The Democrat, (McKinney, Tex.) notes: "The Alliance movement had its birth in the South and has spread over the Union, and has broken down sectionalism and united the farmers North and South in one grand patriotic Union to stand by their rights; the North has taken the lead in declaring their independence of the old political parties, and all that now remains is for the Southern brotherhood to go and do likewise. We have faith that they will be with us in '92. The people are coming to save the nation."

Following are dates and locations of State Alliance meetings yet to be held:

California, Los Angles, October 20.
Colorado, October 20.
Florida, Dade City, October 20.
Illinois, Springfield, October 27.
Indiana, November 17.
Iowa, October 13.
Kansas, Salina, October 21.
Kentucky, Elizabethtown, Nov. 10.
Michigan, Lansing, October 6.
New York, November 4.
Pennsylvania, Harrisburg, Nov. 10.
South Dakota, Huron, date not fixed.

The Rural Home (Wilson, N. C.) says: "This meeting of the State Alliance just ended was a most remarkable one. Though the partisan press and their allies would have been glad to have learned that partisan politics had been discussed in this meeting, yet we are pleased to tell them that nothing of the kind did happen, but that there was a unanimity of feeling, a clasping of hands, a touching of elbows without one single break. The sub and county Alliance organizations did their work well in sending such men to this body to represent them.

The West Virginia State Alliance in its recent convention elected the following officers: President, T. A. Houston; Vice-President, J. R. Thayer; secretary and treasurer, B. J. Parks; lecturer, Joel Johnson; business agent, J. M. Sidenstryker; representative to National Alliance, M. Fish. The Secretary's report showed thirty-eight county organizations, an increase of eighteen within the year, while there are 800 local Alliances, with 18,000 members. Resolutions were adopted reaffirming the Ocala platform; leaving the question of a third party open; favoring temperance and urging the importance of a farmers' exchange and appointing a committee to work to that end.

MUST BE ALLIANCEMEN.

It is reported that the committee on legislation in the International Labor Congress in recent session at Brussels, Germany, favored the pledging of workingmen in all countries not to support any candidates for public positions unless they are prepared to advocate reforms in the interest of labor and to support legislation demanded by workingmen. It is evident that the delegates to this convention are in full sympathy with the ideas advanced by the Alliance. It becomes more evident every day that these ideas are gaining ground and crystalizing. The time will soon come when the working people in every line, including many business and professional men, will be arrayed on one side and money lords and smart Alecks on the other. It is a great pity, but if it must be let it come in a deliberate, peaceable way and the world will not be deluged with blood, as it is sure to be otherwise. —Progressive Farmer.

ALMOST AS OLD AS THE HILLS.

The Progressive Farmer (Raleigh, N. C.) says: Some of the opposers of the sub-treasury still argue that it is a new, wild unheard-of thing. Again they say to us that the sub-treasury plan is impracticable, yet this same plan has been tried with abundant success in this country before these young Solomons had existence. Turn back a few pages of your country's history and read about the land loan scheme of the Pennsylvania colony, and the tobacco warehouse system of Virginia, which at the time saved colonists from utter ruin; then read a little French history and see how this same warehouse plan in 1859 brought France out of an extremity of dire necessity and made her people prosperous and happy. Not practical? and here we have the "proof of the puddin'." We admit that it don't suit the ragtag and bobtail politicians, but it does suit the great mass of producers in this country, and they are going to have it. But even if it was untried, common sense ought to point it out many good points. The surplus is now warehoused until consumers call for it, and at a vast expense. During the present century France came out of a war owing hundreds of millions of dollars. Her people are noted for their patriotism. What did they do for a circulating medium? They deposited their surplus crops in warehouses, borrowed money and paid off the indebtedness in a short time. Even yet this sub-treasury plan for the issue of money is used in France instead of bonds.

WHENCE COMES THE OPPOSITION?

From whence comes this opposition to an expansion of the volume of money? From men in Wall street and from the corporations running great daily newspapers in which these men in Wall street own a controlling interest. The men in Wall street are agents of the great capitalists in Lombard street, London, who buy all the surplus food products of the world. These men in Lombard street own our farm mortgages, our bank, railroad, telegraph, mining and manufacturing stocks, and they desire that the interest and dividends upon these investments, running into the hundred of millions every year, shall be paid in cheap corn, cheap wheat, cheap pork and cheap beef. So they put their agents in Wall street "on." And in turn the agents in Wall street put our great newspapers "on." Then the newspapers begin their piping against silver coinage, against the sub-treasury plan, the land loan scheme. The entire conspiracy emanates from the holders of the world's securities and its constant purpose is to buy the labor and products of the world for as low a figure as possible. This can be done by the use of a contracted volume of money. The London Jews found this out several years in advance of the farmers and have been taking advantage of their knowledge for nearly two hundred years. We escaped their rapacity during the war, temporarily, but as soon as the war was over they began planning for the control of our finances, which they easily accomplished by the most villainous pieces of legislation ever placed upon the statutes of a civilized nation. The only question which now confronts the producers of this country is this: Will you pay your debts to the Jews in Lombard street with $7 pork, $6 beef, 50 cent corn, and $1 wheat, or will pay them in $3 pork, $3.50 beef, 15 cent corn and 50 cent wheat? That is the only question there is to be settled. That is always the question every year and always will be the question so long as these foreign bankers have investments in this country, and certainly so long as they continue to own a controlling interest, as at present in all our great banking, transportation and manufacturing enterprises. The picture is perfectly plain. The commonest man ought to be able to see it. A narrow and constantly narrowing volume of money based on gold which is controlled entirely by a few men in London is bound to give the farmers of this country low prices for their produce. By the adoption of the sub-treasury plan farmers would not be compelled to sell the crops just when the buyers get ready to buy. The active volume of money would be increased and with it the price of all produce would take a rise. But the face value of the stocks, bonds and mortgages owned by the foreign bankers could not go up. They could not be made higher to compare with the rise in the value of the produce in which they are paid. The result would be that instead of paying our obligations in a large quantities of the fruits of our toil we would be able to pay them in a small amount. Of course the rest would be ours. And that would represent the profit on our earnings. Of course if the farmer desires to contribute the lion's share of all he raises on his farm to the foreign owners of American railroad, bank and manufacturing stocks and American farm mortgages he wants to keep right on believing what is told him in the corporation newspapers, vote the straight Republican or Democratic ticket and seal his eyes and open his pocket forever. If the farmer is not a silly ass he can be made to see the difference between giving all to pay his debts and giving only what it is just and right that he should give. Will he see it? We think he must and will.—Plain Talk (Vermillion, S. D).

THE JURY'S VERDICT

In the Statesville Railway Horror Last Week.

A dispatch of Monday from Charlotte, N. C., says: The big wreck near Statesville has not yet been cleared up, but it is expected that the work will be gone through with at once. So far no additional bodies have been discovered. Parties from the scene say the character of the stench about the wreck indicates that there are more bodies down under the debris. The wounded are still improving, and it is now certain that all of them will recover. The coroner's jury completed its inquest Monday morning. The following is the text of the verdict:

"The jury find from the evidence and our own personal observation, that the above named (naming the killed) persons came to their death by the wrecking of the train on the Western North Carolina railroad bridge over Third creek, in Iredell county, North Carolina, Thursday morning, August 27, 1891, said wrecking on the train being caused by loose rail bolts and spikes of the same having been taken out by some person or persons unknown to the jury, with tools or implements belonging to said railway company, which said tools or implements were by gross negligence on the part of said railway company, left in an open shed, accessible to every passerby.

We also find that several crossties at and near the breaks in the said railway track, where said loose rail was displaced, were unsound, and should have been replaced, and that the superstructure or bridge was in part defective and unsafe.

Further, that the high rate of speed maintained on running trains over this bridge deserves and has the censure and condemnation of this jury.

MORE TRAIN ROBBING.

Masked Highwaymen Make a Nice Little Haul.

A dispatch from Canon City, Col., says: Seven men held up the east-bound train, No. 4, Tuesday night near Cotopaxi. As soon as it stopped the engineer and fireman were deliberately held up at the point of a rifle. Fireman Aner was relieved of his fine gold watch, and then at the muzzle of seven rifles he was forced to pick the lock and break in the doors of the baggage car. Express messenger, Angel, made a determined resistance and the fight was a fierce one, though it only lasted a few moments. Then one of the masked men placed the cold muzzle of the revolver against the messenger's temple, and under pressure of a threat against his life, he opened the safe door. The highwaymen took $2,600 from the strong box. Express messenger Angel and engineer Aner were in sanitarium, and as soon as the robbery was contemplated they fled.

THE WIDE WORLD.

GENERAL TELEGRAPHIC AND CABLE CULLINGS

Of Brief Items of Interest From Various Sources.

Rev. Mr. Spurgeon is reported as rapidly regaining his health.

The trial of Dr. Mathews, the wife murderer, was concluded at Jasper a few days ago. The jury's verdict was a life sentence.

Census Commissioner Porter received Tuesday the last card, showing the exact number of people in this country. The card showed 62,622,250.

Dispatches of Tuesday say that violent gales of wind, accompanied by furious rainstorms, continue to sweep over Great Britain and Ireland.

A London cablegram says: The marriage of Miss Mary Lincoln, daughter of the United States minister, Hon. Robert T. Lincoln, to Mr. Charls B. Isham of Chicago, took place Wednesday afternoon at Brompton Parish church.

A London cablegram of Monday says: The cashier of the Bank of England declares that there is no truth in the rumor being circulated to the effect that the bank had been robbed of a very large sum of money.

The weavers at the Barnaby gingham mill, at Fall River, Mass., quit work Wednesday, alleging poor wages as the cause. There is also some difficulty with overseers. About five hundred looms are idle. The weavers are not members of the union.

A dispatch of Monday from Washington says: It is estimated at the treasury department that there has been an increase of over $6,000,000 in cash holdings since August 1st, representing a decrease of the public debt to that amount, according to the old form of debt statements.

A London cablegram of Tuesday, says: Austrian and German newspapers continue their excited discussion of the Dardanelles question. While they profess not to believe the report that Turkey has yielded to Russia, they declare that if the report is true it might induce most terrible complications for all Europe.

A Paris cablegram of Sunday says: Agents of the Chilean congressional party have received an official dispatch from Santiago, saying that the congressional party is in control of the capital; that Balmaceda fled Friday night, and that the country is tranquil. Buenos Ayres dispatches say that Balmaceda resigned in favor of General Baquendo.

A special dispatch from Pertle Springs, Mo., says: The subtreasury and loan schemes were rejected by the Missouri Alliance convention by a vote of eight to four. The demands adopted by the convention are the Ocala platform with the the exception of the land loan and subtreasury clauses, which were remanded to sub-unions to decide upon.

George Moerlein, vice president of the Moerlein Brewing Company, the richest concern of the kind in Cincinnati, died Monday morning of pneumonia. On account of the old age of his father, Christian Moerlein, his son George had practical of the immense business of the firm. He was also president of the Georgia Granite Company, and reaped a large income from this source.

At a conference at Leeds, Monday, of delegates from the various labor union organizations of Great Britain, representing 50,000 workmen, a motion to form a federation of unions of skilled and unskilled women was approved. Subsequently a committee was appointed to organize the federation. Unions comprising a membership of 110,000 men have already announced their adherence to the new movement.

A dispatch from Geneva says: Switzerland was startled Monday morning by another serious railway accident—the third within a few months. This time an express train entering the railroad station at Zurich, the capitol of the canton of that name, dashed into a train that was being shunted in order to let it pass. Four of the passenger cars of the train that was being shunted were wrecked and many passengers injured.

Fire broke out in Winnemucca, Nev., Sunday in an unknown manner and spread with great rapidity. The waterworks failed utterly, and every building in the line of the fire except one was destroyed. The total loss will be $190,000; insurance $60,000. The principal losers are Levy & Co., general merchandise, $75,000; insurance $40,000, J. Schmidt, shoe store and residence, $42,000; no insurance. Masonic hall, $20,000; insurance $12,000.

PEFFER SAYS NOT.

He Denies that Missouri is Against the Sub-Treasury.

A Topeka dispatch of Tuesday says: Senator Peffer, denies that the sub-treasury scheme was defeated by the Missouri alliance and says: "The Missouri Alliance has done the correct thing. The sub-treasury scheme is a proposition for the people to decide, and they will be right. The sub-treasury advocates had enough votes in the convention to have carried the plan, but they disappointed the politicians by allowing sub-alliances to settle the question. The sub-treasury scheme was not defeated. It was simply referred to sub-alliances. Had it been a convention of democrats or republicans with a majority, they would have fastened their ideas on the people and the people would have been compelled to submit. The action of the Missouri convention will result in delay, but the alliance states will all have acted on the sub-treasury plan in time for the campaign of 1892, and I think the Cincinnati platform will be practically the one on which the campaign will be fought by the people's party."

DEATH IN THE MINES.

An Explosion of Fire Damp Kills Many Miners.

A London cablegram says: An explosion took Monday morning in Malago colliery, near Bedminster, Somersetshire. A large number of miners were at work in the mine at the time of the disaster. A dull, rumbling sound underground, followed by a cloud of coal dust issuing from the shaft first announced that some terrible accident had happened. An exploring party at once began the work of investigation. They signaled that a fire damp explosion of the most serious nature had occurred, and that they had already found four dead miners. The bodies of these unfortunate men were then hauled to the surface. A moment or so later four other miners, all seriously injured, were brought out of the mine, and it was announced that many others were known to be imprisoned in the workings by caving.

TRADE REVIEW.

Report of Business of Past Week by Dunn & Co.

R. G. Dunn & Co's. review of trade for week ended August 29th, says: Speculation in breadstuffs has broken down. The failure to export at more than about $1.10 for wheat has administered a corrective which this trade greatly needed. The threatened withdrawal of the crop by the Farmers' Alliance amounts to so little that receipts were 11,400,000 bushels for last week, reported against 4,000,000 for the corresponding week last year, while receipts of other grain slightly decreased. Money is moving rapidly to the interior, but the treasury has been strengthening itself, adding $3,800,000 to its gold for the week and taking in $900,000 more treasury notes than it has put out. The official announcement that all 4½ per cent bonds not offered for extension on September 1st will be paid on demand, promises a large addition to the available currency after the first of next month.

Meanwhile foreign news is comparatively unimportant, though the rate of foreign exchange has declined during the week and the prospect of gold imports becomes brighter.

Exports of wheat for the week are about six times those of last year, though somewhat less than a year ago for flour, and much less for corn. The price of corn declined 5 cents for the week, though oats rose one cent per bushel. Crop prospects are in all respects exceedingly bright, and reports of injury by frost do not appear to affect any considerable proportion of the crop. There is every reason to suppose that the yield of wheat will be much larger than 544,000,000 bushels, estimated by the agricultural department, though a yield no greater would leave 200,000,000 bushels for export. Cotton has advanced three-sixteenths on account of reports of injury to the crop in some parts of the South.

The market for iron shows somewhat larger sales and better demand.

The great corner in india rubber has collapsed. London bankers, who were induced to assist Vienna having demanded further margins in vain, and sold a large part of their holdings, so that the price dropped from 85 to 64 cents. The enormous crop coming forward, and the refusal of American manufacturers to buy, crushed the combination exactly as was anticipated. In the boot and shoe trade some increase in orders is observed, and, while coal is weak, there is a better feeling in the market.

REPORTS FROM THE CITIES.

Trade is better at Boston. Business at Cleveland shows some gain over last year and at Cincinnati a fair improvement in groceries; at Chicago receipts of wheat are increased four fold, and an increase is seen in flour, cheese and in the sales of dry goods, clothing and shoes; A heavy increase is seen in trade at St. Louis; improved at Kansas City, and at Minneapolis and St. Paul, harvest prospects being of the brightest. At Nashville the grocery trade is better, but other business is only fair, and very little improvement is seen in Memphis. While trade in cotton is slightly improved at New Orleans and at Galveston, prospects are favorable. At Savannah rain for three weeks has affected the crops and at Jacksonville business is dull.

Business failures occurring throughout the country during last week number for the United States 204, Canada twenty-two; total 226 against 216 last week.

TENNESSEE'S LEGISLATURE

Meets in Extra Session--Important Work to be Done.

The Tennessee legislature assembled in extra session at Nashville, Monday, with nearly a full attendance. Governor Buchannan's message was sent in early, and read to both houses. It is devoted, almost exclusively, to the penitentiary question, and reviews at length the recent conflict between free and convict labor at Briceville. He discusses the four different systems of prison management, and shows what would be done towards adopting either. A lengthy report of the Briceville trouble is given. The power of the prison inspectors should be defined and increased, so that they may say how and where convicts shall be worked. He calls attention to the fact that he has been criticised for calling out the militia, while the authority of his predecessors was never questioned, although exercised upon much less important occasions. He reminds the legislature that if the lease system is wiped out arrangements must be made for the additional burden to the State. The maintenance of 1,500 convicts will cost $200,000 per annum; transportation, $50,000; and the amount paid by the lessees, $100,000; a total of $700,000 for two years, and added to this $300,000 for a new prison, making a total of $1,000,000 that must be raised in two years. If these increased expenditures are made they must be provided for by increased taxation, which should be put upon all property alike.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

The legislature, after hearing the governor's message read, immediately went to work. Bills were introduced in the senate to remove the penitentiary from Nashville and erect new buildings; to provide that convicts sentenced to less than five years shall be cared for by counties; that parties, when convicted of a felony for the second time, shall be sentenced to life imprisonment. A resolution was introduced providing for a committee to confer with the lessees of the penitentiary and see under what terms the convicts can be secured for the purpose of erecting a new prison.

In the house a bill was introduced appropriating $50,000 for the world's fair; prohibiting corporations and firms from issuing scrip to employes. A resolution was offered citing that the lease system is considered injurious to the state; that having 1,200 convicts in the mines deprives that number of free men of work; that the wealth created by the development of the state's resources goes into the hands of a few New York millionaires, and resolving that a committee be appointed to wait on the lessees and ask them to surrender their lease, and that if they refuse that they be asked to take the convicts from the mines and work them inside the walls of the main prison.

A BIG REWARD.

For the Parties Who Caused the Statesville Wreck.

The Richmond and Danville offers ten thousand dollars for the arrest and conviction of the person or persons who removed the rail from the track of the Western North Carolina railroad, near Bostian's bridge, Iredell county, North Carolina, on the night of Wednesday, August 26th. This reward is in addition to the [illegible] offered by the governor of North Carolina.

Queer Legal Decisions.

Attorney and Client.—The following decisions relative to the relations of attorney have recently been rendered:

Authority.—An attorney is authorized to receive money paid the clerk of the court upon a judgment rendered in favor of his client.

An attorney employed to prosecute a suit, in the absence of direction from his client, cannot delegate his authority as such to another attorney.

Where there are two plaintiffs, and one of them has engaged the services of an attorney, and the other, while not expressly employing him, has recognized and treated him as his attorney in the conduct of a case, he is the representative of both, and it is too late to disclaim the relation after money awarded on a judgment has been paid him.

An attorney at law can not by any agreement in pais commute the debt of his client or compromise his suit without express authority so to do.

An attorney who receives from a collection agency a claim in the name of another person cannot retain the money collected thereon to satisfy his demand against the agency for services rendered it.

Sleeping Car Berths.—A husband traveling in a sleeping car has the right to admit his wife, who is also a passenger, into the berth occupied by him, and the refusal of the company's servant to allow him to do so is a breach of contract, though he may have paid for one berth and his wife for another.

A sleeping car company has the right to sell a whole section to one person, and no cause of action arises from the refusal of its conductor to sell the upper berth in such a section to another passenger, though that berth was in fact unoccupied.

Where a berth in a sleeping car has been sold for occupancy to a certain point, no cause for action arises for the refusal of the conductor, before that point is reached, to sell another person a ticket entitling him to such berth from there to the end of the journey.

He Was Ready.

A story overheard ran something like this; "I was sitting in a box in a theatre one evening when one of the men present said: 'I always look around in a theatre for the easiest way of escape in case of fire, or for some way in which I could reach the stage if any accident were to occur there. Now, suppose that actress' gown should take fire. I would step on that garland there, steadying myself by the rail with the arm which held my overcoat, reach my foot across to that frieze in high relief and spring thence to the stage. In thirty-five seconds I should have reached her and have the flames smothered with my coat.'

"I laughed at him. Well, as it happened that very actress' gown did catch fire, and she gave a piercing scream that almost threw the house into a panic. What did my friend do? Forget all about his fire scheme and lose his head like the rest? Not one bit of it. He did just exactly what he said he would do. His coat was around the woman in less time than it took me to wonder at his activity, and the audience was cheering him. It was a sort of discipline with him, you see." Repeated in print for the benefit of those who may have a chance to play the hero some time.—New York Tribune.

The Judge Waited.

The man who forgets his own name, the man who cannot remember where he lives and the other absent-minded fellow who passes his wife on the street and, responding to her smile and bow, asks himself, "Where have I met that lady before?" are all outdone by a wild western jurist. Ex-Governor Furnas of Nebraska tells this story of Judge Broady of Omaha. On one occasion Judge Broady left his office and on the outer door posted a card with the words: "Back again in ten minutes. Take a seat and wait." "At the foot of the stairs," says Governor Furnas, "Judge Broady happened to remember that he had forgotten something. Slowly he climbed the steps and once more he became submerged in his own thoughts. At the door of his own office he paused and read the card on the door. Then the judge deliberately sat down and waited for himself to come back."

The Last Stage.

Mrs. De Fashion—"My, dear, late hours, late suppers, and general social dissipation, have ruined your constitution."

Miss De Fashion (belle of six seasons)—"I know it, ma."

"And your health is miserable."

"Yes, ma."

"And you are losing your beauty."

"It's all gone, ma."

"It really is. And is your plumpness."

"I'm nothing but skin and bones."

"There is no denying it, my dear. You are a mere wreck of your former self."

"Too true."

"What are you going to do about it?"

"Get married."—New York Weekly.

CATARRH.

There's danger in a cough—more than ever when your blood is "bad." It makes things easy for Consumption. But there's a cure for it in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. A positive cure—not only for Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Bronchitis, Asthma and all lingering Coughs, but for Consumption itself in all its earlier stages. It's reasonable. All these diseases depend on tainted blood. Consumption is simply Lung-scrofula. And for every form of scrofula and blood taint, the "Discovery" is a certain remedy. It's so certain, that its makers guarantee it to benefit or cure, in every case, or the money is refunded. With a medicine that is certain, this can be done.

There's a cure for Catarrh, too, no matter what you've been led to believe. If there isn't, in your case, you'll get $500 cash. It's a bona fide offer that's made by the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. There's risk in it, to be sure, but they are willing to take the risk—you ought to be glad to take the medicine.

...hymns were composed by English Episcopalians. Isaac Watts was the founder of hymnology. One hundred and twenty-six of his hymns are in this book. He has been dead 142 years, but we are still singing:

"Welcome Sweet Day of Rest," "How Beauteous Are Their Feet," "When I Can Read My Title Clear," "Before Jehovah's Awful Throne," "Am I a Soldier of the Cross?" and many more of his composing.

He was a very small man with a very large soul. He was only five feet high and weighed less than a hundred pounds and never married. His hymns are sung all over the Christian world. Our grandparents and parents, ourselves and our children have all treasured them and become familiar with them.

Charles Wesley, a Methodist, has thirty-six hymns in this book—most of them inspired from his intense, absorbing love of the Savior—such as "Blow ye the trumpet, blow," and "Jesus, lover of my soul." He was a brother of John Wesley, the founder of Methodism, and came to Georgia with him in 1735.

Rev. John Newton has twenty-six hymns in this collection. What a strange, eventful life was his. Seized and impressed for a seaman on board a man of man of war when he was only nineteen years of age—deserted—was caught and flogged and degraded—deserted again and hired himself to a slave-trading vessel. Four years afterwards he went back to England and married Mary Catlett, the girl he had been loving for years. He then equipped a slaver of his own and shipped negroes from Africa to the West Indies and made a fortune. In a few years he became disgusted with the business, and studied mathematics, Latin, Greek and Hebrew without a teacher. About that time Wesley and Whitfield began their great religious uprising, and he was converted and joined them and went to preaching. When eighty years old he preached three times a week, and when urged to stop on account of his feeble health, he replid: "What! Shall the old African negro trader and blasphemer stop while he can speak?—No!" No wonder that the great change inspired him to write those beautiful hymns: "Amazing Grace! How Sweet the Sound," "One There Is Above All Others," "Glorious Things of Thee Are Spoken," "Saviour, Visit Thy Plantation."

And next comes Cowper—the amiable, lovable, miserable Cowper—whose life was spent in alternating between hope and despair, and was sent several times to the insane asylum. In his lucid intervals of hope he composed such hymns as

"Sometimes a Light Surprises,"
"There Is a Fountain Filled With Blood,"
"Oh, For a Closer Walk With God," and many others.

James Montgomery, a Moravian, has twenty-three hymns in this book. His early life was full of trouble. He was indicted, tried and imprisoned for writing a ballad on the fall of the bastile. Soon after his release he wrote an account of the riot at Sheffield, and was again imprisoned. The press had but little freedom in his day, but his gentle, earnest Christian character finally won for him the regard of his enemies, and he was granted a pension by the crown. There are no hymns in this book or any book sweeter than his. Such, for instance, as "Oh where shall rest be found?" "Prayer is the soul's sincere desire," "People of the living God," etc.

Addison, that stately, polished writer of essays, found time and inclination to pay poetic tribute to his maker. There is no poetry more majestic than the hymns beginning, "When all thy mercies, oh! my God," and "The spacious firmament on high."

And next we have Heber, the gifted bishop of Calcutta, the Christian gentleman who never knew a want, but, nevertheless, spent his life in charity and missionary work. His world-renowned hymn would have immortalised him if he had written nothing else.

"From Greenland's Icy Mountains" still stands as the chief of all missionary hymns. He wrote others of exquisite beauty, such as "Brightest and Best of the Sons of the Morning, and "By Cool Siloam's Shady Rill."

There are many other composers who did not write much, but wrote exceedingly well. There is—

"How Firm a Foundation," by George Keith; "Come Ye Disconsolate," by Thomas Moore, the poet laureate of Eng and; "Awake My Soul," by Medley; "Come Thou Fount of Every Blessing," by Robert Robinson.

Rev. Augustus Toplady has several beautiful hymns, but none compare with his "Rock of Ages Cleft for Me." Sir William Gladstone, the great premier of England, was so much impressed with this hymn that he has translated it into Latin and other languages. Of a later date we find, "Nearer My God to Thee," by Mrs Adams, an English lady.

The oldest hymn in this book was written by Thomas Sternhold, in 15.9. He was groom to Henry VIII. The next oldest is well worth remembrance, for it was written in 1696 by Thomas Ken, and has but one verse, and that verse is sung oftener than any other verse in the world. Its first line is "Praise God from whom all blessings flow." If Thomas Ken is in the heavenly choir and we believe he is, what serene comfort does his translated soul enjoy as it listens every Sabbath to his own doxology as it goes up from a million voices and swells heavenward from thousand of organs all over Christendom.

Then we have hymns from Richard Baxter, who was chaplain to Charles II, and resisted the usurpation of Cromwell.

And here we have hymns from Mrs. Charles, the gifted authoress of the Schonberg Cotta stories, and from William Cullen Bryant, our own poet laureate, and Francis S. Key, the author of the "Star Spangled Banner," and from Mrs. Sigourney and John Dryden, another poet laureate of England, and Henry Kirke White, who died in his twenty-first year, but left on his monument "The Star of Bethlehem." Here, too, is the litany by Sir Robert Grant. And here are many hymns from Dr. Muhlenberg, who wrote "I would not live alway."

And now let me pause to remember that all these men and women are dead. Some have been dead 300 years, some 200, and very many 100 and some for less, but all are dead. But poetry outlives prose, and a song outlives a sermon. It is a comforting fact that the most all of the famous poets have been Christian men and women and have given to the church some of their sweetest and holiest thoughts in song.

...they cannot fly heavenward. And now if the choir and the congregation will enter into the spirit of these beautiful hymns and sing them with pure religious feeling it would be acceptable praise. A song without inspiration is music, but it is not praise. Professional choirs who sing for pay seem to be singing for men and not for God. Such singing is like the funerals that have hired mourners. When the tune fits the sentiment of the hymn, like it was all one creation of genius it greatly enhances the beauty of both. The coronation hymn would not be half so popular if the coronation were not set to it. And this is one reason why the oratorios of the grand old masters, such as Handel and Mozart have never been excelled. They composed both the sentiment and the song.—BILL ARP, in Atlanta Constitution.

CROP REPORT

For September--Condition of Cotton and Corn.

The September report of the department of agriculture, issued from Washington Thursday, marks a reduction in the condition of cotton during the past month of six points, from 88.9 to 82.7. August is the critical period in the growth of the cotton plant, and sixteen times in twenty years has deterioration been indicated by the returns of September 1st. In four exceptional years August averages were relatively low, and the decline had occurred during the previous month.

CAUSE OF THE REDUCTION.

The cause of the present reduction on the Atlantic coast has been the excess of rain, causing an evergrowth of the plant and diminishing the tendency to fruitage. From Alabama westward the drought was the main factor of the loss, assisted by the bollworm and caterpillar. The condition is lowest in Arkansas, Louisiana and Tennessee. In a few counties of Texas heavy rainfall in the morning followed by hot sunshine in the afternoon, has caused a serious shedding of the forms. The most serious complaints are of shedding fruit and leaves, rotting of bolls, sprouting of seed in the bolls, rust, standing of open cotton, except in a few localities where the cotton worms are unusually destructive.

In the area affected by the drought rust and shedding also occur. The sudden extremes of temperature, cool nights followed by hot days, have been productive of similar indications of deterioration. Any cause reducing vitality and threatening decay, produces these frequently indicated diseases and conditions.

STATE AVERAGES OF CONDITION.

The relative degree of loss from these causes is indicated by the state averages of the condition, which are as follows: Virginia 78, loss of 8 points; North Carolina 79, gain of 4 points; South Carolina 81, loss of 2 points; Georgia 82, loss of 4 points; Florida 88, loss of 6 points; Alabama 88, loss of 6 points; Mississippi 83, loss of 10 points; Louisiana 85, loss of 5 points; Texas 82, loss of 10 points; Arkansas 86, loss of 9 points; Tennessee 84, gain of 2 points.

KOLB'S VICTORY.

Governor Jones' Appointment Did Not Hold.

A Montgomery, Ala., dispatch says: On September 1st Governor Jones appointed Hector D. Lane as commissioner of agriculture on the expiration of the term for which R. F. Kolb was appointed two years ago. The last legislature passed a law making the office of commissioner of agriculture elective, and provided that a commissioner of agriculture shall be elected at the next election. Kolb's attorneys claimed that the law making the commissionership elective, which states that it repeals all laws in conflict therewith, repealed the law authorising the governor to fill the time between the expiration of Kolb's term and the time at which the first elected commissioner would take his seat, December, 1892.

THE CONTEST FILED.

Lane demanded the possession of the office and Kolb refused it, on the ground that the governor had no right to appoint. Lane then brought suit before Judge Randolph, of the Montgomery probate court, and the case was argued for two days by some of the best lawyers of the state.

THE DECISION RENDERED.

On Wednesday Judge Randolph rendered his decision, citing the old and new law. He declared that the enactment of the new law repealed the old law, and such repeal made the appointment of Mr. Lane to exercise those rights. The effect of the decision is that Kolb was appointed commissioner of agriculture to serve until the ...

ALABAMA DOTS.

Newsy Notes Paragraphically Presented.

There is some talk of a canning factory being established in Gadsden. One man has signified his willingness to take $3,000 stock. It is an almost an assured fact that the enterprise will take definite shape in the next few days.

The insurance on Woodstock furnace No. 2, which was burned several days ago, has been adjusted and the furnace will be rebuilt this fall. Some improvements will be added, which will render the furnace more convenient and lessen the cost of producing iron.

The contest over the office of Commissioner of Agriculture opened a few days ago at Montgomery before Probate Judge Randolph. Kolb's attorneys started by offering a motion to quash the proceedings because of informality in bringing the action. The court reserved its decision.

The cotton mill at Piedmont is well under way. A very large force is at work laying brick and the contractors say they will have the building ready by December 1. This will be one of the largest cotton mills in the south. The other industries are running along nicely and everything is very encouraging for Piedmont's future.

The sale of $200,000 of Birmingham city bonds made some weeks ago, fell through owing to some technical disagreement between the sellers and purchasers. A day or two ago the bonds were sold to Blake Bros., of New York, for immediate delivery. As the law does not permit the bonds to be sold below par it is presumed that they were disposed of at their face value, inasmuch as they are for "immediate delivery." There was no reference to the price or the rate of interest. The rate is supposed to be 5½ per cent.

The effect of the cold weather on the cotton crop in the neighborhood of Florence is beginning to be noticed now, and the prospect for a good crop is more gloomy at present than at any time during the year. The August crop is shedding its squares and young bolls rapidly, which, in addition to the rust, which has made its appearance during the past week, promises to be somewhat disastrous to the crop. It is estimated that the crop will be 20 per cent. less than it was thought to be one week ago. The damage is general in that section. Not one favorable report having been received from any point in Talladega or adjoining counties.

Heavy Damages.

In the case of Belle Sanders, administratrix of the estate of R. E. Sanders, against the Kansas City, Memphis and Birmingham railroad, on trial in the Walker circuit court, the jury returned a verdict for $13,500. Sanders was fatally hurt in the wreck at Thomas, near Birmingham city, October 21, 1890, he dying about ten days later. His widow, as administratrix, brought suit for damage in the sum of $100,000, the case coming up at Jasper last February, when the jury gave a verdict for $44,500. This verdict was set aside by Judge Head as being for an excessive amount. When this last verdict was announced a motion was made by the defense to set it also aside on the ground of excess, but Judge Head overruled the motion. A fight had been previously made for a change of venue.

An Eventful Career.

There died at Mobile a few days ago William A. W. Spotswood, born in Virginia in 1806, and veteran of three wars. After his graduation as a physician, he was appointed in 1828, to the navy, and served as post surgeon in Florida during the Seminole war. He then served on the United States sloop, St. Louis, on the coast of Peru, and was post surgeon in New York City during and after the cholera epidemic of 1832. Later, he went through a season of yellow fever at Pensacola, and then, as fleet surgeon, served on the coasts of China and Japan. He was in the service again in the Mexican war and was at the siege of Vera Cruz and was twice wrecked on the Mexican coast. In January, 1861, he resigned from the navy and was appointed a full surgeon in the confederate service and stationed at Richmond, where he remained with distinction throughout the war. His life was one of unusual adventure. He was a man of great physical strength and of fine character. His father was Gen. Spotswood. A sketch printed with a record of ... worthiness was issued in 1776 by Gen. Spotswood to ... Washington as evidence of his ... claims to which the ... pensionary was ...

of his death, and after kissing her, placed a 22-calibre pistol to his head and blew at his brains. She was the only person present or in the house when the tragedy occurred, and on her statement the jury returned the verdict of suicide. Since that time, however, the case has taken on another aspect. The people of the community where the deceased lived were not satisified with the suicide theory, as some of them that helped dress the body after death noticed that the hole in the head was much larger than they thought a 22 ball could make. Besides this Mrs. Johnson made several contradictory statements as to the exact manner of the death of her husband. The coroner of the county, not being exactly satisfied with the verdict of the former jury which had been summoned by Esquire Hill, proceeded to summon him a jury and taking a physician with him went to where Johnson was buried and had the body exhumed. Under the knife of the surgeon the ball was quickly found in the back of the heard of the deceased, and instead of being a 22 ball proved to be a 32, or about twice the size of the ball with which Mrs. Johnson said that her husband had killed himself. The pistol with which she said that he had committed the deed was produced, and the ball taken from the head was larger than the entire barrel of the pistol. This, of course, dispelled the suicide theory, and the only thing that the second jury had to do was to find out who fired the shot that killed the deceased. This they failed to do and returned a verdict that the deceased came to his death from a gunshot wound at the hands of some party to the jury unknown, and that the killing was unlawfully done. The whole matter looks very black for the wife of the deceased. She says that he killed himself, that she was present when he did it, that it was done with a 22-calibre pistol, which she produced in court, and when the ball is cut out of his head it is found to be twice as large as the pistol that she produces carries. In addition to the above, Mrs. Johnson reported for parts unknown before the second jury could examine her as a witness.

Still Showing an Increase.

The abstracts of assessment are still coming into the auditor's office at Montgomery. So far the number of counties which have reported is fifty, and the total valuation reported is $117,048,823, which yields a total tax of $492,748.54, for state purposes and a special tax of $58,758.20, for the benefit of disabled soldiers. The abstracts so far show an increase in every county except four or five and the total increases amount to $6,072,991, which give an increase in revenue of $27,067.74. The total gross decrease in the counties showing decreased valuations is $339,454, and the decrease in tax in these counties amount to $992.70. The total net increase in valuation in all counties reported amounts to $6,433,537, and the net increase in taxes amounts to $26,075.04. The following counties are yet to report: Bibb, Calhoun, Cherokee, Clay, Colbert, Conecuh, Crenshaw, Escambia, Etowah, Jackson, Jefferson, Lauderdale, Limestone, Marshal, Mobile, Montgomery, Morgan, Perry, Pike, Russell, Shelby, Tallapoosa, Walker, Washington, Wilcox and Winston. The largest gross valuation is reported from Dallas, being $9,613,068. Talladega is next, with a total valuation of $7,468,819. Both DeKalb and Madison show valuations above $6,000,000. Tuskaloosa follows with a valuation of $5,499,041. Of the forty counties reporting, only three, Coffee, Covington and Geneva show valuations below $1,000,000. Coffee county has the lowest valuation of all counties reported so far, $780,494. The abstract of assessment from Dallas county shows a total valuation of $9,613,089, which yields a total tax of $38,985.08 for state purposes and a special tax of $4,806.54 for soldiers. The total valuation of this county last year was $8,476,330 which yielded a total tax of $36,126.84. The abstract from Geneva county shows a total valuation of $880,735, which yields a total tax of $3,463.98 for state purposes and a special tax of $340.36 for soldiers. The total valuation of this county last year was $781,491, which yielded a total tax of $3,139.58. The abstract from Butler shows a total valuation of $3,173,046, which yields a total tax of $12,736.61 for state purposes and a special tax of $1,267.56 for soldiers. The total valuation of this county last year was $3,272,861, which yielded a total tax of $11,946.22.

TENNESSEE MINERS

Threaten More Trouble Over the Convict Muddle.

Reliable information received at Knoxville, Tenn., Wednesday night from Briceville and Coal Creek shows an alarming condition of affairs there. Whether it is "bluff" for the legislature or "dead earnest" remains to be seen. The information is to the effect that the miners there have determined on turning loose the 125 convicts in the mines of the Knoxville Iron Company. During the late Briceville trouble these convicts were taken out of the stockade, and sent to Knoxville the same day that the convicts and troops were captured at Briceville. Since they were returned and put to work, matters have been going along smoothly, but it seems that the free miners have now determined to play a desperate game.

The coal mining season is opening with a rush, and a large operator says that with no disturbance the miners could not fill the orders by the 1st to October, so great would the demand be. With this turn of affairs, however, there is uneasiness, and operators do not know what to do. Whether the miners will attack the convicts or not remains to be seen, but there is great uneasiness in the entire district. Those who are posted upon the situation, say the public need not be surprised if every convict in the district is released within twenty-four hours. The convicts in the Oliver Springs district will also be released. The programme this time is not to guard the convicts to Knoxville or some other place and surrender them to the authorities, but to turn them free in the mountains, or run them out of the state into Kentucky. Another alarming report is that the forty or fifty free miners whom the Tennessee Coal Mining Company has been working during all the trouble over the convicts, have been notified that they must leave the mine. They are told that if they continue to work in the mine they will be killed. The situation is causing the operators much uneasiness.

IT MAY BE SETTLED.

More of the Convict Labor Question in Tennessee.

A Nashville dispatch of Monday says: The chairman of the penitentiary committee of the Tennessee legislature has received a proposition from the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company, and it will probably be submitted at once to the legislature. As far as can be learned, the proposition is about as follows: The contract providing for the payment by lessees of $100,000 a year to the state is to be canceled. The lessees are to build a new prison at the head of Sequatchie valley, to cost several hundred thousand dollars, under direction of an architect to be appointed by the state. In this prison are to be kept prisoners not able to work in the mines. A stockade shall be built for convicts in Marion, Bledsoe and Sequatchie counties, and able-bodied convicts are to be worked in the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company's mines in these counties, but no where else. The lessees are to pay the state $350,000 for the labor of convicts during lease, running from twenty-five to thirty years. The state is to pay for clothing, feeding, transporting and guarding convicts. The lessees are to be given the site on which the present main prison stands in Nashville. They will give 500 acres of land where the new prison is to be built, on which partially disabled convicts can raise products for their own consumption. The building of the new prison is to begin without much delay, convicts being employed in erecting it. Legislators are of the opinion that it will pass the present assembly with some modifications.

WITHHELD FROM THE PUBLIC

Until it Can be Reported to the Governor.

A Raleigh dispatch of Monday says: It has been finally decided by the railway commissioners to make no report of their finding in regard to the late railway wreck at the Third creek bridge until the regular annual report to the governor. The commissioners first gave out that their finding would be given the public. The present impression of the commissioners is that it is improper in its report to the public before making a report to the governor. A majority of the commissioners and reporters from the board shall not speak concerning the matter, and a request was granted to ...

FASSETT NAMED

As Republican Governor of New York State.

The New York republican state convention met Wednesday at Rochester and nominated Hon. J. Sloan Fassett for governor on the first ballot; John W. Vrooman, for lieutenant governor, by acclamation; Eugene F. O'Connor, for secretary of state, by acclamation; Ira W. Hedges, for state treasurer, by acclamation; A. C. Wade, by acclamation, for comptroller; William Sutherland, for attorney general, by acclamation; Verplank Calvin, for state engineer, by acclamation. Fassett's vote was 514 out of a total of 774. The vote was made unanimous.

AGAINST THE SUBTREASURY.

The Question Brought Up in Tennessee's Legislature.

A Nashville dispatch says: The senate, on Tuesday, adopted a resolution instructing the senators and representatives in congress to vote against any bill embodying the sub-treasury scheme. The vote was 16 to 11. The members of the house have nearly all expressed themselves as opposed to the sub-treasury scheme. But when this resolution reached the house it was tabled, because the members said they had already wasted enough time on resolutions. A large number of explanations were filed, however, and it is judged that they did not want to go on record as either for or against.

DALLAS ALARMED

Over the Frequent Recurrence of Disastrous Fires.

The fire record in Dallas, Texas, for the month of August was greater than that of all other Texas cities combined—twenty-nine fires in thirty days. It has developed that the water supply is sufficient when properly managed. The insurance companies have been hit so heavy and so often that they have advanced rates 50 per cent, and several companies have withdrawn their agencies from the city. This state of affairs has filled the citizens of Dallas with alarm, as no tangible solution of the origin of these numerous and disastrous conflagrations can be arrived at.

"Welcome Sweet Day of Rest," "How Beauteous Are Their Feet." "When I Can Read My Title Clear," "Before Jehovah's Awful Throne," "Am I a Soldier of the Cross?" and many more of his composing.

He was a very small man with a very large soul. He was only five feet high and weighed less than a hundred pounds and never married. His hymns are sung all over the Christian world. Our grandparents and parents, ourselves and our children have all treasured them and become familiar with them.

Charles Wesley, a Methodist, has thirty-six hymns in this book—most of them inspired from his intense, absorbing love of the Savior—such as "Blow ye the trumpet, blow," and "Jesus, lover of my soul." He was a brother of John Wesley, the founder of Methodism, and came to Georgia with him in 1735.

Rev. John Newton has twenty-six hymns in this collection. What a strange, eventful life was his. Seized and impressed for a seaman on board a man of man of war when he was only nineteen years of age—deserted—was caught and flogged and degraded—deserted again and hired himself to a slave-trading vessel. Four years afterwards he went back to England and married Mary Catlett, the girl he had been loving for years. He then equipped a slaver of his own and shipped negroes from Africa to the West Indies and made a fortune. In a few years he became disgusted with the business, and studied mathematics, Latin, Greek and Hebrew without a teacher. About that time Wesley and Whitfield began their great religious uprising, and he was converted and joined them and went to preaching. When eighty years old he preached three times a week, and when urged to stop on account of his feeble health, he replid: "What! Shall the old African negro trader and blasphemer stop while he can speak?—No!" No wonder that the great change inspired him to write those beautiful hymns: "Amazing Grace! How Sweet the Sound," "One There Is Above All Others," "Glorious Things of Thee Art Spoken," "Saviour, Visit Thy Plantation."

And next comes Cowper—the amiable, lovable, miserable Cowper—whose life was spent in alternating between hope and despair, and was sent several times to the insane asylum. In his lucid intervals of hope he composed such hymns as

"Sometimes a Light Surprises,"
"There Is a Fountain Filled With Blood,"
"Oh, For a Closer Walk With God," and many others.

James Montgomery, a Moravian, has twenty-three hymns in this book. His early life was full of trouble. He was indicted, tried and imprisoned for writing a ballad on the fall of the bastile. Soon after his release he wrote an account of the riot at Sheffield, and was again imprisoned. The press had but little freedom in his day, but his gentle, earnest Christian character finally won for him the regard of his enemies, and he was granted a pension by the crown. There are no hymns in this book or any book sweeter than his. Such, for instance, as "Oh where shall rest be found?" "Prayer is the soul's sincere desire," "People of the living God," etc.

Addison, that stately, polished writer of essays, found time and inclination to pay poetic tribute to his maker. There is no poetry more majestic than the hymns beginning, "When all thy mercies, oh! my God," and "The spacious firmament on high."

And next we have Heber, the gifted bishop of Calcutta, the Christian gentleman who never knew a want, but, nevertheless, spent his life in charity and missionary work. His world-renowned hymn would have immortalised him if he had written nothing else.

"From Greenland's Icy Mountains" still stands as the chief of all missionary hymns. He wrote others of exquisite beauty, such as "Brightest and Best of the Sons of the Morning, and "By Cool Siloam's Shady Rill."

There are many other composers who did not write much, but wrote exceedingly well. There is—

"How Firm a Foundation," by George Keith; "Come Ye Disconsolate," by Thomas Moore, the poet laureate of England; "Awake My Soul," by Medley; "Come Thou Fount of Every Blessing," by Robert Robinson.

Rev. Augustus Toplady has several beautiful hymns, but none compare with his "Rock of Ages Cleft for Me." Sir William Gladstone, the great premier of England, was so much impressed with this hymn that he has translated it into Latin and other languages. Of a later date we find, "Nearer My God to Thee," by Mrs. Adams, an English lady.

The oldest hymn in this book was written by Thomas Sternbold, in 1549. He was groom to Henry VIII. The next oldest is well worth remembrance, for it was written in 1600 by Thomas Ken, and has but one verse, and that verse is sung oftener than any other verse in the world. Its first line is "Praise God from whom all blessings flow." If Thomas Ken is in the heavenly choir (and we believe he is), what serene comfort does his translated soul enjoy as it listens every Sabbath to his own doxology as it goes up from a million voices and swells heavenward from thousand of organs all over Christendom.

Then we have hymns from Richard Baxter, who was chaplain to Charles II, and resisted the usurpation of Cromwell.

And here we have hymns from Mrs. Charles, the gifted authoress of the Schonberg Cotta stories, and from William Cullen Bryant, our own poet laureate, and Francis S. Key, the author of the "Star Spangled Banner," and from Mrs. Sigourney and John Dryden, another poet laureate of England, and Henry Kirke White, who died in his twenty-first year, but left on his monument "The Star of Bethlehem." Here, too, is the litany by Sir Robert Grant. And here are many hymns from Dr. Muhlenberg, who wrote: "I would not live alway."

And now let me pause to remember that all these men and women are dead. Some have been dead 300 years, some 200, and very many 100 and some for less, but all are dead. But poetry outlives prose, and a song outlives a sermon. It is a comforting fact that most all of the famous poets have been Christian men and women and have given to the church songs of their ...

...they cannot fly heavenward. And now if the choir and the congregation will enter into the spirit of these beautiful hymns and sing them with pure religious feeling it would be acceptable praise. A song without inspiration is music, but it is not praise. Professional choirs who sing for pay seem to be singing for men and not for God. Such singing is like the funerals that have hired mourners. When the tune fits the sentiment of the hymn, like it was all one creation of genius it greatly enhances the beauty of both. The coronation hymn would not be half so popular if the coronation were not set to it. And this is one reason why the oratorios of the grand old masters, such as Handel and Mozart have never been excelled. They composed both the sentiment and the song.—BILL ARP, in Atlanta Constitution.

CROP REPORT

For September--Condition of Cotton and Corn.

The September report of the department of agriculture, issued from Washington Thursday, marks a reduction in the condition of cotton during the past month of six points, from 88.9 to 82.7. August is the critical period in the growth of the cotton plant, and sixteen times in twenty years has deterioration been indicated by the returns of September 1st. In four exceptional years August averages were relatively low, and the decline had occurred during the previous month.

CAUSE OF THE REDUCTION.

The cause of the present reduction on the Atlantic coast has been the excess of rain, causing an evergrowth of the plant and diminishing the tendency to fruitage. From Alabama westward the drought was the main factor of the loss, assisted by the bollworm and caterpillar. The condition is lowest in Arkansas, Louisiana and Tennessee. In a few counties of Texas heavy rainfall in the morning followed by hot sunshine in the afternoon, has caused a serious shedding of the forms. The most serious complaints are of shedding fruit and leaves, rotting of bolls, sprouting of seed in the bolls, rust, standing of open cotton, except in a few localities where the cotton worms are unusually destructive.

In the area affected by the drought rust and shedding also occur. The sudden extremes of temperature, cool nights followed by hot days, have been productive of similar indications of deterioration. Any cause reducing vitality and threatening decay, produces these frequently indicated diseases and conditions.

STATE AVERAGES OF CONDITION.

The relative degree of loss from these causes is indicated by the state averages of the condition, which are as follows: Virginia 78, loss of 8 points; North Carolina 79, gain of 4 points; South Carolina 81, loss of 2 points; Georgia 83, loss of 4 points; Florida 88, loss of 6 points; Alabama 83, loss of 6 points; Mississippi 83, loss of 10 points; Louisiana 85, loss of 5 points; Texas 82, loss of 10 points; Arkansas 86, loss of 9 points; Tennessee 84, gain of 2 points.

KOLB'S VICTORY.

Governor Jones' Appointment Did Not Hold.

A Montgomery, Ala., dispatch says: On September 1st Governor Jones appointed Hector D. Lane as commissioner of agriculture on the expiration of the term for which R. F. Kolb was appointed two years ago. The last legislature passed a law making the office of commissioner of agriculture elective, and provided that a commissioner of agriculture shall be elected at the next election. Kolb's attorneys claimed that the law making the commissionership elective, which states that it repeals all laws in conflict therewith, repealed the law authorizing the governor to fill the time between the expiration of Kolb's term and the time at which the first elected commissioner would take his seat, December, 1892.

THE CONTEST FILED.

Lane demanded the possession of the office and Kolb refused it, on the ground that the governor had no right to appoint. Lane then brought suit before Judge Randolph, of the Montgomery probate court, and the case was argued for two days by some of the best lawyers of the state.

THE DECISION RENDERED.

On Wednesday Judge Randolph rendered his decision, citing the old and new law. He declared that the enactment of the new law repealed the old law, and such repeal made the appointment of Mr. Lane valid and legal. The effect of the decision is that Kolb was appointed commissioner of agriculture to serve until [illegible]

ALABAMA DOTS.

Newsy Notes Paragraphically Presented.

There is some talk of a canning factory being established in Gadsden. One man has signified his willingness to take $3,000 stock. It is an almost an assured fact that the enterprise will take definite shape in the next few days.

The insurance on Woodstock furnace No. 2, which was burned several days ago, has been adjusted and the furnace will be rebuilt this fall. Some improvements will be added, which will render the furnace more convenient and lessen the cost of producing iron.

The contest over the office of Commissioner of Agriculture opened a few days ago at Montgomery before Probate Judge Randolph. Kolb's attorneys started by offering a motion to quash the proceedings because of informality in bringing the action. The court reserved its decision.

The cotton mill at Piedmont is well under way. A very large force is at work laying brick and the contractors say they will have the building ready by December 1. This will be one of the largest cotton mills in the south. The other industries, are running along nicely and everything is very encouraging for Piedmont's future.

The sale of $200,000 of Birmingham city bonds made some weeks ago, fell through owing to some technical disagreement between the sellers and purchasers. A day or two ago the bonds were sold to Blake Bros., of New York, for immediate delivery. As the law does not permit the bonds to be sold below par it is presumed that they were disposed of at their face value, inasmuch as they are for "immediate delivery." There was no reference to the price or the rate of interest. The rate is supposed to be 5½ per cent.

The effect of the cold weather on the cotton crop in the neighborhood of Florence is beginning to be noticed now, and the prospect for a good crop is more gloomy at present than at any time during the year. The August crop is shedding its squares and young bolls rapidly, which, in addition to the rust, which has made its appearance during the past week, promises to be somewhat disastrous to the crop. It is estimated that the crop will be 20 per cent. less than it was thought to be one week ago. The damage is general in that section. Not one favorable report having been received from any point in Talladega or adjoining counties.

Heavy Damages.

In the case of Belle Sanders, administratrix of the estate of R. E. Sanders, against the Kansas City, Memphis and Birmingham railroad, on trial in the Walker circuit court, the jury returned a verdict for $13,500. Sanders was fatally hurt in the wreck at Thomas, near Birmingham city, October 21, 1890, he dying about ten days later. His widow, as administratrix, brought suit for damage in the sum of $100,000, the case coming up at Jasper last February, when the jury gave a verdict for $44,600. This verdict was set aside by Judge Head as being for an excessive amount. When this last verdict was announced a motion was made by the defense to set it also aside on the ground of excess, but Judge Head overruled the motion. A fight had been previously made for a change of venue.

An Eventful Career.

There died at Mobile a few days ago William A. W. Spotswood, born in Virginia in 1806, and veteran of three wars. After his graduation as a physician, he was appointed in 1829, to the navy, and served as post surgeon in Florida during the Seminole war. He then served on the United States sloop, St. Louis, on the coast of Peru, and was post surgeon in New York City during and after the cholera epidemic of 1850. Later, he went through a season of yellow fever at Pensacola, and then, as fleet surgeon, served on the coasts of China and Japan. He was in the service also in the Mexican war and was at the siege of Vera Cruz and was twice wrecked on the Mexican coast. In January, 1861, he resigned from the navy and was appointed a full surgeon in the confederate service and stationed at Richmond, where he remained with distinction throughout the war. His life was one of unusual adventure. He was a man of great physical strength and of fine character. His father was Gen. Spotswood. A book printed [illegible]

TENNESSEE MINERS

Threaten More Trouble Over the Convict Muddle.

Reliable information received at Knoxville, Tenn., Wednesday night from Briceville and Coal Creek shows an alarming condition of affairs there. Whether it is "bluff" for the legislature or "dead earnest" remains to be seen. The information is to the effect that the miners there have determined on turning loose the 125 convicts in the mines of the Knoxville Iron Company. During the late Briceville trouble these convicts were taken out of the stockade, and sent to Knoxville the same day that the convicts and troops were captured at Briceville. Since they were returned and put to work, matters have been going along along smoothly, but it seems that the free miners have now determined to play a desperate game.

The coal mining season is opening with a rush, and a large operator says that with no disturbance the miners could not fill the orders by the 1st to October, so great would the demand be. With this turn of affairs, however, there is uneasiness, and operators do not know what to do. Whether the miners will attack the convicts or not remains to be seen, but there is great uneasiness in the entire district. Those who are posted upon the situation, say the public need not be surprised if every convict in the district is released within twenty-four hours. The convicts in the Oliver Springs district will also be released. The programme this time is not to guard the convicts to Knoxville or some other place and surrender them to the authorities, but to turn them free in the mountains, or run them out of the state into Kentucky. Another alarming report is that the forty or fifty free miners whom the Tennessee Coal Mining Company has been working during all the trouble over the convicts, have been notified that they must leave the mine. They are told that if they continue to work in the mine they will be killed. The situation is causing the operators much uneasiness.

IT MAY BE SETTLED.

More of the Convict Labor Question in Tennessee.

A Nashville dispatch of Monday says: The chairman of the penitentiary committee of the Tennessee legislature has received a proposition from the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company, and it will probably be submitted at once to the legislature. As far as can be learned, the proposition is about as follows: The contract providing for the payment by lessees of $100,000 a year to the state is to be canceled. The lessees are to build a new prison at the head of Sequatchie valley, to cost several hundred thousand dollars, under direction of an architect to be appointed by the state. In this prison are to be kept prisoners not able to work in the mines. A stockade shall be built for convicts in Marion, Bledsoe and Sequatchie counties, and able-bodied convicts are to be worked in the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company's mines in these counties, but no where else. The lessees are to pay the state $350,000 for the labor of convicts during lease, running from twenty-five to thirty years. The state is to pay for clothing, feeding, transporting and guarding convicts. The lessees are to be given the site on which the present main prison stands in Nashville. They will give 500 acres of land where the new prison is to be built, on which partially disabled convicts can raise products for their own consumption. The building of the new prison is to begin without much delay, convicts being employed in erecting it. Legislators are of the opinion that it will pass the present assembly with some modifications.

WITHHELD FROM THE PUBLIC

Until it Can be Reported to the Governor.

A Raleigh dispatch of Monday says: It has been finally decided by the railway commissioners to make no report of their finding in regard to the late railway wreck at the Third creek bridge until the regular annual report to the governor. The commissioners first gave out that their finding would be given the public. The present impression of the commissioners is that it is improper to make a report to the public before making a report to the governor. A majority of the commissioners are positive that the board should not open its proceedings [illegible]

FASSETT NAMED

As Republican Governor of New York State.

The New York republican state convention met Wednesday at Rochester and nominated Hon. J. Sloan Fassett for governor on the first ballot; John W. Vrooman, for lieutenant governor, by acclamation; Eugene F. O'Connor, for secretary of state, by acclamation; Ira W. Hedges, for state treasurer, by acclamation; A. C. Wade, by acclamation; for comptroller; William Sutherland, for attorney general, by acclamation; Verplank Calvin, for state engineer, by acclamation. Fassett's vote was 514 out of a total of 774. The vote was made unanimous.

AGAINST THE SUBTREASURY.

The Question Brought Up in Tennessee's Legislature.

A Nashville dispatch says: The senate, on Tuesday, adopted a resolution instructing the senators and representatives in congress to vote against any bill embodying the sub-treasury scheme. The vote was 16 to 11. The members of the house have nearly all expressed themselves as opposed to the sub-treasury scheme. But when this resolution reached the house it was tabled, because the members said they had already wasted enough time on resolutions. A large number of explanations were filed, however, and it is judged that they did not want to go on record as either for or against.

DALLAS ALARMED

Over the Frequent Recurrence of Disastrous Fires.

The fire record in Dallas, Texas, for the month of August was greater than that of all other Texas cities combined—twenty-nine fires in thirty days. It has developed that the water supply is sufficient when properly managed. The insurance companies have been hit so heavy and so often that they have advanced rates 50 per cent, and several companies have withdrawn their agencies from the city. This state of affairs has filled the citizens of Dallas with alarm, as no tangible solution of the origin of these numerous and disastrous conflagrations can be arrived at.

The State Central Express published at Centreville, has brought out S. M. Adams, president of the State Alliance, as a candidate for Congress from the new ninth district.

The office of Commissioner of Agriculture seems to be in pretty much of a double muddle and nobody can guess at the outcome. Judge Randolph of the Montgomery Probate Court before whom the contest was carried has decided that the new appointee, Hector D. Lane, had no right to the office, in that the Governor has no power now to appoint. Appeal to the Supreme Court has been made, and the matter will rest until the meeting of that court on the 23d inst. In the meantime the State seems well supplied with Commissioner of Agriculture, having two men claiming the same office.

Gov. Jones has gotten himself or his administration in a "pretty pickle" as the saying goes, because of the appointment of Hector Lane, of Limestone county, as Commissioner of Agriculture. Mr. Lane, the appointee, is a brother of Chas. P. Lane, editor of the Huntsville Mercury, which paper has been finding all the fault possible with Gov. Jones' administration since the new governor was inaugurated; and it is a very general impression that the appointment was given Hector Lane to shut off Charlie Lane's criticisms. It was only about ten years ago that Charlie Lane was canvassing the State for the office of Governor in opposition to the Democratic nominee. But since that time Lane has after a fashion got back into the Democratic household. The Montgomery Advertiser by all sorts of coaxing and cajolery has been endeavoring to reach the soft side of the Mercury editor, but having given up in despair it turned its attention to Hector Lane and thereby brought him into the Governor's notice, and the Governor has appointed him Commissioner of Agriculture in face of the fact that he was a participant in burning the Governor in effigy at Athens last spring. In addition to this, letters from Lane to Commissioner Kolb have been published in which Lane speaks of the Governor with much contempt and ridicule. Kolb denies that he furnished the letters to the press for publication.

The Mercury Lane threatened to retaliate by publishing some of Kolb's letters to him in which Gov. Jones' name was mentioned unpleasantly. Kolb forthwith gives him full authority to carry out his threat and publish the letters. But the Honorable C. P. at this interesting juncture, has declared as a man of honor(?) he will not publish a private correspondence, and the public is left to infer that the unstable politician who edits the Mercury is possessed of more threats than letters.

There is nothing nice about any of it. On the contrary, the public has always concluded that it is quite an unsavory mess which four unlucky politicians have gotten themselves into. The Governor has injured himself by getting into bad company.

Now is the time to subscribe and get a valuable premium.

THE STRIFE OF CLASSES.

Gen. J. Ellis Writes The Gleaner how Workmen can Interesting Letter.

Read It and Profit by It.

MR. EDITOR: Ever since the world was peopled, there has been strife among the two classes that compose the human family: "the rich and the poor." This will perhaps always be so. The rich are charged with making an oppressive use of their money; and in many cases this is true; and in all cases this is wrong. It breeds discontent; promotes the communistic feeling; encourages strikes and riots; and threatens the downfall of governments republican in their form. This is plain to be seen where unrestricted suffrage gives to one of the two classes a very large majority. In this country the cry of oppression has originated in the various labor organizations found all over the states which have banded together for mutal protection and relief. Their existence, coalition and co-operation, have already become a controling power in some of the states. Whether the power thus acquired is to increase or diminish is a question time alone can answer; and whether the complaints of these classes against the government and rich men, are just and true, is a question that is now fully before the people. This much, however, may be safely said; that the state and drift of things are calculated to make the rich richer, and the poor poorer, as we so frequently hear, must be received with great allowance.

Compare the condition of this country now, with its condition at the time our grandfathers lived in it; when there were none of the traveling and transporting facilities we now have; at that time it would take a man two or three months to make a trip to New York. Now you can board the train anywhere, and look on the metropolis of your country in three days.

You may have a sick child a thousand miles from home, and the anxious throbbing heart of the mother may be relieved by a message from that child, requiring only a few minutes in its transmission.

These advantages are ours, because some men who have money, use it in building railroads, and mastering natural forces, in the rapid communication of intelligence.

The same use of money has done much to reduce the cost of transportation of our products. Not a great many years ago, farmers throughout the cotton growing country of the South paid at least ten dollars per bale to get their cotton to market. They can now get transportation for their farm products for one tenth of that amount, for the same distance of carriage.

In the days of our fathers we had no gins and spinning factories. Cotton was picked from the bolls, and then picked from the seed by hand, and carded and spun and woven by hand. One good hand at the spindle and loom could make on an average one yard of cloth in two days, worth at present prices, eight cents per yard; and the man who was fortunate to be able to stand a calico dress for his wife, paid from twenty-five to fifty cents per yard. Think of this! For the great reduction of the rates of travel and transportation, and the price of goods of every description from mills, factories, and furnaces, and a thousand other advantages, which contribute so much to the convenience, comfort and happiness of a great people, we are certainly indebted to the wise employment, of the money of the rich.

Considering this subject in a material point of view, if such a use of money makes the rich richer, it certainly does not make the poor poorer.

Look at Texas a few years ago, it was comparatively a vast, uncultivated wilderness. Rich men, who had the sagacity to foresee the possibilities of that country, went there with their money, and in the course of a few years, it became a net work of railroads, and is rapidly becoming one of the richest and most prosperous states in the Union.

So much on the subject in its general application. I now propose to treat it as to its bearing on the South.

There are two things we need to make the South one of the grandest countries of the world. One is (publish tranquility), the other is better tilling among the planters. We have everything else; soil, climate, variety of production, and numerous resources. What more could the god of nature have done for us? Why not do for ourselves that which with the blessing of God, would soon make this the garden spot of the world? That much to be desired consummation is, to lay aside all bitterness and wrath and strife, and bury the unreasonable differences that have divided us into factions, and put in great peril our only hope for future prosperity. The next thing is to stop abusing men who have money. The country needs them, and they will scatter their money if you will let them alone.

We need money, brains, and muscle; just what all countries need to build them up. Do all you can to encourage the introduction of capital. Let rich men come here from any and every quarter, and build more railroads, and factories and furnaces, and help to clear up and work the land now in the woods and yielding no income. This continual strife that now afflicts us, will never build up any country. It keeps capital away; clogs the wheels of civilization; retards the progress of education, and helps to make life not worth living. Farmers may fight oppressive monopolies and combinations and individuals, who use their power in turning trade out of its legitimate channels, by cornering on articles of prime necessity, thus forcing buyers to pay more for these things than their intrinsic value; and by gambling in futures contravene the laws of supply and demand, so that sellers are put into the hands of a merciless set of Shylocks who thrive and fatten at the expense of all honest tillers of the soil, whether they be rich or poor.

In their opposition to such oppression as this, farmers have the sympathy of merchants, lawyers, doctors, preachers and everybody else, and will have their earnest co-operation in the correction of evils, and removal of the burdens complained of, if they are not shorn of their strength, and rendered powerless, by the suicidal policy of division in our ranks. It is an old adage, that has become trite and stale to many; but it is nevertheless as true and as pregnant with meaning now as when first uttered by the father of his country, "United we stand, divided we fall."

Polk Warns the Democratic Leaders.

A Raleigh, N. C., press dispatch of the 3rd inst., says that rumors are current in that city, "that the third party or the people's party, as it terms itself, was sending out from the office of President Polk, of the national alliance at Washington, letters to every aspirant for political office, informing such aspirants that unless they give in their adhesion to the third party, they will get nothing. These rumors were confirmed and it was positively stated that a number of these letters had been sent to North Carolina democratic leaders, and no doubt many to those in other states. This step on the part of third party promoters will certainly do more than anything else to arouse the democrats, and will draw their hottest fire.

Some of our exchanges are advising the farmers to sell their surplus old corn for 50 cents per bushel before the new crop is put upon the market. There may be wisdom in such advice, but the Chronicle doubts it. The new crop will not supply the demand in the South, and farmers who have a surplus of old corn had better feed it and hold the new for next summer's market. That will pay.—Shelby Chronicle.

Good Looks.

Good looks are more than skin deep, depending upon a healthy condition of all the vital organs. If the Liver is inactive, you have a bilious look. If your stomach be disordered you have a dyspeptic look, and if your kidneys be affected you have a pinched look. Secure good health and you will have good looks. Electric Bitters is the great alterative and tonic and acts directly on these vital organs. Cures pimples, blotches, boils and gives a good complexion. Sold at 50c per bottle.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

LOCAL LACONICS.

Mrs. Dr. Johnson visited Verbena Sunday.

Mrs. J. A. Forsyth has returned to her home in Columbus, Ga,

Rev. Mr. Smith held services at the Episcopal church Sunday.

Miss Fannie E. Thompson is visiting relatives in Birmingham.

Mr. Frank Hester and family visited relatives here the past week.

Miss Smith, of Pratville, is visiting her sister, Mrs. A. J. Briggs here.

Mrs. R. H. Croswell is visiting relatives in Verbena and Deatsville.

Miss Annie Lake Phillips is visiting Capt. DeJarnette's family in Montgomery.

Mrs. Dr. Patton has returned to Montgomery after visiting relatives here for some time.

Miss Lizzie Hammond, of Mulbery neighborhood, visited Mrs. W. H. Foshee last week.

Mr. Tom Thornton will soon leave for Fort Smith, Arkansas where he will engage in business.

Mrs. Sharp and daughter, Miss Sallie, of Montgomery, are here and stopping at the Misses Duke's.

Mrs. W. A. Collier and daughters have returned home from a pleasant stay at Talladega Springs.

Messrs. W. H. Merritt and R. Ehrman have purchased a one-third interest in the Duke saw mill.

Mr. N. Watts brought us the largest watermelon during the past summer. It weighed 41½ pounds and takes the premium of one year's subscription.

Judge H. J. Callen and Mr. W. H. Foshee, of this place, left Monday morning to join some citizens of Jemison, for a camp hunt 7 miles north of that place.

We have heard the names of Mr. P. M. Moore and Mr. I. G. White suggested for appointment as members of the board of revenue to fill the vacancy created by the death of Mr. J. A. Stephens.

Rev. C. L. McCartha, of the Southern University, will lecture next Friday and Saturday eve, nings at the Methodist Church on "The Lost Tribes of Israel" or "Europe and America in History and in Prophecy." Commences at 8 o'clock p. m. Admission free.

We very much regret to learn of the death of Mr. Jas. A. Stephens, which occurred at Stanton last week. Mr. Stephens has made many friends in Chilton during his short residence among us. His death creates a vacancy on the board of revenue, of which he was a useful member.

Mr. J. T. B. Chandler has traded part of his farm near town to Mr. W. M. Wilson for Mr. Wilson's residence in Clanton. Mr. Chandler will move his family to Clanton, and we understand that Mr. Wilson thinks of building a new residence in town on his lot near the Methodist Church.

In this issue will be found the advertisement of the Union Warehouse which is the Alliance Exchange Warehouse in Montgomery. The merit of this establishment is too well known to need commendation. It has a man of Merritt at the back of it, and in addition Mr. Jos. Shackleford as manager of the Alliance Exchange is also on hand to help along the heavy business which the warehouse is doing.

AT LAST THE DEED IS DONE!

A High School and a New Building Assured By A Out-Pouring Meeting Monday Night.

A number of the citizens of Clanton met at the Courthouse Monday night to discuss the school question, and see what action in the matter of building up a high school for the community. The meeting was a success. Rev. A. J. Briggs was requested to preside. He stated the object of the meeting in a characteristic business like manner that could not be misunderstood. A subscription was then taken up to build a school house on the stock company plan. Several citizens were willing to contribute a lot upon which to build, about all the building material necessary was contributed and over $500 in cash subscribed.

This means that we will soon have a school in Clanton that will reflect credit on our town. A committee was selected to solicit further subscriptions, and everybody should subscribe who can. As Rev. Mr. Briggs remarked, "we will never do anything here if we always listen to the croakers and the cranks." And as this class are nearly all dead-beats, it is fortunate that the fact has dawned upon the community that a school house or anything else must be built by subscriptions from other sources.

At a second meeting held Tuesday night the cash subscriptions were considerably increased, and it was decided to proceed with the work of building as soon as a location can be fixed upon.

Death of Mr. Jas. A. Stephens.

Mr. Jas. A. Stephens, manager of the Farmers' Alliance store, at Stanton, died very suddenly at his home there a few minutes past 5 o'clock Thursday morning. His death was unexpected and quite a shock to everybody as he seemed to be enjoying good health. He was buried with Masonic honors at Ebenezer church at 11 o'clock Friday morning. Notwithstanding the bad weather there were several hundred people at the funeral. Mr. Stephens moved with his family from Dixie 3 years ago to this place to take charge of the Farmers' Alliance store, which business he has managed creditably and successfully. He had established a good credit, worked up a considerable trade and made a host of friends all over the county.

Mr. Dan Gandy who was chief clerk in the Alliance store, has been appointed manager. Dan is a good young man and very attentive to business and will do his best to please the Alliance folks.

Mr. Stephens leaves a wife and nine children to mourn his untimely death, in which the community deeply sympathize with them. W.

South Chilton Items.

Our dry spell of six weeks has come to a close. Late crops have been damaged very much for the want of rain, cotton 40 per cent off. Corn is very good and a great deal more planted than usual.

Miss Lafarice Deadwilder's school is just out here, but she will soon take a better school than the one she has just taught.

Mr. Editor, one of the VIEW's correspondents wants to hear from South Chilton oftener from the fact that there is some one down here that he thinks more of than himself. If he will just write me I will do all in my power for him, and do it with pleasure.

Miss Eva McKee who has been spending the summer here has returned to her home in the Magic City.

Mr. Ed Tyson's family who have been spending a few days at the Clifton Hotel, departed for their home in the Capital City.

Capt. C. L. Brown, of Bozeman, and some gentlemen from, in and around Verbena have been prospecting for gold near here, they were very successful in their hunt. They found a good deal of gold. One piece weighed fifteen grains.

Miss Sallie Merriwether, of Snowdown, is visiting Miss Fannie C. Mitchell.

Mr. Berney Bozeman, of Montgomery, is visiting Mr. White Mitchell's family.

Mr. Eugene Barrett, of Clanton,

[illegible] Mr. John Hunley, formerly of Bell Mill, has returned to Chilton county.

Kingston Items.

Having stored away some items from this point in your valuable paper, and thinking that your many readers may be interested in reading a few, I write this.

This place is situated seven miles from Jemison in the south eastern part of the county, and contains about one hundred inhabitants. It is four miles from Bobo's Switch. Mr. King, from whom the place derived its name, has a saw mill here, with a capacity of 15,000 feet per day. The mill is running full time.

Considerable excitement was created here a few days ago by the reported discovery of deposits of brown iron ore near here. It is now stated positively that the iron is here, and that ere long Alabama will have another flourishing mining town. Arrangements are being made for the development of these mines, and then will develop an era of prosperity never before equalled in this section of the grand old State of Chilton.

Col. J. G. Fowler, a distinguished capitalist from Mobile, is here trying to organize the Southern Drying Co. Col. Fowler says he has made experiments that have convinced him that by his method of applying a chemical he has discovered that without pumps or dredging appliances of any kind he can dry any swamp or marsh in the union in from 24 hours to sixty days. When he succeeds in disposing of all the stock in this company he is going to Florida, and at once begin operations.

Col. Searcy has embarked in the beef business.

Mr. J. M. Woolley is the manager of the company's store here, and by his kind and considerate treatment of all is winning golden opinions from the public.

Mr. S. Mays is slightly indisposed this week, and Capt. Will Shaw is manipulating the saw lever.

Mr. J. J. King is rapidly improving after his severe illness.

Mrs. Lizzie Noblett hopes to be soon able to return back to her former home in Tenn.

Mr. Dock Hunt has a very sick little boy, however, his recovery is now looked for.

Mrs. Gainer, our telegraph operator's wife, died a few days ago, she was too beautiful for earth.

Mrs. Scott at the postoffice, is a lady at the right business. A MOTHER.

It has not yet been decided where to locate the new school building. There should be no squabbling over this question. Some sacrifices and concessions must be made by all.

The Citizens' Alliance.

The following is a pretty tough, but a witty criticism of the Grove Hill Democrat on the Citizens' Alliance:

The Citizens' Alliance recently brought before the people of Alabama is mainly made of city material. It seems to be a sort of nursery for supplying the Farmers' Alliance with candidates for the more important and better paying offices. It is composed of men who sympathize with the Farmers' Alliance to the extent of desiring an office through their votes and influence. It means business.

The Gadsden Times News asks this plaintive question: "Will the farmers of Alabama never get weary of hearing, every two years, of their great wrongs, paraded and harped upon by the little political stump-suckers, who have never yet suggested a sensible remedy? It is the same old crew and the same old song. Scratch his skin and you will find a republican, certain."

OFFICIAL.

To the officers and members of all State, county, district or primary organizations under the jurisdiction of the National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union, greeting:

In pursuance of the authority in us vested by the proceedings of the supreme council at its last session at Ocala, Fla., to designate the place for holding the next annual supreme council, we, your national executive board, being limited by the terms of said authority to the states of Indiana and Illinois, do hereby make the following announcement:

Whereas we have carefully considered the facilities and hospitalities offered by the officials and citizens of many cities in those states; now, therefore, we do hereby announce the following as our official

NOTICE.—The next annual session of the Supreme Council of the National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union will convene in the city of Indianapolis, Ind., at 10 o'clock a. m., on the third Tuesday in November next, the same being the 17th day of said month. Hall and committee rooms have been tendered free. A very low hotel rate has been contracted for, and special railway rates will be announced by the national secretary at as early a date as possible. The hospitalities of Indianapolis were generously tendered by the honorable mayor of that city, who has carefully demonstrated its great advantages as a central and accessible point, with every accommodation, such that we feel assured our action will meet the unqualified approval of our great organization.

NOT DEFEATED.

Regarding the report which has been widely circulated that Missouri had defeated the Sub-treasury scheme, Senator Peffer has the following to say in a recent interview: "The Missouri Alliance has done the correct thing. The sub-treasury scheme is a proposition for the people to decide and they will go right. The sub-treasury advocates had enough votes in the convention to have carried the plan, but they disappointed the politicians by allowing the sub-alliances to settle the question. The sub-treasury scheme was not defeated. It was simply referred to the sub-alliances, and had it been a convention of Democrats or Republicans with a majority they would have fastened their idea on the people and the people would have been compelled to submit. The action of the Missouri convention will result in delay, but the alliance states will all have acted on the sub-treasury plan in time for the campaign of 1892, and I think the Cincinnati form will be practically the one on which the campaign will be fought by the people's party."

THE SUB-TREASURY IS THE REMEDY.

The Farm and Fireside says: When the new wheat first comes on the market, the buyers and speculators will endeavor to do their utmost to crowd down the price. There are so many farmers who are under the absolute necessity of realizing on their crops as soon after harvest as possible that there is always an opportunity for buyers to take advantage of the situation and bear down the price. There is danger of overcrowding the early market, forcing down the price and giving all the advantage of prospective high price to the speculators. There is good reason for believing that the wheat crop, both as to quantity and quality, has been overestimated, and it will be advisable for the producers to carefully consider the question of holding for better prices than are first offered. The remedy is be found in the sub-treasury plan. It is a deplorable fact that out affairs have come to this. But it is true, and it is the duty of our Congress or devise some plan to relieve the people. Our government, even if honestly conducted, is behind the times. Men are now so shrewd and have so many loopholes to go through that it has become absolutely necessary that a change be made. The sub-treasury plan will give it. Let us continue to work for it until we get it or something else.

OFFICIAL NOTICE.

In pursuance of authority conferred upon the executive board of the Confederation of Industrial Organizations, at the session of January 24, 1891, held in Washington, D. C., and after correspondence with members of the board, as chairman thereof, I hereby give notice that the next meeting of the said Confederation of Industrial Organizations, will be held at Washington, D. C., February 22, 1892.

By authority of a resolution passed in the said meeting, January 24, 1891, as president I hereby invite the attendance of delegates from every industrial organization in the country to meet with the Confederation of Industrial Organizations at the meeting hereby called, that there may be harmony of action and combination of influences to effect the reforms which all deem necessary. Basis of representation will be made public hereafter.

BEN TERRELL,

The Alliance Advocate (Oakdale, Wash.) says: Men of the Alliance, don't let the rally of the political press bother you in the least. The very fact that the partisan papers in the State including our ablest dailies, are firing hot shot at the Alliance, is evidence that they recognize in the farmers' movement a formidable foe to the private interests of political bosses, and of course in zeal to perpetuate the old method of machine manipulation of politics they cry down the honest efforts of the masses to secure to themselves the rights and liberties so dearly bought by the blood stained Declaration of Independence and meant to forever be perpetuated by the constitution of the United States. The Alliance has a noble work to do and is responding in its mission. The mighty, invincible politician who a few years ago would not deign to touch an ordinary farmer, with a ten foot pole, now bows graciously low to the honest tiller of the soil and sometimes even goes so far as to give up his seat in congress to some old farmer with instructions that the sovereign masters while said politician proceeds to get acquainted with the [illegible] by means of [illegible] you will have few words of approval for the partisan press.

Farmers' Advocate (Tarboro, N. C.) says: "The Alliance has done more to educate the people than any other organization in this country. Men who took but little interest in the affairs of the country in the past are manifesting great interest in them now. Then again, to show its power as an educator, you will find more men who were entirely ignorant on important questions who now comprehend them. The masses are reading, writing and studying, and surely there will be a wise solution on momentous question, that are presented. This Alliance movement is nothing short of a great revolution. It is composed of some of the best-wisest and most upright people in this country, and those who are opposing the movement might as well come forward and recognize its importance and fall into line. It is going to sweep this country like a cyclone. The people who contribute liberally of their support to this government are restless and determined upon a change in its policy, and though we are not a prophet, we feel safe in saying that there will be a radical change. And the day is not far distant.

Governor Jones, of Alabama, has appointed Hector D. Lano of Limestone county, commissioner of agriculture, vice R. F. Kolb, whose term has expired. Lano was an original alliance man, one of the organizers in Alabama, assistant lecturer for two terms, and for a while editor of the state organ. He always opposed the alliance entering politics, but favored its standing to the original declarations. He occupied a position similar to that of Hall of Missouri. Kolb will contest the governor's right to appoint, claiming that the law making the office electoral at the election in 1892 continues him in office until that time. The legislature refused to adopt the clause in the law to that effect.

The Alliance Bulletin (Harper, Kans.) says: "With the sub-treasury plan in operation, the grip of Shylock upon the producers would be loosened. Instead of being compelled to force his wheat upon the market to save his chattles, the farmer would be enabled to borrow enough upon his wheat to relieve his present obligations and hold his wheat until prices advance to such a point as to allow him a reasonable compensation for his labor."

At a recent large and enthusiastic union meeting of citizens and Alliance men, representing Halifax county, Virginia, Person and Caswell counties, North Carolina, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, 1. That we demand reform in the administration of our government, and that we will not co-operate with any party nor vote for any man for any political office that does not adopt the measures we approve.

Resolved, 2. That we fully approve the Ocala platform.

The Wisconsin State Alliance adopted the Ocala demands and voted to submit the question whether the secret work of the National Farmers Alliance and Industrial Union should be adopted to the subordinate bodies, the majority of subs reporting by September to decide. So it is seen that another State seems to be prepared to join the column at Indianapolis in November.—Economist.

If you Farmers' Alliance people will only just fix it so as to knock out the Democratic party in the South, says the Republican politician, it will be all right; and the Democratic politician says that the alliance will be all right if it will only blow out the Republicans in Iowa and Ohio.—Great West.

The Alliance Aid Association is being favorably considered in several States, and it now seems probable that the project for its being made national will be successful. As a cheap fraternal life insurance it is much needed in the Order, and would be an additional bond between members.

The Kentucky election resulted as follows: People's party elected 73 members of the legislature; Democrats, 50; Republicans, 15. So the People's party has a majority of 8 members over both old parties.

There are eighty-six rich men in the U. S. Senate, and two Alliancemen, Peffer and Kyle. Forty-seven of the Senators are millionaires. Can working people expect favorable legislation in their interest from their masters.—Progressive Farmer.

From all over New York State comes the cheering news of a rapid growth. The alliance is standing squarely by the Ocala demands despite the efforts of other organizations to side track them.—Economist.

Texas, Mississippi and Missouri were depended on to cause division in the alliance. The scheme has failed, and the order as a unit is on top in all these states.—Economist.

NO RELIEF

For the Handicapped Free Laborers of Tennessee.

A Nashville dispatch says: Whatever relief free labor in Tennessee is to have from competition with the purchased slaves of soulless corporations must come through other channels than the abrogation of the convict lease system. The Tennessee house of representatives have said as much.

True, the allegation was based upon the ground that the legislature was powerless to abrogate a contract; that the constitution of the state and of the United States prohibited the legislative impairment of a contract, but still it's a fact that the large majority of the members who based their action on constitutional grounds are, at the same time, of the opinion that the lease system is the best to be had, and that the state cannot, at this time, afford to lose the $100,000 per annum received from the penitentiary leases, and support the convicts or work them, as Governor Buchanan suggested, in new coal and iron fields. The fight over the resolution was long and bitter, and argument was in vain. The resolution declaring that under the constitution the legislature could not abrogate their contract had a large majority, the vote being 5 to 37.

THE ONLY RELIEF REMAINING.

It now remains to amend the criminal law, so that in time the competition will not be so great, and to arrange, if possible, with the lessees, the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company, that the convicts may be confined to one or two mines, and not compete with miners in the whole mining district. It is possible that this will be done, and, if so, it will remove very great objection to the lease system, as now exists [illegible] made a success by [illegible] and [illegible]

JUMP IN COTTON.

The Largest Crop Ever Raised—A 15 Per Cent Advance.

Cotton is up, both in price and quality. In price it has advanced 15 per cent, and in quality, the large quantity already marketed in Texas, averaged about middling. Last year it was considerably below. Taking both the improvement in the price of middling, and the higher average price on account of higher grade, the advance is a heavy one.

January opened Thursday morning at 9.03 and closed Thursday morning at 9.25. This makes an advance of about a cent and a quarter within twenty days.

HESTER'S REPORT.

Secretary Hester, of the New Orleans cotton exchange, has completed the final details of the cotton crop movement, the principal figures of which were issued on September 1st. His introductory remarks state that the cotton crop of the United States for the year ending at the close of August, 1891, is 8,652,579 bales, the largest crop ever grown by 1,341,275 bales.

In reference to the receipts at American ports, Mr. Hester says that with the enormous crop the movement in every direction has been correspondingly heavy. New Orleans has handled more cotton than in any year, but one of her history, her net receipts exceeding 2,000,000 bales for the first time since the war, and reaching within 50,000 of those in 1860, the largest ante-bellum year. Galveston has passed the million mark for the first time, and Savannah has handled considerable more than a million bales, exceeding all previous records.

The gross overland movement for the year, after deducting interchanges between the different points of crossing and reshipping into the cotton belt, has reached 1,588,260 bales, exceeding last year by 184,870, and the year before by 181,689.

The heaviest gains in the overland have been at St. Louis, and points above, on the Mississippi river, which show an excess of 287,000. Railroads out of Louisville are 95,000 bales ahead of last year, while Cairo, exclusive of through cotton for St. Louis, is short nearly forty-two thousand bales. Cincinnati and Virginia points also show a falling off of 113,000.

FOREIGN EXPORTS.

The statement makes foreign exports for the year: To Great Britain, 3 329,432; to France, 559,099; to the continent and channel ports, 1,890,291; a total, exclusive of Canada, of 5,778,822. The excess in foreign ports over last year is 878,382, of which Great Britain has taken 479,330; France, 86,362, and the continent, 312,690. The report mentions shipments of American cotton from New York to Japan of 4,494 bales. Total takings for American consumption during the year were 2,632,023 bales, against 2,346,152. These embrace 2,027,362 by Northern spinners, against 1,799,558 last year, a gain of 228,104; and 604,661 by Southern spinners, against 546,894 last year, a gain of 57,765.

LABOR DAY.

Its Observance Tuesday in All the Large Cities.

Labor Day was celebrated at Columbia, S. C., by a parade of the Typographical Union, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, American machinists and representative bodies from various mercantile and manufacturing establishments. This is the first labor procession which has taken place in South Carolina, and business houses were generally closed in recognition of the event.

At Chicago, Labor Day was very generally observed. The banks, board of trade, business houses, courts and municipal offices were closed. The day was bright but rather cold for outdoor pleasures, except of an active sort. During the morning there was a general parade of labor organizations of the city, whose members marched through the principal streets with waving banners and suitable devices and mottoes. After the parade the various organizations proceeded to parks outside the city, where they spent the remainder of the day in athletic games, dancing and speech-making. There was parades and picnics also in some of the larger manufacturing suburbs.

At Nashville Labor Day was celebrated with more enthusiasm than has ever been seen before. Fully twenty thusand people were on the streets to witness the parade, which was composed of all labor unions in that vicinity. The procession adjorned to West Side park where speeches were made by prominent labor advocates and politicians.

In New York the day was honored by a general suspension of business. State and city courts held no sessions, and the sessions of the police courts were brief. The custom house, postoffice, sub-treasury, appraisers' office and assay office were all closed. Chimes were rung and special services held in Old Trinity church at night. The carrying out of the varied and extensive program arranged for the day was seriously interfered with by the prevalence of a heavy northeast rainstorm, effectually preventing the proposed big procession, and causing the indefinite postponement of the numerous picnics, cricket and tennis matches, football games, horse races and other field sports.

Labor Day was observed in Memphis in a more momentous manner than on any other since its inception. Banks and exchanges closed, and business men generally made a half holiday for the occasion. The principal streets of the city were traversed the the by a parade nearly two miles long, consisting of different trade organizations and the fire and police departments of the city. The appearance in line of the Farmers' Alliance on horseback, each member wearing a wisp of hay or cotton boll in his hat, was greeted with much enthusiasm.

Specials to The Kansas City Star, from Kansas, indicate that Labor Day was very generally observed as a holiday, and in many places the Farmers' Alliance took a prominent part in the celebration of the day.

Hot Weather Suggestions.

At the opening of the heated term a few good resolutions should be made. Among the first should be one to cultivate tranquillity of mind. Nothing more conduces to comfort of body. In hot weather a fiery argument is almost as productive of a raised physical temperature as is a brisk walk in the blazing sun. Moreover, its effects are less readily dissipated, for it is easier to sit down and get cool after bodily exertion than it is to subdue the perturbed mind that it will not cause a series of "hot flushes" for possibly hours after a vehement discussion.

The same rule that applies to undue exercise of the tongue and temper should be observed in intellectual pursuits conducted in the dog-days. Do not attempt to shirk steady work in this line; but let all you do be done methodically, not spasmodically. Adherence to the German motto, "Without haste, without rest," relentless as it seems, is really less wearying than a series of violent efforts resulting in a fatigue which can be relieved only by utter repose.

So much for the mental attitude in hot weather. The bodily condition is of equal importance. Many people seem to think that ease in summer can only be obtained by laziness, that employment of any sort is the mortal enemy of bienetre, and so devote the whole of the long days to what is expressively termed "loafing." What wonder if for them the weeks drag drearily, and that they hail the return of shortened days and frosty nights as a release from ennui.

There is no better way to keep cool than to have some regular occupation, be it never so trivial, that will serve to divert the mind from the bodily condition. No matter what this employment may be, whether the charge of certain branches of house-work, the doing of the family mending, the conducting of a course of reading, the studying of a language or a science—whatever it is, let it be made a duty, and followed conscientiously.—Harper's Bazar.

Cleaning the Streets of Paris.

The rag-pickers of Paris do a work for which other cities pay large sums annually to street cleaning departments. They toil at night, and the value of what they collect is estimated at $10,000 for each twenty-four hours. Of course, the conditions of Paris life are exceptional. Population is very close; the tall houses are crammed with inhabitants; there are no gardens—there are but the houses and streets. The Parisians have a way of employing all kinds of lumber and refuse into the streets, and then the ragpickers gather in their harvest. A use is found for everything, and metamorphosis never ceases. All the details are interesting, though some are rather disturbing.

Rags, of course, go to make paper; broken glass is pounded, and serves as the coating for sand or emery paper; bones, after the process of cleaning and cutting down serve to make nailbrushes and toothbrushes and fancy buttons; little wisps of women's hair are carefully unraveled and do duty for false hair by and by; men's hair, collected outside the barbers', serves for filters through which syrups are strained; bits of sponge are cut up and used for spirit lamps; bits of bread, if dirty, are toasted and grated and sold to the restaurants for spreading on hams or cutlets; sometimes they are carbonized and made into tooth powder; sardine boxes are cut up into tin soldiers or into sockets for candlesticks; a silk hat has a whole chapter of adventures in store for it. All this work employs a regiment of rag pickers numbering close on twenty thousand.

The Weight of Money.

Do you know how many $1 bills it takes to weigh as much as a $20 gold piece? Driving out to White Bear recently one of those walking compendiums of useful information sprung the above query and the opinions that it elicited show a remarkable range. One member of the party, whose business it is to handle money in large sums, after profound thought, suggested that the number would be from 1,000 to 1,200. Others guessed down the line to 600, but no one less than that number. After all had placed themselves on record, the compendium stated that it was thirty to thirty-one, according to their condition as to dirtiness and age. He could just as well have based his calculations on $10 bills, but the man who was giving them a weigh preferred to make the test with a smaller denomination.—St. Paul Pioneer-Press.

Presented His Wife With a Coffin.

J. A. Cowles of Beloit, Wis., aged ninety two years, has presented his wife with a coffin made by himself as a present on her eighty-ninth birthday. The couple have been married seventy years. Mr. Cowles takes great pride in his unique gift, and says that while he hopes and expects both will live yet some time, nature's demand must before long be complied with, and a coffin will be necessary. It is about all they need now. The couple are fairly well off and in good health.—Chicago Tribune.

"German Syrup"

J. C. Davis, Rector of St. James' Episcopal Church, Eufaula, Ala.: "My son has been badly afflicted with a fearful and threatening cough for several months, and after trying several prescriptions from physicians which failed to relieve him, he has been perfectly restored by the use of two bottles of Boschee's German Syrup. I can recommend it without hesitation." Chronic severe, deep-seated coughs like this are as severe tests as a remedy can be subjected to. It is for these long-standing cases that Boschee's German Syrup is made a specialty. Many others afflicted as this lad was, will do well to make a note of this.

ALLIANCE TALKS.

NEWS OF THE ORDER FROM ALL SECTIONS.

Items of Interest to Alliancemen Everywhere.

OFFICIAL.

To the officers and members of all State, county, district or primary organizations under the jurisdiction of the National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union, greeting:

In pursuance of the authority in us vested by the proceedings of the supreme council at its last session at Ocala, Fla., to designate the place for holding the next annual supreme council, we, your national executive board, being limited by the terms of said authority to the states of Indiana and Illinois, do hereby make the following announcement:

Whereas we have carefully considered the facilities and hospitalities offered by the officials and citizens of many cities in those states; now, therefore, we do hereby announce the following as our official

NOTICE.—The next annual session of the Supreme Council of the National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union will convene in the city of Indianapolis, Ind., at 10 o'clock a. m., on the third Tuesday in November next, the same being the 17th day of said month. Hall and committee rooms have been tendered free. A very low hotel rate has been contracted for, and special railway rates will be announced by the national secretary at as early a date as possible. The hospitalities of Indianapolis were generously tendered by the honorable mayor of that city, who has carefully demonstrated its great advantages as a central and accessible point, with every accommodation, such that we feel assured our action will meet the unqualified approval of our great organization.

NOT DEFEATED.

Regarding the report which has been widely circulated that Missouri had defeated the Sub-treasury scheme, Senator Peffer has the following to say in a recent interview: "The Missouri Alliance has done the correct thing. The sub-treasury scheme is a proposition for the people to decide and they will go right. The sub-treasury advocates had enough votes in the convention to have carried the plan, but they disappointed the politicians by allowing the sub-alliances to settle the question. The sub-treasury scheme was not defeated. It was simply referred to the sub-alliances, and had it been a convention of Democrats or Republicans with a majority they would have fastened their idea on the people and the people would have been compelled to submit. The action of the Missouri convention will result in delay, but the alliance states will all have acted on the sub-treasury plan in time for the campaign of 1892, and I think the Cincinnati form will be practically the one on which the campaign will be fought by the people's party."

THE SUB-TREASURY IS THE REMEDY.

The Farm and Fireside says: When the new wheat first comes on the market, the buyers and speculators will endeavor to do their utmost to crowd down the price. There are so many farmers who are under the absolute necessity of realizing on their crops as soon after harvest as possible that there is always an opportunity for buyers to take advantage of the situation and bear down the price. There is danger of overcrowding the early market, forcing down the price and giving all the advantage of prospective high price to the speculators. There is good reason for believing that the wheat crop, both as to quantity and quality, has been overestimated, and it will be advisable for the producers to carefully consider the question of holding for better prices than are first offered. The remedy is be found in the sub-treasury plan. It is a deplorable fact that out affairs have come to this. But it is true, and it is the duty of our Congress or devise some plan to relieve the people. Our government, even if honestly conducted, is behind the times. Men are now so shrewd and have so many loopholes to go through that it has become absolutely necessary that a change be made. The sub-treasury plan will give it. Let us continue to work for it until we get it or something else.

OFFICIAL NOTICE.

In pursuance of authority conferred upon the executive board of the Confederation of Industrial Organizations, at the session of January 24, 1891, held in Washington, D. C., and after correspondence with members of the board, as chairmon thereof, I hereby give notice that the next meeting of the said Confederation of Industrial Organizations, will be held at Washington, D. C., February 22, 1892.

By authority of a resolution passed in the said meeting, January 24, 1891, as president I hereby invite the attendance of delegates from every industrial organization in the country to meet with the Confederation of Industrial Organizations at the meeting hereby called, that there may be harmony of action and combination of influences to effect the reforms which all deem necessary. Basis of representation will be made public hereafter.

BEN TERRELL,
President of Confederation, and chairman Executive Board.

The Alliance Advocate (Oakdale, Wash.) says: Men of the Alliance, don't let the rally of the political press bother you in the least. The very fact that the partisan papers in the State including our ablest dailies, are firing hot shot at the Alliance, is evidence that they recognize in the farmers' movement a formidable foe to the private interests of political bosses, and of course in zeal to perpetuate the old method of machine manipulation of politics they cry down the honest efforts of the masses to secure to themselves the rights and liberties so dearly bought by the blood stained Declaration of Independence and meant to forever be perpetuated by the constitution of the United States. The Alliance has a noble work to do and is responding in its mission. The mighty, invincible politician who a few years ago would not deign to touch an ordinary farmer, with a ten foot pole, now bows profoundly low to the honest tiller of the soil, and condescends even so far as to give up his meal-bag regime in case [illegible] instructions that [illegible] said politicians [illegible] with the [illegible] you will have few make of approval for the position given.

Farmers' Advocate (Tarboro, N. C.) says: "The Alliance has done more to educate the people than any other organization in this country. Men who took but little interest in the affairs of the country in the past are manifesting great interest in them now. Then again, to show its power as an educator, you will find more men who were entirely ignorant on important questions who now comprehend them. The masses are reading, writing and studying, and surely there will be a wise solution on momentous question, that are presented. This Alliance movement is nothing short of a great revolution. It is composed of some of the best-wisest and most upright people in this country, and those who are opposing the movement might as well come forward and recognize its importance and fall into line. It is going to sweep this country like a cyclone. The people who contribute liberally of their support to this government are restless and determined upon a change in its policy, and though we are not a prophet, we feel safe in saying that there will be a radical change. And the day is not far distant.

Governor Jones, of Alabama, has appointed Hector D. Lano of Limestone county, commissioner of agriculture, vice R. F. Kolb, whose term has expired. Lano was an original alliance man, one of the organizers in Alabama, assistant lecturer for two terms, and for a while editor of the state organ. He always opposed the alliance entering politics, but favored its standing to the original declarations. He occupied a position similar to that of Hall of Missouri. Kolb will contest the governor's right to appoint, claiming that the law making the office electoral at the election in 1892 continues him in office until that time. The legislature refused to adopt the clause in the law to that effect.

The Alliance Bulletin (Harper, Kans.) says: "With the sub-treasury plan in operation, the grip of Shylock upon the producers would be loosened. Instead of being compelled to force his wheat upon the market to save his chattles, the farmer would be enabled to borrow enough upon his wheat to relieve his present obligations and hold his wheat until prices advance to such a point as to allow him a reasonable compensation for his labor."

At a recent large and enthusiastic union meeting of citizens and Alliance men, representing Halifax county, Virginia, Person and Caswell counties, North Carolina, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, 1. That we demand reform in the administration of our government, and that we will not co-operate with any party nor vote for any man for any political office that does not adopt the measures we approve.

Resolved, 2. That we fully approve the Ocala platform.

The Wisconsin State Alliance adopted the Ocala demands and voted to submit the question whether the secret work of the National Farmers Alliance and Industrial Union should be adopted to the subordinate bodies, the majority of subs reporting by September to decide. So it is seen that another State seems to be prepared to join the column at Indianapolis in November.—Economist.

If you Farmers' Alliance people will only just fix it so as to knock out the Democratic party in the South, says the Republican politician, it will be all right; and the Democratic politician says that the alliance will be all right if it will only blow out the Republicans in Iowa and Ohio.—Great West.

The Alliance Aid Association is being favorably considered in several States, and it now seems probable that the project for its being made national will be successful. As a cheap fraternal life insurance it is much needed in the Order, and would be an additional bond between members.

The Kentucky election resulted as follows: People's party elected 73 members of the legislature; Democrats, 50; Republicans, 15. So the People's party has a majority of 8 members over both old parties.

There are eighty-six rich men in the U. S. Senate, and two Alliancemen, Peffer and Kyle. Forty-seven of the Senators are millionaires. Can working people expect favorable legislation in their interest from their masters.—Progressive Farmer.

From all over New York State comes the cheering news of a rapid growth. The alliance is standing squarely by the Ocala demands despite the efforts of other organizations to side track them.—Economist.

Texas, Mississippi and Missouri were depended on to cause division in the alliance. The scheme has failed, and the order as a unit is on top in all these states.—Economist.

NO RELIEF

For the Handicapped Free Laborers of Tennessee.

A Nashville dispatch says: Whatever relief free labor in Tennessee is to have from competition with the purchased slaves of soulless corporations must come through other channels than the abrogation of the convict lease system. The Tennessee house of representatives have said as much.

True, the allegation was based upon the ground that the legislature was powerless to abrogate a contract; that the constitution of the state and of the United States prohibited the legislative impairment of a contract, but still it's a fact that the large majority of the members who based their action on constitutional grounds are, at the same time, of the opinion that the lease system is the best to be had, and that the state cannot, at this time, afford to lose the $100,000 per annum received from the penitentiary leases, and support the convicts or work them, as Governor Buchanan suggested, in new coal and iron fields. The fight over the resolution was long and bitter, and argument was in vain. The resolution declaring that under the constitution the legislature could not abrogate their contract had a large majority, the vote being 5 to 27.

THE ONLY RELIEF REMAINING.

It now remains to amend the criminal law, so that in time the competition will not be so great, and to arrange, if possible, with the lessees, the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company, that the convicts may be confined to one or two mines, and not compete with miners in the whole mining district. It is possible that this will be done, and, if so, it will remove that great objection to the lease system, an evil [illegible] made a [illegible]

JUMP IN COTTON.

The Largest Crop Ever Raised—A 15 Per Cent Advance.

Cotton is up, both in price and quality. In price it has advanced 15 per cent, and in quality, the large quantity already marketed in Texas, averaged about middling. Last year it was considerably below. Taking both the improvement in the price of middling, and the higher average price on account of higher grade, the advance is a heavy one.

January opened Thursday morning at 9.03 and closed Thursday morning at 9.25. This makes an advance of about a cent and a quarter within twenty days.

HESTER'S REPORT.

Secretary Hester, of the New Orleans cotton exchange, has completed the final details of the cotton crop movement, the principal figures of which were issued on September 1st. His introductory remarks state that the cotton crop of the United States for the year ending at the close of August, 1891, is 8,653,579 bales, the largest crop ever grown by 1,341,275 bales.

In reference to the receipts at American ports, Mr. Hester says that with the enormous crop the movement in every direction has been correspondingly heavy. New Orleans has handled more cotton than in any year, but one of her history, her net receipts exceeding 2,000,000 bales for the first time since the war, and reaching within 50,000 of those in 1860, the largest ante-bellum year. Galveston has passed the million mark for the first time, and Savannah has handled considerable more than a million bales, exceeding all previous records.

The gross overland movement for the year, after deducting interchanges between the different points of crossing and reshipping into the cotton belt, has reached 1,538,260 bales, exceeding last year by 184,870, and the year before by 181,689.

The heaviest gains in the overland have been at St. Louis, and points above, on the Mississippi river, which show an excess of 237,000. Railroads out of Louisville are 95,000 bales ahead of last year, while Cairo, exclusive of through cotton for St. Louis, is short nearly forty-two thousand bales. Cincinnati and Virginia points also show a falling off of 113,000.

FOREIGN EXPORTS.

The statement makes foreign exports for the year: To Great Britain, 3 329,432; to France, 559,099; to the continent and channel ports, 1,890,291; a total, exclusive of Canada, of 5,778,822. The excess in foreign ports over last year is 878,382, of which Great Britain has taken 479,330; France, 86,362, and the continent, 312,690. The report mentions shipments of American cotton from New York to Japan of 4,494 bales. Total takings for American consumption during the year were 2,632,023 bales, against 2,346,153. These embrace 2,027,362 by Northern spinners, against 1,799,558 last year, a gain of 228,104; and 604,661 by Southern spinners, against 546,894 last year, a gain of 57,765.

LABOR DAY.

Its Observance Tuesday in All the Large Cities.

Labor Day was celebrated at Columbia, S. C., by a parade of the Typographical Union, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, American machinists and representative bodies from various mercantile and manufacturing establishments. This is the first labor procession which has taken place in South Carolina, and business houses were generally closed in recognition of the event.

At Chicago, Labor Day was very generally observed. The banks, board of trade, business houses, courts and municipal offices were closed. The day was bright but rather cold for outdoor pleasures, except of an active sort. During the morning there was a general parade of labor organizations of the city, whose members marched through the principal streets with waving banners and suitable devices and mottoes. After the parade the various organizations proceeded to parks outside the city, where they spent the remainder of the day in athletic games, dancing and speech-making. There was parades and picnics also in some of the larger manufacturing suburbs.

At Nashville Labor Day was celebrated with more enthusiasm than has ever been seen before. Fully twenty thusand people were on the streets to witness the parade, which was composed of all labor unions in that vicinity. The procession adjorned to West Side park where speeches were made by prominent labor advocates and politicians.

In New York the day was honored by a general suspension of business. State and city courts held no sessions, and the sessions of the police courts were brief. The custom house, postoffice, sub-treasury, appraisers' office and assay office were all closed. Chimes were rung and special services held in Old Trinity church at night. The carrying out of the varied and extensive program arranged for the day was seriously interfered with by the prevalence of a heavy northeast rainstorm, effectually preventing the proposed big procession, and causing the indefinite postponement of the numerous picnics, cricket and tennis matches, football games, horse races and other field sports.

Labor Day was observed in Memphis in a more momentous manner than on any other since its inception. Banks and exchanges closed, and business men generally made a half holiday for the occasion. The principal streets of the city were traversed the the by a parade nearly two miles long, consisting of different trade organizations and the fire and police departments of the city. The appearance in line of the Farmers' Alliance on horseback, each member wearing a wisp of hay or cotton boll in his hat, was greeted with much enthusiasm.

Specials to The Kansas City Star, from Kansas, indicate that Labor Day was very generally observed as a holiday, and in many places the Farmers' Alliance took a prominent part in the celebration of the day.

A Newspaper Change.

The most important newspaper change announced in Philadelphia for some time occurred Monday morning, when The Public Ledger office, William V. Hallings, for more than twenty six years managing editor, retired, and was succeeded by E. Clarke Davis as [illegible] Mr. Davis [illegible] Ledger [illegible]

Hot Weather Suggestions.

At the opening of the heated term a few good resolutions should be made. Among the first should be one to cultivate tranquillity of mind. Nothing more conduces to comfort of body. In hot weather a fiery argument is almost as productive of a raised physical temperature as is a brisk walk in the blazing sun. Moreover, its effects are less readily dissipated, for it is easier to sit down and get cool after bodily exertion than it is to subdue the perturbed mind that it will not cause a series of "hot flushes" for possibly hours after a vehement discussion.

The same rule that applies to undue exercise of the tongue and temper should be observed in intellectual pursuits conducted in the dog-days. Do not attempt to shirk steady work in this line; but let all you do be done methodically, not spasmodically. Adherence to the German motto, "Without haste, without rest," relentless as it seems, is really less wearying than a series of violent efforts resulting in a fatigue which can be relieved only by utter repose.

So much for the mental attitude in hot weather. The bodily condition is of equal importance. Many people seem to think that ease in summer can only be obtained by laziness, that employment of any sort is the mortal enemy of bien-etre, and so devote the whole of the long days to what is expressively termed "loafing." What wonder if for them the weeks drag drearily, and that they hail the return of shortened days and frosty nights as a release from ennui.

There is no better way to keep cool than to have some regular occupation, be it never so trivial, that will serve to divert the mind from the bodily condition. No matter what this employment may be, whether the charge of certain branches of house-work, the doing of the family mending, the conducting of a course of reading, the studying of a language or a science—whatever it is, let it be made a duty, and followed conscientiously.—Harper's Bazar.

Cleaning the Streets of Paris.

The rag-pickers of Paris do a work for which other cities pay large sums annually to street cleaning departments. They toil at night, and the value of what they collect is estimated at $10,000 for each twenty-four hours. Of course, the conditions of Paris life are exceptional. Population is very close; the tall houses are crammed with inhabitants; there are no gardens—there are but the houses and streets. The Parisians have a way of employing all kinds of lumber and refuse into the streets, and then the rag-pickers gather in their harvest. A use is found for everything, and metamorphosis never cease. All the details are interesting, though some are rather disturbing.

Rags, of course, go to make paper; broken glass is pounded, and serves as the coating for sand or emery paper; bones, after the process of cleaning and cutting down serve to make nailbrushes and toothbrushes and fancy buttons; little wisps of women's hair are carefully unraveled and do duty for false hair by and by; men's hair, collected outside the barbers', serves for filters through which syrups are strained; bits of sponge are cut up and used for spirit lamps; bits of bread, if dirty, are toasted and grated and sold to the restaurants for spreading on hams or cutlets; sometimes they are carbonized and made into tooth powder; sardine boxes are cut up into tin soldiers or into sockets for candlesticks; a silk hat has a whole chapter of adventures in store for it. All this work employs a regiment of rag pickers numbering close on twenty thousand.

A Disgusting Accident.

Mrs. Portico (at sea-side hotel)—"I was so shocked to hear that your daughter's horse ran away with her this morning."

Mrs. Veranda—"It was perfectly horrible!—disgusting!"

"I heard she was not hurt?"

"There wasn't a young man on the drive, and she was picked up by two old married men and a porter!"—New York Weekly.

Within the Law.

Wild-eyed-Man—"I want a lot of poison right off."

Drug clerk—"It's against the law to sell poisons to people who look as if they wanted to commit suicide: but I'll let you have a bottle of Dr. Black-Sequet's Elixir of Life. That seems to be a very sure death.—Streets and Smith's Good News.

Economical Pleasuring.

City Cousin—"I see the farm-house next to this one is closed. Why is that?"

Rural Relative—"Mrs. Hayfork, who lives there, has gone to the sea-side for the summer. She says it's cheaper than staying on the farm and feedin' city relations."—New York Weekly.

Confirmed.

The favorable impression produced on the first appearance of the agreeable liquid fruit remedy Syrup of Figs a few years ago has been more than confirmed by the pleasant experience of all who have used it, and the success of the proprietors and manufactures the California Fig Syrup Company.

A man's idea of being good to a woman is to give her opportunities to be good to him.

The Weight of Money.

Do you know how many $1 bills it takes to weigh as much as a $20 gold piece? Driving out to White Bear recently one of those walking compendiums of useful information sprung the above query and the opinions that it elicited show a remarkable range. One member of the party, whose business it is to handle money in large sums, after profound thought, suggested that the number would be from 1,000 to 1,200. Others guessed down the line to 500, but no one less than that number. After all had placed themselves on record, the compendium stated that it was thirty to thirty-one, according to their condition as to dirtiness and age. He could just as well have based his calculations on $10 bills, but the man who was giving them a weigh preferred to make the test with a smaller denomination.—St. Paul Pioneer-Press.

Presented His Wife With a Coffin.

J. A. Cowles of Beloit, Wis., aged ninety two years, has presented his wife with a coffin made by himself as a present on her eighty-ninth birthday. The couple have been married seventy years. Mr. Cowles takes great pride in his unique gift, and says that while he hopes and expects both will live yet some time, nature's demand must before long be complied with, and a coffin will be necessary. It is about all they need now. The couple are fairly well off and in good health.—Chicago Tribune.

"German Syrup"

J. C. Davis, Rector of St. James' Episcopal Church, Eufaula, Ala.: "My son has been badly afflicted with a fearful and threatening cough for several months, and after trying several prescriptions from physicians which failed to relieve him, he has been perfectly restored by the use of two bottles of Boschee's German Syrup. I can recommend it without hesitation." Chronic severe, deep-seated coughs like this are as severe tests as a remedy can be subjected to. It is for these long-standing cases that Boschee's German Syrup is made a specialty. Many others afflicted as this lad was, will do well to make a note of this.

THE GEORGIA CRACKER.

...l Arp Tells How He Came Into Existence.

...reeman of the Woods, the Georgia ...racker Brooked Neither Restraint ...of Fashion Nor of Law, But Grew Up Untrammeled.

...itten for The Constitution.

...ot to go back into history further than ...own time and recollections, let me ven...e upon some unoccupied territory and tell ...w Cherokee, Georgia, became the home of ...t much-maligned and misunderstood in...idual known as the Georgia cracker. I ...ve lived long in his region and am close ...n to him.

...re is really but little difference between ...Georgia cracker and the Alabama or ...nessee cracker. They all have or had the ...e origin, and until the Appalachian ...ge was opened up to the rest of mankind ...railroads and the schoolhouse these crack...had ways and usages and a language pe...liarly their own.

...t will be remembered that until 1835 the ...erokee Indians owned and occupied this ...ion of Georgia—the portion lying west of ...Chattahoochee and north of the Talla...see rivers. They were the most peaceable ...d obliged of all the tribes, but they were ...subject to Georgia laws, and had many ...fficulties and disturbances with their white ...rs. It seemed to be manifest destiny ...t they should go. "Go west, red man," ...s the white man's flat. They went at the ...t of the bayonet, and all their beautiful ...ntry was soldiery opened to the ingress ...whomsoever might come. Georgia had it ...veyed and divided into lots of forty and ...acres, and then made a lottery and gave ...ry man and widow and orphan child a ...ce in the drawing. But the cracker ...ent would not wait for the drawing. The rude, un...ed and restless people from the mountain ...ricts of Georgia and the Carolinas flocked ...o pursue their wild and fascinating ...putation of hunting and fishing for a live...od. They came separately, but soon as...ociated and shared a common interest. ...ere are such spirits in every community. ...re are some right here now who would ...ke a camp to Cohutta mountains on a bear ...ction long as New York or Paris for ...ssure. I must confess myself, and I re...the earnest cravings of my youth to go ...k and find a wilderness, and with my ...panions live in a hut and kill deer and ...rkeys, and sometimes a bear and a pan...r.

...But for my town raising and old field ...ool education I too would have made a ...y respectable cracker. This was the class ...young men and middle-aged that first ...ttled among these historic hills and valleys ...d climbed these mountains and fished in ...se streams. By and by the fortunate ...wners of these lands received their certifi...tes and many of them came from all parts ...f the state to look up their lots and see how ...much gold or how much bottom land there ...as upon them, but gold was the principal ...traction. The Indians had found gold and ...ined it out of the creeks and branches and ...ded it in small parcels to the white man. ...t was believed that every stream was ...ed with golden sand. This proved an il...sion, and so the squatters were not disturbed ...or else they bought their titles for a song ...and then sang "sweet home" of their own. ...They built their cabins and cleared their ...nts and raised their scrub cattle, and with ...ir old fashioned rifles kept the family in ...me. Many of these settlers could read ...d write, but in their day there was but ...tle to read. No newspapers and but few ...oks were found by the hunter's friends. ...eir children grew up the same way, but ...ile they lacked in culture they supplied in ...ugh experiences and hair-breadth escapes ...d fireside talk, and in the sports that were ...eir impoverished or inherited. Pony races, ...nder pulling, shooting matches, coon ...nting and quiltings had more attractions ...an books. How they got to using such ...sisted language as you'uns and we'uns and ...t injuns and mount and gwine and all ...ch is not known, nor was such talk univer...l. When such idioms began in a family ...ey descended and spread out among the ...ndred, but it was not contagious. I know ...e family now of very extensive connections ...ho have all left off their own, and it can ...e traced back to some old ancestor who died ...f a century ago. But those corruptions ...f languages are by no means peculiar to the ...ntucky, North English cockneys, and the ...rthern Yankee have an idiom quite as ec...entric though they do not realize it and ...ink it standard.

The Georgia cracker was a merry-hearted, ...unconcerned, independent creature, and all ...e asked was to be let alone by the laws and ...e outside world.

The justice court of his beat was quite ...rough limitation for him. He had far ...more respect for the old spectacled 'squire ...than for the highest court in the nation. ...From this home-made tribunal he never ap...pealed until the young lawyers began to fig...ure in it, and seduced him into the mysteries ...of the law and the wonderful performances of the writ of "Sasher ry." Nevertheless, they looked upon lawyers as suspects and parasites, and their descendants have the same opinion still. The old 'squire was specially "fornenst" them, and looked upon the adversary as an insult to his judicial capacity. Sometimes he would let two young limbs of the law argue a case before him for half an hour, and then quietly remark, "Gentleman, I judge you're educated. In case last night at home," and would proceed with his docket. That old 'squire and the preacher were quite enough to puor these people through life, and across the dark river.

A few years after they had settled down as the successors to the Indians a class of more substantial citizens began to look upon this beautiful country. They purchased the valley lands and the river bottoms and soon the lower 'scapes began to fall before the axe of the pioneers. Some of them brought slaves with them and erected sawmills and framed houses with glass windows to live in, and the school master came along, but the crackers were in the majority and lived along in the same old primitive way. As late as 1827 they had gander pullings and one that I witnessed that summer lasted for two hours and the original Bill Arp was the victor. I could have seen more of them, but I did not care to just for the same reason that a kind-hearted man does not wish to see but one hanging.

One Saturday morning when we arrived at Blue Gizzard courtground, the clans had gath red in unusual force. As preliminary to the more important contest that was soon to come off, some of the boys were shooting at a small piece of white paper that was pinned to a distant tree. Some were gathered around the spring. Some were trying old mother Tutten's fresh cider and ginger cakes that she offered from the hindgate of her little wagon, and some were sampling the corn whiskey that was kept in a jug in the little log courthouse hard by. We soon perceived the central and most attrave spot to be a small tree with a limb forking about ten feet from its base. A long, slender, springy pole was resting in the fork with the large end pressed to the ground and fastened with stobs crossed on either side and driven firmly in the clay. This inclined raised the long end of the pole quite high in the air, and to that end was looped a plow line, and to the lower end of the line another loop was slipped over the feet of a venerable gander and left him swinging, head downward, just high enough for a horseman to reach it easily as he rode underneath. The doomed bird gave an occasional squawk, and, with wings half open and neck half bent, looked unquestioned alarm upon the proceedings. The feathers had been stripped from its neck and a thick coat of grease put on instead. The undergrowth had been removed and a running path for the horseman carefully cleared of all obstructions. The tournament began at 11 o'clock. Twenty sovereigns, mounted on their plow nags, ranged themselves at one end of the path and awaited the call of their names by the old 'squire, who had them written on a fly-leaf in the back of his docket. No man was allowed to ride until he had planked up a dollar. The old 'squire had contributed the gander just out of good will to the boys, he said, and he was nominated as treasurer and umpire and carried the bag, and on his decision the whole sum was to be awarded the victor. He had adjourned his court for two hours to see the fun and keep down any disturbance of the peace. Eight "whippers" were mustered in, four on each side of the running course. They were all armed with good long switches of hickory, and their willing duty was to see to it that no man's nag moved towards the gander with less alacrity than a gallop. "Now, boys," said he, "not a lope that would keep a dog-a-lopin' half an hour in the shade of a tree, but a right lively gallop, and if the critter slows up any, you must spurtin him up a little—especially as he's a-nighin' towards the gander."

The boys were true sovereigns. They were not knights. They were arrayed in their home made pants and home-made shirts and home-knit galluses. Their shoes were made at the tannery and their hats at the hattery. Coats and vests were not on their regalia. All the neighborhood were there spectators including many women, some with infants at the breast and some with sons in the tournament.

The gathering people exchanged salutations and smiles and gave the family news and gradually drew near the place where the auserian struggle was impending.

The old squire had participated in some old fashioned frusters in his day, and so, when everything was ready he stood on a log, and, raising his right hand, exclaimed: "Pention company! In the proceedings that we are about to proceed with it are expected that every man will conduct his behavior accordin' to what's fair and honest—no man are to take any advantage of any other man nor of the gander. That he are hangin' without a friend. Tote fair, boys, tote fair; and put him out of misery as quick as you ken, in reason. Jack Pullum—three paces to the front—now ready—aim—charge—"

As Jack stuck his heels in his pony's flank the crowd shouted: "Charge 'em Jack! Charge 'em!" But Jack's critter wasn't used to charging. He rebelled at the go and the "whippers in" had to come to his support. He dashed in and out of the path wildly, but finally took the bit in his teeth and started down the line on a desperate run for freedom amid the shouts and cheers of the multitude. He steered well until he suddenly eyed the great white bird just ahead of him. He stopped as if on the brink of a precipice, but Jack went on. That capped the climax of tumultuous hilarity. The like of that was what they came for. Jack caught on his hands and feet, and was soon remounted and took another start, and his nag behaved better, but still did not come in reach of the gander, and Jack lost his chance until the second grand round. "We'uns hain't got no geese at our house" said he, "and my animal never seed one afore as I knows on."

"Samuel Swillin, to the front, called the squire. "Ready, aim, charge." Sam's critter was more tractable and Sam got a fair grab, but the grease was too slick for him, and as he slipped his hold the poor bird swung to and fro and flopped his wings and squawked loud and long at the terrible squeeze and the more terrible elongation of his oesophagus. Sam was congratulated on his effort. He wiped his fingers on a pine top, and said: "Yes I'll be dadburned if I wouldent have got him, but the dingd thing was so allfired slickery. I was in hopes that Jack Pullum would have got the fust grab and stocked offen some of it."

"Rube Underwood"—to the front—ready—aim—charge. Rube had a big mouth and was freckle faced and red headed, and rode a fine-bitten gray that had been taught to dance and prance around and to go sideways—"i'st to show smart," as the boys said—and it took the animal some time to be convinced that dancing and prancing wasn't in order at this particular time. A walloping lick just as he neared the grist caused him to make a fearful leap right under the bird, and Rube had to use both hands to hold his seat the gander's head collided square in Rube's face and souse went it in his mouth and "offen he'd just shet it he would have had the prize." He retired in good order and awaited his second turn. One by one the riders came as they were called. One after another got some of the grease and wiped it on their horses' manes, but the muscles of the gander were oiled and tough, and every one of the twenty had gone his round and failed, when the squire called a halt and ordered another greasing. It was evident, however, that some damage had been done the bird, for his wings hung droopy and his voice was failing him. There was a laceration of sinews going on, and but for the fresh greasing the sport would have soon ended. "Tention company," said the 'squire. "The proceedinses will now take a little recess. Boys, you can light and look at your saddles, and if you want water you can go to the spring and git it, but don't wait long for my old gander are hangin' there without a friend and sufferin'."

The tournament was soon resumed. Bill Arp was the tenth man of the second round. He was the tenth of the first, and many predicted that gander's neck or the plow line or the pole, for his grip was like a vise and his agility notorious, but somehow the gander ducked at the critical moment and Bill grabbed his head instead of his neck and made a miscarriage.

As Bill's turn came again the crowd ejaculated: "Now, watch him boys." "Can't he ride, though?" "See how he sots on his critter." "Blamed if he ain't taxed to his nag." "Look at his eye." "No whippers for him." "He's gwine to carry that gander's head half a mile before he stops." "Farewell, goose, I'll preach your funeral." "Good-bye, gander."

And sure enough Bill got the right grip this time and in a trice had given the neck a double and something had to break as the pole and the line swiftly followed his motion. For a moment it seemed uncertain what would break or what had broken for the strained tendons popped like a whip as Bill's nag went on at full speed. For a little while the quivering, headless body swung backwards and forwards and was then at rest. Then came the shouts and the wild hurrah. Bill was game and so was his critter, and as they came round to the front the crowd gathered round to see the gander's head that he held high in his hand—the warm blood trickling from the arteries. After the jubilee was over Bill invited the nineteen and the squire to old Mother Tutt's wagon, and having purchased her stock of cakes and cider and the jug in the courthouse he "gin 'em all a treat." There was not a fight nor a fuss in all the "proceedinses." In a few minutes thereafter the voice of the bailiff was heard crying, "Oh yes, oh yes—the honorable court of the 825th d'estrict are now met kordin' to adjournment. God save the state and the honorable court."

These rough, rude people were the original Georgia crackers. They constituted a large proportion of the population of Cherokee half a century ago. They were generally poor, but they enjoyed life more than they did money. They were sociable and they were kind. When one of their number was sick they nursed him—when he died they dug a grave and buried him, and that was the end of the chapter. There was no tombstone, no epitaph, no obituary. Their class is fast disappearing from our midst. Civilization has encroached upon them, and now their children and their children's children have assimilated a higher grade of humanity.

BILL ARP.

THE GRAIN CROP.

General Averages of Cereals for September.

The statistician of the department of agriculture at Washington reports September general averages of cereal crops as follows: Corn, 91.1; wheat, 96.8; rye, 95.1; oats, 90.7; barley, 94.8; buckwheat, 96.6. A small advance is noted in all; buckwheat alone excepted. The average for potatoes is 94.6; for tobacco, 87.4.

The condition of corn is twenty-one points higher than in September of last year and has been exceeded only three times in the past ten years. State averages are generally high; the lowest are those of Michigan and Wisconsin, Minnesota and North Dakota coming next, while South Dakota, Nebraska and Kansas, make figures under the general average. In the eastern and middle states the crop is well grown and is generally doing well, but a little late and the recent cool nights prevent rapid advancement yet. Frost has as yet done no damage. The crop is in condition in the southern states. It is not so much injured by heavy rains as cotton.

The condition of wheat is very high, considering both winter and spring varieties, in soils, latitude and elevations so widely differing. The general average has only been exceeded slightly, twice since 1879, and in 1889 and 1884. State averages are quite uniform, but 100 falling below 95 and three below 90, the lowest being 83 for South Carolina and 84 for North Carolina. Figures for the principal wheat-growing states are as follows: Ohio, 98; Michigan, 98; Indiana, 100; Illinois, 100; Wisconsin, 99; Minnesota, 100; Iowa, 99; Missouri, 94; Kansas, 89; Nebraska, 98; North Dakota, 95; South Dakota, 99; California, 98; Oregon, 97; Washington, 93. East of the mountains: New York, 99; Pennsylvania, 99; Maryland, 97; Virginia, 96. In the southwest: Texas, 97.

A Good Time Coming.

Maxim, the inventor of the gun bearing his name, is at work on a flying machine. "I hope," said he, "to be able to pour down half a ton of nitro-glycerine on a town, without the inhabitants knowing where it comes from. And," he adds, "I hope this will revolutionize the face of the globe." What a pleasure is in store for us!—Detroit Free Press.

Newsy Notes Paragraphically Presented.

Governor Jones has appointed J. C. Suttle tax collector of Bibb county.

A meeting of the stockholders of the Woodstock Iron company has been called for the 18th of October for the purpose of securing a working capital to continue the furnaces in operation.

The attorneys for both parties to the contest for the office of commissioner of agriculture have agreed upon the question of asking the supreme court to hold a special session to pass upon the appeal from the decision of Hon. F. C. Randolph.

President Harrison has appointed Walter S. Standifer as postmaster of Gadsden, to succeed Dr. W. T. Ewing, who died recently. There were only two applicants for the place—J. T. Green and W. S. Standifer. The appointment gives general satisfaction.

The case of Danforth & Armstrong vs. the Tennessee and Coosa Railroad company for $150,000 damages for breach of contract, which was tried several days ago in the city court of Gadsden was terminated by the jury rendering a verdict for Danforth & Armstrong for the neat sum of $39,985.

A few days ago Mrs. Charles Billon, wife to the foreman of the Alabama Great Southern railroad shops, in Birmingham, became mother of four little babies. Three of the quartett are boys and one a girl, and all are doing splendidly. The mother is of average size, is a little over twenty years of age, and these are her first children.

W. H. Hunt resigned several days ago as president of the Bank of Selma, and W. H. Trimby was elected to succeed him. It developes that Mr. Hunt resigned on August 30, but the matter was kept quiet. Mr. Hunt also filed a bill of sale of his property and made an assignment. Assets $50,000 and liabilities in excess of that amount.

In the district court at Florence a few days ago, in the case of Mrs. Mary Pannell vs. the Louisville and Nashville railroad for $30,000 damages for causing the death of her husband, a verdict was rendered for the defendants on the judge's charges, his instructions being, "If you believe the evidence find for the defendants." The verdict was a comple surprise. Mrs. Pannell's husband was killed by a freight train while crossing the Louisville and Nashville tracks some months ago.

The abstract of assessment from Crenshaw county shows a total valuation of $1,360,751, which yields a total tax of $5,450.16 for general purposes and a special tax of $680.87 for the soldiers. The total valuation of this county last year was $1,135,356, which yielded a total tax of $4,547.52. The completed and corrected abstract from Madison county shows a total valuation of $6,820,788, which yields a total tax of $27,385.11 for state purposes and a special tax of $3,410.39 for the benefit of old soldiers. Total assessment for last year, $6,904,328.

The Mobile Register, commenting on the recent threatened cotton pickers' strike, says: Farm labor in most parts of the cotton region in Alabama and west Mississippi is by tenants or upon the share system. Where there are negro alliances tenant farmers are influential members. Hired labor is composed of floating negroes and women and children of farmers. The substance of reports from especial correspondents upon the subject is that no traces of a strike circular have been found; that the extra labor needed is obtainable at current wages, and that negroes who discuss the strike oppose the idea.

Postmaster Houston, of Birmingham, has had published the following notice regarding civil service examinations: "There is a dearth of applicants for the railway mail service from the section of Alabama in and about Birmingham and the civil service commission has therefore directed that a special examination be held in Birmingham, commencing at 9 a. m., on September 29. Male citizens of the United States between the ages of 18 and 35 are eligible to the examination if they file applications in due form. Application banks and further information may be obtained by writing to the civil service commission, Washington, D. C. The applications should be forwarded to the commission at once as that admission cards may be obtained."

Murder Will Out.

A telegram from Quin says: About five years ago Pompey Underwood, a young boy about 16 years old, and carrying the mail between Hamilton and Hackleyville, was shot and killed and the mail pouch robbed, and until a few days ago there was no clue as to who murdered him. One J. H. Hoage, who is living at Poinsey, Ala., and who has been doing time at Huntsville for counterfeiting, confessed in jail to other parties that he did the bloody deed. He was arrested at his home a day or two ago and placed in Hamilton jail. Hoage has more than once served his term in prison and is considered by all to be a very dangerous man.

Weather Crop Bulletin.

Following is the weather crop bulletin issued by Director Mell, of the State Polytechnic Institute at Auburn, for week ended Sept. 12th: The rainfall for the week just closed was below the average. On Wednesday and Thursday light showers occurred in north and middle Alabama, but they were badly distributed; the week ends, however, with an easterly storm and there are good indications of an abundant rain. The temperature has been low and the nights have been quite cool. The cotton still continue to shed because of the cool, dry weather and in many sections the plant has almost stopped blooming. Complaint comes from many portions of the state that the plant is badly diseased and the yield will be cut off at least 25 per cent from a full crop, or a reduction of 14 points from the yield of 1890. All other crops have been needing rain, but the storm that is now prevailing over the state will be very beneficial to such as turnips, potatoes, sugar cane, peas, etc.

They Disbanded.

Several days ago, according to the Montgomery Advertiser, the members of Woodside farmers' alliance, No, 1,685, held a meeting and adopted the following startling and significant resolution: "Resolved, That, heartily endorsing the declaration of the principles as first promulgated by the farmers' alliance, we, the farmers of this neighborhood met and formed a sub-alliance, called the Woodside Alliance No. 1,035, which, since its organization, has honestly and faithfully endeavored to conform to and carry out, the original purposes and principles of the farmers' alliance; now whereas it seems to us that there has been a total change in the original purposes and principles of the farmers' alliance; its leaders becoming aspirants for office; its efforts at educating the people resulting in the boycotting of some of the leading papers; encouraging only the onesided and partisan publications; its adopted organs attacking the course and character of time-honored representatives of the people, who have patriotically and heroically battled, in a hopeless minority, against the encroachments of a reckless representation of a centralized power and a corrupt plutocracy; attempting to force the people to a blind and unthinking indorsement of wild and reckless schemes of finance and revolution; to form a third party for the disruption of the unity of the south and the elevation of the leaders to the most exalted offices, some of whose characters in the past are not beyond reproach. We, being endowed with reason and education sufficient to form our opinions of men and measures, and that responsibilities, rest upon every individual for his words and deeds, and that he cannot, without moral blame, submit his reason and conscience to the guidance of any set of men or any organization, have resolved this day to dissolve our connection with the Farmers' Alliance and surrender the charter of Woodside alliance No. 1035.

An Interesting Circular.

State School Superintendent Harris has issued a circular letter of information to the county and district school superintendents from which we make the following extracts: "Gentlemen—Let me call your attention to certain laws governing our public schools. Under the head of superintendent of education we find the following, defining some of his duties:

1. He shall devote his time to the care and improvement of the common schools and the promotion of education, and shall exercise a general supervision over all the educational interests of the state; and to this end he shall have power to require from the county superintendents of education, township superintendents of public schools, and all other school officers, all such reports and information relating to the educational fund or the condition of the schools and the management thereof as he may deem important, or as may be prescribed by law; and he may remove from office any such officer for failure to make such report, give such information or discharge any other official duty.

The last clause of the above paragraph clothes the superintendent with power to remove any officer for failure to perform an official duty.

Section 1016 directs how the unused funds of the past two years shall be apportioned. This apportionment should be made immediately on the close of the scholastic year, and should be made per capita according to the number of children in the county between the ages of ...

Upon the receipt of the money on any pay roll, the receipts enclosed therewith should be signed and returned forthwith, the original to the state treasurer and duplicate to state auditor, and not wait until the pay roll is receipted by the teachers. The receipted pay roll should be sent to the state superintendent, and not to the state treasurer.

The only change made in the law passed by the last legislature concerning township trustees increases the number to three in each township. This is a most important office, the contracting with teachers and the sale of sixteenth section lands constitue a very sacred duty. The sale of sixteenth section lands should be cautiously made after due and proper notice given, and every provision of the law carried out.

The act—regulating "the just and equitable" distribution of the funds—passed at the last session of the legislature, does not interfere with the law regulating the collection and application of the poll tax. These statutes remain the same, and the poll tax goes to each race as heretofore.

The only safe and sure protection the people in the country have against incompetent and inefficient teachers is in the hands of the county educational board, hence its importance. This board should examine into the moral character as well as the capacity to teach of the applicants. No license should be granted to an intemperate, profane or otherwise immoral man. This board should also inquire into the character of the school books used in the public schools, white or colored, in their respective counties. No book should be allowed taught in any of our schools supported in whole, or in part from the revenue of the state that reflects on the character, patriotism, chivalry and honesty of those who supported and defended the cause of the confederacy, or in any way took part on the southern side.

The law authorizes a license to be granted to any one, without examination, who has a diploma from any chartered institution of learning, on proof of good moral character, and payment of the license fee."

ENCOURAGING OUTLOOK

For the Trade of the Country Reported by Dun & Co.

R. G. Dun's review of trade for week ended September 11th says: All returns of the condition of business are encouraging. There is no room for doubt about the improvement in trade. From nearly every city reporting there comes the same cheering information that business is better and prospects brighter. The government crop report is one of the most favorable ever issued. It is not impossible that some of the injuries sustained, since the detailed reports were forwarded from the different counties, may reduce the yield somewhat below the indications of the official returns.

At the south improvement is general—especially at Louisville, Memphis, Savannah and Atlanta, and at New Orleans trade is more active, rice being especially strong, and money in good demand. The enormous receipts of wheat have depressed prices. The exports continue large, but the belief is growing that foreign crops are not quite so short as has been reported, though short enough to cause an unprecedented demand from this country. Thus the price of wheat has fallen 5½ cents during the past week, with sales of only 23,000,000 bushels. The fall since the highest point in August has been 16 cents at New York and 49 cents in Chicago, and this week there has been a semi-panic abroad, as the new crop presses heavily upon markets overloaded with American purchases. Corn declined but little, and oats only 1 cent. Pork products are higher, and oil about 5 cents lower.

The great industries are making satisfactory progress. The weekly output of iron September 1st was 170,846 tons, against 169,376 last month, and at the same date last year 171,776 tons.

The financial outlook is clearer. While the shipments of gold from Europe were not strictly upon an exchange basis, the rate of sterling exchange has fallen to $4.88¾ during the week, and the exports of merchandise from New York for the past two weeks have exceeded those of the same week last year by more than 50 per cent, while in imports there appears a decrease of about 20 per cent. The government has paid out over ten million dollars for bonds not extended, and further disbursements on the same account are expected, though the treasury is restricting other payments for the time as far as possible.

The opening of Germany and Denmark to American pork products has lifted the price of pork a half dollar per barrel. With the greatest crops every grown, and an unprecedented foreign demand for grain and meat, the prospect must be considered equally encouraging.

The Baldwin failure covering throughout the country during the past week, ranging for the United States 167; Canada 14; total 181, against 247 last week.

How a Spider Ruined a Nation.

When the French Quartermaster, Disjonval, was confined in prison by the Dutch at Utrecht he sought to beguile the tedium of his prison life by attentively studying the habits of the spiders which frequented his cell; and eight years of imprisonment gave him leasure to be well versed in their ways. In December of 1794 the French Army, on whose victoy over the Dutch depended Disjonval's restoration to liberty, were in Holland, and the victory seemed certain if the frost, which was then of unprecedented severity, continued.

The Dutch envoys had failed to negotiate a peace, and Holland was dispairing when the frost suddenly broke. The Dutch were now exulting, and the French Generals prepared to retreat; but the spiders of Disjonval's cell forewarned him that the thaw would be of short duration, and he knew that his little insect weather monitor never deceived him. Accordingly he contrived to communicate his weather knowledge to the army of his countrymen, and its Generals who duly estimated his (Disjonval's) character, relied upon his assurance that within a few days the waters would again be frozen so as to be passable to French troops. They delayed their retreat; within twelve days a sharp freeze set in, and the French Army triumphed. Disjonval was released, and a spider had brought ruin to the Dutch nation.—[St. Louis Republic.

The Trout Caught the Diamond.

This is the way the latest fish story is told hereabouts: Joseph S. Frey, saloon keeper on South Third street, and William Bercaw were trout fishing up in Monroe county on Saturday. While forcing his way through a thick clump of bushes overhanging the stream Bercaw saw a good-sized trout dart out from a bank of the creek and pass directly beneath him. Working his way to a secluded nook a few feet above, the anxious angler cast his fly with such skill that in a few seconds he caught and safely landed a speckled beauty about ten inches in length. He made a second effort, but could get no more trout there. Well, the fishermen continued on their way until their sport had ended and they seated themselves to clean their fish, of which, of course, they had a fine lot. On opening one of the trout the fish was found to contain a diamond shirt stud. This caused Bercaw to look for his diamond, when it was found to be missing. Then it flashed to the fisherman's mind how fortunate he had been—that in passing through the brush his diamond had been forced from his shirt front; the trout he had seen dart in front of him had swallowed the jewel, and then he had succeeded in capturing the fish. To a reporter of the Express, who inquired of Mr. Bercaw concerning the truthfulness of the story, the latter declared it to be a fact in every particular.—[Easton (Penn.) Express.

Feeding Dead Animals to Snakes.

The authorities of the Berlin Zoo are making an interesting experiment. They are feeding the snakes on dead animals, and it is claimed that the reptiles, once they are accustomed to the diet, will thrive as well as they hitherto have on live animals. The gaping mob which used to witness the snakes' performances in swallowing living chickens and rabbits with as much gusto will in the future by disappointed, but the cause of humanity will certainly be served by the change.

The Alabama state troops are now complete according to the prescribed statutes of the state. There are forty-two companies, divided into three regiments, each of which contains fourteen companies. This is all the soldiers the state provides for.

Senator Morgan in a recent speech made an unfortunate allusion to the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette as good authority for the telegrams that had been published in the Montgomery Advertiser against L. L. Polk, president of the National Alliance. The Commercial Gazette is a radical sheet of the worst character and the Senator should have found a Democratic backer for the Advertiser or held his peace.

The Kansas Farmer, of which Senator Peffer is editor, in a full column editorial written for the purpose of showing that the chief aim of the Southern Alliance is to divide the Democratic party and deliver the fragments to its enemies closes with this significant paragraph:

If the Alliance should fail in everything else it proposes, but should succeed in breaking up the "solid South" by absorbing a majority of the Democratic votes of that section, it will deserve the lasting gratitude of the whole nation. It will have accomplished what the managers of the republican party have spent years of time and several millions of dollars in vain to do, and by so doing demonstrate its greater potency as a political diplomat.

Gov. Jones recently made a very able and interesting address to the people of Wilcox county at Camden. We extract the following concerning a "something better" than the sub-treasury plan, and which failed in our own State, but which still costs our tax payers nearly $1,000 a day:

The American colonies tried this same land scheme in principle, with the exception that they sought to limit the amounts to be loaned. But experience shows that it is futile, for one issue always brings another. Pennsylvania and Rhode Island experimented on the same line, and Massachusetts and other colonies followed the evil example. The invariable experience was ruin and disaster. Nobody was permanently benefitted; everybody was seriously injured.

We have had a more recent experience in the misfortunes of the Argentine Republic, which fully tested the land loan scheme. It enveloped that country in financial disaster and ruin, broke the great English house of Baring Bros., and was one of the main causes of the stringency in the money markets of this country shortly afterwards. The history of other foreign countries in the past is full of similar experiences, but I have not time to go into that now.

As we all know the State of Alabama once indulged in the business of banking or loaning money to the people. Everything went well for a time. The panic of 1837, however, caused great depression and suffering in Alabama. A cry came up from the people that the State must come to the rescue by lending the people money. A called session of the legislature was had, and in June, 1837, the State issued $5,000,000 of bonds which were sold at par, and loaned the amount through the banks to the people. The loans were required to be apportioned according to population in the several counties, and no individual could borrow more than $2,000. The loans bore 7 per cent. interest, secured by "two good and sufficient securities," and when required, by a "deed of trust on real estate and slaves." Men of ability and honesty conducted the banks but they soon failed, entailing a flood of litigation and distress upon the people. The State was compelled to wind up the banks, and the taxpayers to foot the bills, which were enormous. In the debt compromise in 1876, the bonds issued by the people, were not scaled, though the rate of interest was reduced. This $5,000,000 issue of bonds now bears four per cent. interest and the State pays $200,000 interest per annum on them. The State also put into the bank the University fund, the sixteenth section fund and the surplus revenue fund. All these trust funds were swallowed up in the operations of the bank, and in consequence the State now pays yearly interest on these trust funds, in round numbers, over $200,000 [illegible] pay of Alabama are paying to-day, $662,000 interest per year, or nearly a thousand dollars a day, on account of a mistake in "something better" on this line which our ancestors made 50 years ago. Shall this bitter experience, the burdens of which bears hard on the taxpayers every day, be lost sight of?

The "Something Better."

Linden Reporter.

The cry of the day is money, money—give us more money; increase the per capita so that every man, woman and child would be loaded with the needful. If gold and silver be scarce, the demand is start the government press and give us paper money until every inhabitant of the earth is a millionaire. Now, this can be accomplished by a plan that will supply gold and silver in such quantities that every one will be a Monte Christo, and the beauty of the plan is it will not cost near so much as to build government warehouses, in fact there will be no need for warehouses, because the world will have no need to raise cotton or bread stuffs—every fellow will have such an immense per capita of gold and silver he will toil not, neither will he spin. The Ocala men say, "If these things won't do give us something better; we are not wedded to any particular plan." Well how is this for a relief plan?

Scientists tell us that at one time this sublunary orb was a seething, boiling, liquid mass, and when it began to cool and condense the heaviest articles sought the middle. It is probable that the great mass of the sphere is iron; but there are metals heavier than iron—gold and platinum. These would naturally settle about the middle. And able geologists say about the middle of the earth is a vast sea of liquid gold. Now, the estimate is that a hole bored into the earth at a depth of twenty miles will tap this sea of gold, and the gold will spout up of its own accord, and without the expense of mining. Think of it! gold pouring out in real artesian well style! Some fellows say this won't do, because this well would be a volcano and the earth would be deluged by a flood of boiling gold. This is no valid objection, because the well could be located upon the vast prairies, and we could store and cool the surplus in the canyons of Yellowstone park and the gorges of the Rockies.

We don't claim that this plan originated with us, because several senators and represenatives have used their influence in favor of an appropriation to bore this hole. We present in all soberness, and if after free and full discussion it is found to be constitutional and practical, why then congressmen should be pledged to support this "hole" plank or be retired.

Nil Desperandum.

While the outlook for a cotton crop is by no means flattering, it is best for the country that the crop should be short. Another crop like that of last year would have sent cotton down to 5 cents per pound which would not have paid the cost of gathering and marketing. As it is, the crop has been cut off in this State fully 25 if not 50 per cent.

As it is in Alabama, so it is in other Southern States. The cry of overproduction will now be stopped, the demand will soon overtake the supply. Cotton will advance steadily to ten cents as the September reports now being published will show a marked decrease compared with the August reports.

An average corn crop has been made in the South, and supplemental crops while not good, are by no means a failure. The West has been blessed by abundant wheat and corn crops, and the same are being sold at remunerative prices. The grain crops of Europe are very short and there is a great demand for American products in Asia.

The country as a whole has never been in a more prosperous condition since the war. The great trouble is the unequal distribution of wealth and the want of confidence. Let the farmers meet their obligations as promptly as possible and go to work immediately for another year on strict Alliance principles and the merchants will do their part. There is no cause for despondency.—Alabama Mirror.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Two of the great questions before the North American continent were recently asked the question: "What are the causes of poverty?" One replied: "Ignorance and incapacity." The other said that the prevalent cause is "the number of young men who are wanting in decision and fixity of purpose at the start. They should stick to it, knowing that by perseverance, industry and ability, they win promotion as vacancies occur. But they see or hear of some one making a fortune in Wall street or in ranching, or in mining, and away they go to try their luck. When they lose, as they do in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, that is the end of them; they can never settle down to ordinary ways of getting a living after that and their descent is rapid." This reason hits the nail square on the head. Go where we will, we will find men who commenced life under the most favorable circumstances, but who are such complete financial wrecks that there is but little hope for their reformation. They may be honest and temperate; they may even possess natural ability of a high order, but lacking in steadiness of purpose, they will never succeed. Had they sufficient will force to stick to one thing, no matter how disagreeable it might be at first, were they content to advance slowly, they would have no reason now to talk of the "luck" of those who pushed forward into the front ranks."

Upon the subject of majority verdicts, the New York Herald says: When nine or ten men out of twelve sworn to decide a case on the evidence and to give the prisoner the benefit of every reasonable doubt and find him guilty it is perfectly safe to assume that he is guilty and should pay the penalty of his crime. In other words, a two-thirds verdict, whether it be for conviction or acquittal, may be accepted as fair, just and safe, both to the criminal classes and to society. The same principal may be adopted in civil cases with even less hesitancy.

Such a reform would give to the administration of justice an efficiency unknown and would remedy some of the gravest evils that flourish in the courts. It has been urged by many jurists and is steadily gaining in favor. The American Bar Association has done well to take up that matter. It may be a long time before the reform is adopted in this country, but of its ultimate adoption there can be no doubt. Like most of the legal institutions, forms and customs we have inherited from the distant past the jury system must yield to the conditions of civilization and the spirit of the times.

LOCAL LACONICS.

Mrs. Will Callen spent Friday in Birmingham.

Mrs. W. A. Collier and daughters are visiting Mr. Haden, of Pine Level.

Mr. O. P. Bentley and family are on a visit to relatives in Goodwater.

Hon. J. J. Willett, of Anniston, attended chancery court at this place last week.

Mr. G. A. Northington, of Verbena, was in town Thursday on legal business.

Miss Maude Teague, of Calera, is visiting Miss Frenchie Evans, of this place.

Master Leroy Watts, of Clanton, left Monday morning to attend school at Greensboro, Ala.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Foshee leave next Tuesday for Arkansas to visit Mrs. Foshee's relatives.

Miss Mattie Lee Catival, of Dothan, Ala., has returned home after visiting relatives here for a time.

Cols. J. M. Falkner, and W. S. Thorington, of Montgomery, attended chancery court here Thursday.

Mr. J. E. Morris, of Adler, Durham & Co., Birmingham, was here looking after his interests in the chancery court Thursday.

Mrs. Jno. McDonald, of Montgomery, has returned home after spending sometime here, where she made friends of all who met her.

On last Sunday afternoon Rev. R. M. Hunter baptized Miss Julia Hester, Mrs. Zella Givhan and Miss Nelson as members of the Clanton Baptist Church.

The citizens of our town who are interested in building a school house should bear in mind the fact that a germ of discord is about as fatal to the progress of a community as the germ of an epidemic disease.

The Clanton people who attended Rev. C. L. McCurtha's lecture at the Methodist Church Friday night on "The Lost Tribes of Israel or Europe and America in History," considered it quite a treat.

The hands who have been at work digging a well here for the past two weeks to supply the tank at this place with water, have reached a spring that will furnish plenty of water. The well is 15 feet square and 35 feet deep.

The subscription for Clanton's school building has reached $1,125, and a nice location has been selected. A meeting will be held tonight to adopt a plan and select a building committee. Harmony will do the work. Discord will undo it.

The VIEW man had the pleasure of spending last Saturday with friends in Jemison. We always feel at home in Jemison. Our friends Langston & Hill and the Jemison Lumber Co., are still doing the business of the place, and they well deserve the success which they have met with. The high school in charge of Prof. Mullins has opened, and will at once resume the high standing which it reached under Prof. Ruffin.

New Firm.

Dr. A. E. Bivings is renovating his stock of goods and intends shortly to open up a new stock of general merchandise in copartnership with his brother, under the firm name of A. E. & C. K. Bivings. We are glad to make this announcement and to welcome such an enterprising citizen as Mr. Chas. K. Bivings to our community.

The celebrated Hamilton-Brown Shoe Company's goods can be had at W. L. Sampey's store at reasonable prices. They are first class shoes and wear well.

Lily Dale.

The farmers are busy gathering their crops.

Mrs. B. L. Woolley is quite sick.

Prof. Douglass accompanied by his wife left this morning on a lookout for a school. We hope he will succeed.

B. H. Jones went to Selma on business last week.

Mr. J. C. Veasey, one of Chilton's best book agents, will renew his work soon.

Messrs. Anderson Jones, Dock Jones and Clay Jones went out on last Saturday evening and in about half of an hour killed thirty bats out of forty shots.

Miss Geneva Jones has been quite sick for the past week.

Verbena Views.

Rev. Jim Jones, of Rockford, preached Sunday evening in Verbena.

Dr. Huddleston, of Wadsworth, has been visiting here.

Mr. Fox Maull, of Elmore, has been visiting Mr. J. G. Farley.

Miss Maxey Robinson, one of Deatsville's charming young ladies is visiting Miss Abbott Spratling.

Miss Inez Northington is visiting relatives in Autauga.

Miss Carrie House, of Autauga, is visiting relatives here.

Mr. Ed. Shannon and family who have been visiting relatives here have returned to Montgomery.

Mr. John Boykin, of Evergreen, has been visiting our little city.

Capt C. L. Brown, of Bozeman, has two large pieces of gold found near here. One piece weighs 51 grains and the other 15 grains.

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT.

STANTON LODGE, No. 473,
September 15, 1891.

WHEREAS, The cold and icy hand of death has been at work in our midst, and the dread messenger has taken from our ranks without a moment's warning, our worthy and beloved brother, JAMES A. STEPHENS, thus verifying that ancient truism, that, "Death loves a shining mark" and ever selects his victims from among the truest and best. Therefore be it,

Resolved, That while we as members of Stanton Lodge No. 473 deeply feel and deplore the loss of Brother Stephens, yet we bow in humble submission to the will of our Grand Master above, knowing that He doeth all things well and ever for the good of those who love and serve Him.

2. In the death of Brother Stephens this lodge has sustained the loss of one of its brightest ornaments and the community at large one of its most useful members. He was a true friend, a kind and obliging neighbor, a zealous Christian, and a faithful member of the craft he loved so well, and in every sphere of life it can be truly said that he was one of the noblest specimens of of God's handiwork, an honest man.

3d. That his virtues be ever remembered, and that his brethren cover his faults, whatever they were, with the broad mantle of charity, remembering that to err is human—to forgive is divine.

4. We commend the grief stricken and distressed family with whom we deeply sympathize to the watchful and tender care of the brethren, individually and as a Lodge, and remind them that it is a sacred duty to contribute to their relief whenever their necessities require it, and it is in our power to do so.

5. That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this Lodge, and that they be published in the CHILTON VIEW and the "Masonic Guide," and a copy be sent to the family of the deceased brother.

Respectfully submitted,
W. W. LITTLE,
I. G. WHITE,
E. L. MCKEE,
Committee.

O Kansas 'Tis of Thee.

Oh, Kansas, 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of misery,
Of thee I sing;
Land where I've almost died,
Land of the cow chip's pride,
For thee I've lied and lied,
You naughty thing!

Oh, my dear Kansas, thee,
Land of the noble flea,
Thy name I love;
I love thy colds and chills,
Thy mortgage covered hills,
Thy praise my dug-out fills,
Like that above.

An everlasting breeze,
A desert without trees,
Such is my song;
Where I a claim did take,
A fool of myself did make;
Where fleas keep me awake
The whole night long.

Oh, Kansas! still to thee,
With all thy misery,
To thee I'll cling,
Till I negotiate
A loan; then pull my freight
Back to Alabama State,
Where cotton's king.

A Question of Returns.

"You might just as well set a hen on china eggs and expect to hatch a brood of chickens as to do successful business without advertising," is the way The Monson (Mass.) Mirror states a more or less obvious truth.

"If you think you're going to collect any money from me," said Ardup, doggedly, as he handed back the bill, "you're away off. You can't draw blood from a turnip." "Maybe not" replied the man with the bill, peeling off his coat, "but I'm going to see if I can't pound a little out of a dead beat."

St. Louis, Sept. 14.—W. S. McAllister and U. S. Hall, members of the National Executive Committee of the Farmers' Alliance, had a conference this afternoon to consider whether or not the meetings of the anti-convention which begins to-morrow, will be secret or open.

It was decided to hold a convention with open doors and the public will be invited to be present. A decision has been reached to go into a new national organization. The idea is to create an industrial alliance and adopt a policy of eligibility that will admit of a powerful class heretofore excluded from membership. The order is to be non-political and non-secret. Delegates from Texas, Mississippi, Arkansas and Minnesota have arrived, and every train brings representatives of the anti-sub-treasury and anti-third party wing of the Farmers' Alliance. The probabilities this afternoon all point to an attendance of between 400 and 600 delegates. The Texas delegation, where the Alliance originated, is a unit for a new administration, and a lot of hard work is being done in that direction. The census of opinion seems to be that the new national Alliance is a certainty.

Ex-Treasurer McAllister who recently had the scrimmage with Macune is outspoken for the new organization.

Glad to See Them.

One of the early Governors of a certain Western State," writes a correspondent, "was a man of great popularity, commanding strength of character, and undisputed fitness for the duties of his office, but entirely without any gift for public speaking. Shortly after his election he paid an official visit to the State prison, in the course of which he was ushered into the chapel where the convicts were assembled in a body.

"Before the Governor realized what was going on, the chaplain had presented him to the company, with the remark that he would doubtless have something to say.

"But my dear sir," whispered the startled Governor, "I havn't anything to say, and I couldn't say it if I had! I never made a speech in my life."

"The chaplain who was entirely innocent in the matter, could only reply:

"I beg your excellency's pardon for being so premature, but as I have committed you so decidedly, I see no way out of it, and feel confident that you will not mind addressing them in a few words."

"The Governor certainly was committed, and though he was literally trembling he began:

"Ladies and gentlemen!—No, no, I don't mean that—gentlemen and fellow citizens!—no, I don't exactly mean that, either—but—but—well, men and fellow-prisoners, I can't make a speech;—I—I don't know how to make a speech. I couldn't make a speech to save your souls, or—or—or even my my own! and so—so—well, about all I can say is, that—that I'm very glad to see so many of you here."—Youth's Companion.

Rev. A. J. Briggs will preach next Sunday both morning and night on the subject of Infant Baptism. He does this at the request of his church, and others interested. And this notice is made in order to save disappointment or surprise to any one who may attend.

A Wonder Works.

Mr. Frank Huffman, a young man of Burlington, Ohio, states that he had been under the care of two prominent physicians, and used their treatment until he was not able to get around. They pronounced his case to be consumption and incurable. He was persuaded to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds and at that time was not able to walk across the street without resting. He found, before he had used half of a dollar bottle, that he was much better; he continued to use it, and is to day enjoying good health. If you have any throat, lung, or chest trouble try it. We guarantee satisfaction. Trial bottle free.

A Brother Sentenced

Judge (severely)—"You have been found guilty of stealing the people's money, and you are sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary, and to pay a fine of five hundred thousand dollars."

Great Boodler—"Yes, y'r honor."

Judge—"But as you will never be able to pay the fine, the fine is remitted."

Boodler—"Thank you, judge."

Judge—"And if you conduct yourself properly the law will allow time for good behavior, and you can get out in about a year and a half."

Boodler—"Thanks, judge."

Judge—"And, by the way, if you happen to feel ill in a week or two, the court will issue an order allowing you to go home to die."

Boodler—"Thanks, judge; but suppose I don't die?"

Judge—"Don't mention it. Call the next case."—New York Weekly.

A Day of Rest.

Sunday-School Superintendent—"Can any of you tell me why Sunday is called the day of rest?"

Little Dick (holding up his hand)—"I kin. It's 'cause we get up early and hurry through breakfas' so's to dress in time fer Sunday-school, so we won't be late, and then skip inter church 'fore the bell stops ringin', and then go home to dinner and get fixed up for afternoon service, and then get supper an' go to bed so pa and ma can get ready for evening service. That's all we do."—Street & Smith's Good News.

A Life Saved

Mr. Geo. Raymond, of Seneca Falls, N. Y., is a pump fetter in the employ of Ramsay & Co., the well known pump makers of that place. He is a member of Ramsay Engine Co. He says:

"My wife without doubt owes her life to Hood's Sarsaparilla. A few years ago she was at death's door, due to blood poisoning, or as physicians say, pyaemia. After everything else failed Hood's Sarsaparilla brought her out of the crisis all right. Since then she has suffered at times with numbness and headache, but continues taking and is gradually getting over these troubles. She clings to Hood's, takes nothing else, and we believe it will effect a complete cure."

ALLIANCE TALKS.

NEWS OF THE ORDER FROM ALL SECTIONS.

Items of Interest to Alliancemen Everywhere.

The Mill Creek, Ga., Alliance endorses the Ocala platform of the Farmers' Alliance "whether it be known as the first party or the third party, and that our worthy State President be instructed to stand upon it, even if it be called first or third party."

The Progressive Farmer says: "It is now pretty certain that many of the farmers who oppose the Alliance are not at all acquainted with its doings or objects. They accept the biased statements of partisan papers without making any investigations or without studying the matter. This is very unfair."

The Milton (W. Va.) Star says: "Quite a number of uninformed farmers labor under the delusion that the Alliance movement is of very recent origin, and will have but an ephemeral existence. Such is not the case. Texas, the State of its birth, has just held her twelfth annual State Alliance, and the order in Texas is much stronger in number and more united in purpose and more determined in resolution than ever before. The order, however, in many of the States is young in years but strong in spirit and growing fast. The order now in the United States numbers about four million members."

The Free Press (Winfield, Kans.,) says: "Most of the so-called farmers or agricultural papers are nothing but partisan papers clothed in a garb calculated to deceive the people. The farmers cannot afford to support papers that are opposing their interests. For years these papers have taught the farmers that they should let politics alone, and that working harder and harder was the key-note to success, and most of the mischief that bad legislation has brought about must be attributed to this attempt to keep the farmer out of politics. It has been the schemes of the money kings, and it is time that the people were opening their eyes to the true situation of affairs."

Dakota Ruralist (Huron, S. D.) says: "One can hardly pick up a republican paper of the North or a democratic of the South without finding one are more editorials or copied articles smiching the character of the Alliance leaders. Such papers are not considered faithful unless they can show their ardor in that particular line. No word of commendation for the Alliance or the principles it advocates is ever seen in their columns, hence, what rot it is for men who are laboring to extend the principles of the order to still cling to the filth that is poured in upon them weekly. Fight for your own and your enemies will respect you for your manhood. The fight is now on. The question is, shall we be freemen or wage slaves? 'Shall the citizen or the dollar rule?'"

The Alliance Monitor (Falkville, Ala.,) says: "The Alliance comprises a majority of the voters of Alabama. These voters have the right to their opinions, to their policies, to their plans and their purposes. They are simply exercising the right of citizenship in all they have undertaken and all they propose to accomplish. They have all their material interests and the welfare of their children involved in the result. It is not only their right, but their duty to do all they are undertaking. They would be recreant to the demands of manhood and every obligation incumbent upon them if they should do less. A majority of them regard the union of the West and South as the easiest, best and safest plan to be pursued, and those who claim to be their leaders should seek that consummation."

The People's Journal, (Lompac, Cal.) says: "Alliancemen as well as others, should not believe one-half the reports of Alliance doings that are telegraphed to the city dailies from the east. They are generally framed to suit the schemes of the enemies of the Alliance movement, and i they can cause dissensions in the ranks of the Alliance on this coast, or deter farmers and laborers from joining the organization the object aimed at will be accomplished. The leading organs of both the great political parties either sneer at or boldly antagonize the Alliance movement, and the smaller fry copy their remarks as so much solid truth. From this time on till after the election next fall Alliance men may be on the lookout for all manner of "yarns" in a certain class of papers, calculated to injure a movement that is becoming a terror to the capitalists and monopolists whose golden riveted collars the conductors of such journals wear."

The Independent (Grand Forks, N. D.) says: "The opponents of the sub-treasury plan ought to address themselves to the task of showing how much preferable it is for the farmers to sell products at cost of production and pay the syndicate which purchases them from 50 to 100 per cent. profit when they are consumed. That is the condition now. The elevator trust is on top. The question is, should this elevator trust robbery continue, or had the government best provide protection? How? The Alliance offers the sub-treasury. If there is a better or more efficient plan to meet the demands and requirements, let it be brought forth. But the present robberies ought not to continue, nor ought the government to permit them to continue. The farmers want the government to perform its function to protect the citizen from robbery. They pay for the protection. They want it; they are entitled to it. If they shall persist and insist, they will get it. The question must be met. It must be settled aright. It will be settled aright, if there is any power in votes; and votes decide every issue in this country."

LAND LOANS.

The Economist says: There is much confusion which has led to considerable misapprehension in regard to the land loan demand of the Alliance. The precise language of the demand is as follows:

"We demand that the government shall establish sub-treasuries or depositories in the several states, which shall loan money direct to the people at a low rate of interest, not to exceed 2 per cent per annum, on non-perishible farm products, and also upon real estate, with proper limitations upon the quantity of land and amount of money."

This does not contemplate the wild indiscriminate loans that is charged against it, but expressly declares to the contrary, that the amount of both land and loan shall be properly limited. It leaves all the safeguards and limitations to the wisdom and discretion of Congress, who are proper depositories to legislate upon all matters of this character.

STATE MEETINGS.

So far the results of the State meetings have been very gratifying. They have disclosed a healthy growth in membership and, what is far better, a unity of sentiment and determination that is sure to bring success and progress to the Order. In Mississippi, which was among the last to hold its meetings, the brethren were practically a unit upon the demands of the Order, and were filled with enthusiasm over the great work now in progress throughout the State. The bitter political contest and relentless warfare that is being made on the Alliance there, has both increased and solidified the membership and proved under great difficulties the vitality and vigor of the Order. In Missouri the State meeting has been held and the honor of the Alliance vindicated. The welfare of the Order is now in loyal keeping and a rapid increase in membership and unification among the brethren is looked for in the near future. The brethren in the State are loyal and intelligent, and can be trusted to do what is right and proper. All good Alliance members should rejoice at the changed condition in Missouri, and aid the brethren there in their contest for a correct interpretation of the demands of the Order. —Economist.

STAND BY THE DEMANDS.

The Tarboro Advocate rises to remark: "The more we read the comments of the press of both parties, and note its attitude toward the Alliance, the more united and determined we should be in our efforts to secure the reform measures which the Alliance has inaugurated. There is an under-current that is sweeping against the foundation of our order with such a force that unless vigilantly watched and earnestly resisted, will have the effect of destroying much of the power and influence of the organization. While our brethren are sanguine of accomplishing many things for the good of the organization, they should not be forgetful of the fact that the mightiest forces arrayed against us are to be resisted; and in order to resist them successfully we must be united in one solid line. We must hazard almost anything in order to secure the utmost unity and harmony in the organization. The most essential prerequisite to the securement of any reform in which the masses of the people are interested is unity, and we admonish our brethren throughout the country to stand by the demands as adopted at Ocala, Florida. They are the embodiment—the essence—of the principles of honest, just, wise and economic government, and it is our duty to maintain them. After calm and deliberate reflection they were formulated for adoption by that great convention, and seeing in them the embodiment of wisdom and justice, they were adopted as the platform of the Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union of America. We have espoused a great cause—one that requires gigantic efforts on the part of an oppressed and down-trodden class of people to throw off the fetters of the enormous money powers of the country, and let not petty jealousies and bickerings estrange you in the fight against these monsters.

THE OCALA DEMANDS—KEEP THEM BEFORE THE PEOPLE.

1*a*. We demand the abolition of national banks.

b. We demand that the government shall establish Sub-Treasuries or depositories in the several States, which shall loan money direct to the people at a low rate of interest, not to exceed two per cent. per annum, on nonperishable farm products, and also upon real estate, with proper limitations upon the quantity of land and amount of money.

c. We demand that the amount of the circulating medium be speedily increased to not less than $50 per capita.

2. That we demand that Congress shall pass such laws that will effectually prevent the dealing in futures of all agricultural and mechanical productions; providing a stringent system of procedure in trials that will secure the prompt conviction, and imposing such penalties as shall secure the most perfect compliance with the law.

3. We condemn the silver bill recently passed by Congress, and demand in lieu thereof the free and unlimited coinage of silver.

4. We demand the passage of laws prohibiting alien ownership of land, and that Congress take prompt action to devise some plan to obtain all lands now owned by aliens and foreign syndicates; and that all lands now held by railroads and other corporations in excess of such as is actually used and needed by them be reclaimed by the government, and held for actual settlers only.

5. Believing in the doctrine of equal rights to all and special privileges to none, we demand—

a. That our national legislation shall be so framed in the future as not to build up one industry at the expense of another.

b. We further demand a removal of the existing heavy tariff tax from the necessities of life, that the poor of our land must have.

c. We further demand a just and equitable system of graduated tax on incomes.

d. We believe that the money of the country should be kept as much as possible in the hands of the people, and hence we demand that all national and State revenues shall be limited to the necessary expenses of the government economically and honestly administered.

6. We demand the most rigid, honest and just State and national governmental control and supervision of the means of public communication and transportation, and if this control and supervision does not remove the abuse now existing, we demand the government ownership of such means of communication and transportation.

7. We demand that the Congress of the United States submit an amendment to the constitution providing for an election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people of each State.

REFORM PAPERS.

The Progressive Farmer has the following timely article commendatory of the reform press of North Carolina. The same reasoning and argument given for their support and encouragement by all members of the order holds goods in every section of the country. The Progressive Farmer says:

"In North Carolina we have ten papers that have joined the reform movement. Very few if any of them are new recruits, their editors having been engaged in alliance work for some years. Most of these papers have been started or pumped with the view of advocating the reform movement. In most cases our friends were very cautious that these papers be started, knowing the great importance of the press when directed right. Now the reform press has certain duties to perform. Instead of being a party paper it must be fair, truthful and honest. They should be as cautious in the editorial chair, but at the same time a pith and vigor must be up-sticking place in the editor of a reform paper. Any paper failing to come up to the requirements will be dropped from the list of reform papers. A paper should stand by our demands and work to change our conditions. But at the same time these papers should represent all classes. What is the duty of the members of the Alliance and the general public? The members of the Alliance own and are interested in the success of these papers financially and in the success of the reforms they advocate. Hence it is apparent that they should give the papers the most liberal support possible. Self-protection is the first law of nature, therefore these papers are entitled to the support of farmers first of all. Our National and State organs are entitled to liberal support, and great issues ought to be discussed in their columns. But the local papers should have more liberal support than they ever have had. These papers cannot depend on a little meat from politicians and others; they depend entirely upon a legitimate subscripcion list and advertising patronage. Another thought right here. Our people must stop sending such a great mass of matter for publication to the State and National organs. When a man begins an article for publication he naturally wants it to reach as many people as possible. Owing to this the larger reform papers are crowded almost out of existence. Now send some of your thunder to your local Alliance paper and try to air your views among your home people. This will not detract anything from the efficiency of the State and National organs, for they are always full to the brim, and may add interest to the local paper. Above all give your local paper more liberal support. Don't pay your money for plutocratic papers that don't care whether you are slaves or free citizens. Spread them among the people and make them interesting. If you mean business do this, if not get out of the reform movement and go to work on the other side.

ANOTHER WHEAT CIRCULAR

Calling Upon the Farmers to Hold Back.

A dispatch from St. Paul to a Chicago morning paper says: Farmers' Alliance leaders in Minnesota and North and South Dakota have resolved upon another attempt to stop the tremendous flow of wheat to the markets. The alliance, therefore, on Monday, began mailing from its headquarters a million of letters to farmers, calling a halt along the line. The letter states that the new Wheat Growers' Association and alliance secretaries all over the country are unanimous that wheat is bound to sell as high as $1.50, and possibly $2 per bushel, and they are unanimous in this warning to farmers not to sacrifice their wheat and give the speculators all the profit there is in it. The letter says the crop is being greatly overestimated by the newspapers and grain dealers. It is said at the headquarters of the Farmers' Alliance press bureau of information, in Washington, that the circular letter above referred to simply conveys information relative to the condition of the wheat crops of the world, which officers of the bureau say is such as must result in an increase of prices in the American product. The object of the bureau is to put information into the hands of producers in order to enable them to take advantage of existing conditions, and reap the benefit of any increase in price themselves, rather than let their products go to middlemen, who, it is asserted, are now buying wheat and will sell it later on at an advanced price. The circular referred to is not an official document of the alliance, but merely a letter of information, intended not only for the benefit of members of the alliance, but for farmers everywhere. The circular bears the caption, "Facts Worth Money," and its first paragraph says:

"We have hit upon a plan of advertising the state by showing our ability to make for the farmers in this country a few hundred million dollars, trusting that there are enough sensible and decent people among them to swell our circulation to such proportions that we would receive the proper reward for our expense and trouble. This idea was the origin of our now famous wheat circular, of which we sent out over a million about two months ago, and which has started a discussion about the breadstuff supply that has helped, to the extent of many million dollars, even those who through ignorance or neccessity, threw their grain prematurely into the hands of speculators. We use this treatise on the wheat question in the same enormous numbers again; and request in the first place, all secretaries of the alliance to distribute them promptly and have special meetings called to discuss them.

The Cotemplated Cotton Pickers' Strike Was No Go.

Reports of Saturday from different sections of south Texas show that no trouble is antic pated over the much discussed cotton pickers' strike.

A Charlotte, N. C., dispatch says: Cotton picking has not fairly begun in this section as yet. Consequently nothing is heard of the cotton pickers' strike.

News comes from Charleston, S. C., to the effect that there are no signs of a strike in the cotton fields in any part of the state. Nobody seems to know anything about the alleged strike of cotton pickers. Farmers are paying from thirty to forty cents per hundred.

A Jacksonville, Fla., dispatch says: Inquiry in all sections of the cotton belt in Florida fails to discover any locality where the negro cotton pickers have joined the contemplated strike. A large portion of the cotton lands are cultivated on the lease and share system.

Montgomery, Ala., reports that there is no development of the cotton pickers' strike in Alabama. As far as known no such movement was ever intended there.

A telegram from Florence, Ala., says: The reported cotton pickers' strike has not been heard of by the alliance in this section. No circulars were received from Humphrey. Neither farmers or cotton pickers could afford it.

FLORIDA'S NEW SENATOR.

The Governor Appoints Ex-Congressman Davidson.

A Tallahassee dispatch says: Governor Fleming, on Tuesday, appointed ex-Congressman Robert H. M. Davidson, of Quincy, to be United States senator from Florida, to fill the vacancy caused by the failure of the legislature to elect a successor to Hon. Wilkinson Call. Colonel Davidson is a native of Florida. He was congressman from the East Florida district for fourteen consecutive years, having been first elected in 1872.

The Golden Growers' Meeting In Atlanta.

The convention of cotton growers met in Atlanta Tuesday morning in the alliance exchange building. When those present were called to order the fact was developed that only two delegates from outside of Georgia were present. They were S. A. Gewan, business manager of the Tennessee exchange, and Col. R. J. Sledge, of Texas. The call for the convention had been signed by prominent members of the alliance from all the cotton-growing states. The cause of the absence of delegates from the other states was explained by Major W. L. Glessner. He said that there was a misunderstanding as to the date of the convention. The South Carolina delegates were under the impression that the convention was to be held on the 17th, and the delegates from the other states thought it would be in October. Colonel Livingston suggested that those present go ahead and arrange a date for a general convention and take any other action they saw proper. This was agreed to. A committee of five was appointed to prepare a plan and issue a call for the convention. The chair appointed as this committee J. O. Waddell, chairman ex-officio; T. J. Lyon, L. F. Livingston, W. L. Glessner, T. E. Winn and Dr. J. W. Taylor. The committee prepared and submitted the following resolutions:

Whereas, The state alliance and State Agricultural Society of South Carolina suggested the holding of a convention of representation from the cotton states, for the purpose of considering the question of reducing the acreage of cotton; and

Whereas, The state alliance and State Agricultural Society of Georgia at their meeting appointed committees for the purpose of considering this question, and those committees having met in joint session in Atlanta on the 10th instant and adopted this suggestion; therefore

Resolved, That the alliance of South Carolina having suggested Atlanta as the place of holding such convention, and the holding of the Piedmont exposition in Atlanta giving an opportunity of securing very low rates from all points in the south, we request that representatives from the cotton states meet in Atlanta on Tuesday, the 29th of October next, for the purpose of considering the question of reducing the acreage of cotton, the handling, classification and selling of cotton.

Resolved, That the representation in said convention be double the representation of the several states in the lower house of congress, with the addition of the presidents of the state alliances and agricultural societies.

Resolved, That all exporters, manufacturers, factors and other manipulators of cotton be invited to attend said convention and participate in its discussion by proper representation.

Resolved, That the secretary be directed to give notice to all state organizations of the action of this joint committee, and that all papers friendly to the movement be requested to publish these resolutions.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted. The following resolution was also adopted.

Whereas, The commission appointed by the different State Alliances in the cotton States having been satisfied that many arrangements can now be made with foreign cotton consumers and manufacturers for the direct sale of cotton to exporters, therefore be it

Resolved, That we recommend the sale of cotton to exporters, under such regulations as may be agreed upon between exporters and the commission.

One of the principal questions presented to the meeting was the King cotton bale cover, which is both fire and water proof. After this was shown to those present, a resolution was adopted requesting Mr. King to prepare a paper for the next meeting, showing the advantages of his process for baling cotton over jute bagging now in use. The convention then adjourned to meet October 29th next.

The Skewer.

The skewer was formerly used as a kind of a tally-stick, and it continues to find similar employment at Lyons, where the butchers rarely fail to stick in the middle of a piece of meat a small wooden cylinder announcing by so many notches what every housewife knows to be the exact weight of the meat.

ALLIANCE TALKS.

NEWS OF THE ORDER FROM ALL SECTIONS.

Items of Interest to Alliancemen Everywhere.

The Mill Creek, Ga., Alliance endorses the Ocala platform of the Farmers' Alliance "whether it be known as the first party or the third party, and that our worthy State President be instructed to stand upon it, even if it be called first or third party."

The Progressive Farmer says: "It is now pretty certain that many of the farmers who oppose the Alliance are not at all acquainted with its doings or objects. They accept the biased statements of partisan papers without making any investigations or without studying the matter. This is very unfair."

The Milton (W. Va.) Star says: "Quite a number of uninformed farmers labor under the delusion that the Alliance movement is of very recent origin, and will have but an ephemeral existence. Such is not the case. Texas, the State of its birth, has just held her twelfth annual State Alliance, and the order in Texas is much stronger in number and more united in purpose and more determined in resolution than ever before. The order, however, in many of the States is young in years but strong in spirit and growing fast. The order now in the United States numbers about four million members."

The Free Press (Winfield, Kans.,) says: "Most of the so-called farmers or agricultural papers are nothing but partisan papers clothed in a garb calculated to deceive the people. The farmers cannot afford to support papers that are opposing their interests. For years these papers have taught the farmers that they should let politics alone, and that working harder and harder was the key-note to success, and most of the mischief that bad legislation has brought about must be attributed to this attempt to keep the farmer out of politics. It has been the schemes of the money kings, and it is time that the people were opening their eyes to the true situation of affairs."

Dakota Ruralist (Huron, S. D.) says: "One can hardly pick up a republican paper of the North or a democratic of the South without finding one are more editorials or copied articles smiching the character of the Alliance leaders. Such papers are not considered faithful unless they can show their ardor in that particular line. No word of commendation for the Alliance or the principles it advocates is ever seen in their columns, hence, what rot it is for men who are laboring to extend the principles of the order to still cling to the filth that is poured in upon them weekly. Fight for your own and your enemies will respect you for your manhood. The fight is now on. The question is, shall we be freemen or wage slaves? 'Shall the citizen or the dollar rule?'"

The Alliance Monitor (Falkville, Ala.,) says: "The Alliance comprises a majority of the voters of Alabama. These voters have the right to their opinions, to their policies, to their plans and their purposes. They are simply exercising the right of citizenship in all they have undertaken and all they propose to accomplish. They have all their material interests and the welfare of their children involved in the result. It is not only their right, but their duty to do all they are undertaking. They would be recreant to the demands of manhood and every obligation incumbent upon them if they should do less. A majority of them regard the union of the West and South as the easiest, best and safest plan to be pursued, and those who claim to be their leaders should seek that consummation."

The People's Journal, (Lompac, Cal.) says: "Alliancemen as well as others, should not believe one-half the reports of Alliance doings that are telegraphed to the city dailies from the east. They are generally framed to suit the schemes of the enemies of the Alliance movement, and i they can cause dissensions in the ranks of the Alliance on this coast, or deter farmers and laborers from joining the organization the object aimed at will be accomplished. The leading organs of both the great political parties either sneer at or boldly antagonize the Alliance movement, and the smaller fry copy their remarks as so much solid truth. From this time on till after the election next fall Alliance men may be on the lookout for all manner of "yarns" in a certain class of papers, calculated to injure a movement that is becoming a terror to the capitalists and monopolists whose golden riveted collars the conductors of such journals wear."

The Independent (Grand Forks, N. D.) says: "The opponents of the sub-treasury plan ought to address themselves to the task of showing how much preferable it is for the farmers to sell products at cost of production and pay the syndicate which purchases them from 50 to 100 per cent. profit when they are consumed. That is the condition now. The elevator trust is on top. The question is, should this elevator trust robbery continue, or had the government best provide protection? How? The Alliance offers the sub-treasury. If there is a better or more efficient plan to meet the demands and requirements, let it be brought forth. But the present robberies ought not to continue, nor ought the government to permit them to continue. The farmers want the government to perform its function to protect the citizen from robbery. They pay for the protection. They want it; they are entitled to it. If they shall persist and insist, they will get it. The question must be met. It must be settled aright. It will be settled aright, if there is any power in votes; and votes decide every issue in this country."

LAND LOANS.

The Economist says: There is much confusion which has led to considerable misapprehension in regard to the land loan demand of the Alliance. The precise language of the demand is as follows:

"We demand that the government shall establish sub-treasuries or depositories in the several states, which shall loan money direct to the people at a low rate of interest, not to exceed 2 per cent per annum, on non-perishable farm products, and also upon real estate, with proper limitations upon the quantity of land and amount of money."

This does not contemplate the wild indiscriminate loans that is charged against it, but expressly declares to the contrary, that the amount of both land and loan shall be properly limited. It leaves all the safeguards and limitations to the wisdom and discretion of Congress, whose proper function is to legislate upon all matters of this character.

STATE MEETINGS.

So far the results of the State meetings have been very gratifying. They have disclosed a healthy growth in membership and, what is far better, a unity of sentiment and determination that is sure to bring success and progress to the Order. In Mississippi, which was among the last to hold its meetings, the brethren were practically a unit upon the demands of the Order, and were filled with enthusiasm over the great work now in drogress throughout the State. The bitter political contest and relentless warfare that is being made on the Alliance there, has both increased and solidified the membership and proved under great difficulties the vitality and vigor of the Order. In Missouri the State meeting has been held and the honor of the Alliance vindicated. The welfare of the Order is now in loyal keeping and a rapid increase in membership and unification among the brethren is looked for in the near future. The brethren in the State are loyal and intelligent, and can be trusted to do what is right and proper. All good Alliance members should rejoice at the changed condition in Missouri, and aid the brethren there in their contest for a correct interpretation of the demands of the Order.

STAND BY THE DEMANDS.

The Tarboro Advocate rises to remark: "The more we read the comments of the press of both parties, and note its attitude toward the Alliance, the more united and determined we should be in our efforts to secure the reform measures which the Alliance has inaugurated. There is an under-current that is sweeping against the foundation of our order with such a force that unless vigilantly watched and earnestly resisted, will have the effect of destroying much of the power and influence of the organization. While our brethren are sanguine of accomplishing many things for the good of the organization, they should not be forgetful of the fact that the mightiest forces arrayed against us are to be resisted; and in order to resist them successfully we must be united in one solid line. We must hazard almost anything in order to secure the utmost unity and harmony in the organization. The most essential prerequisite to the securement of any reform in which the masses of the people are interested is unity, and we admonish our brethren throughout the country to stand by the demands as adopted at Ocala, Florida. They are the embodiment—the essence—of the principles of honest, just, wise and economic government, and it is our duty to maintain them. After calm and deliberate reflection they were formulated for adoption by that great convention, and seeing in them the embodiment of wisdom and justice, they were adopted as the platform of the Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union of America. We have espoused a great cause—one that requires gigantic efforts on the part of an oppressed and down-trodden class of people to throw off the fetters of the enormous money powers of the country, and let not petty jealousies and bickerings estrange you in the fight against these monsters.

THE OCALA DEMANDS—KEEP THEM BEFORE THE PEOPLE.

1*a*. We demand the abolition of national banks.

b. We demand that the government shall establish Sub-Treasuries or depositories in the several States, which shall loan money direct to the people at a low rate of interest, not to exceed two per cent. per annum, on nonperishable farm products, and also upon real estate, with proper limitations upon the quantity of land and amount of money.

c. We demand that the amount of the circulating medium be speedily increased to not less than $50 per capita.

2. That we demand that Congress shall pass such laws that will effectually prevent the dealing in futures of all agricultural and mechanical productions; providing a stringent system of procedure in trials that will secure the prompt conviction, and imposing such penalties as shall secure the most perfect compliance with the law.

3. We condemn the silver bill recently passed by Congress, and demand in lieu thereof the free and unlimited coinage of silver.

4. We demand the passage of laws prohibiting alien ownership of land, and that Congress take prompt action to devise some plan to obtain all lands now owned by aliens and foreign syndicates; and that all lands now held by railroads and other corporations in excess of such as is actually used and needed by them be reclaimed by the government, and held for actual settlers only.

5. Believing in the doctrine of equal rights to all and special privileges to none, we demand—

a. That our national legislation shall be so framed in the future as not to build up one industry at the expense of another.

b. We further demand a removal of the existing heavy tariff tax from the necessities of life, that the poor of our land must have.

c. We further demand a just and equitable system of graduated tax on incomes.

d. We believe that the money of the country should be kept as much as possible in the hands of the people, and hence we demand that all national and State revenues shall be limited to the necessary expenses of the government economically and honestly administered.

6. We demand the most rigid, honest and just State and national governmental control and supervision of the means of public communication and transportation, and if this control and supervision does not remove the abuse now existing, we demand the government ownership of such means of communication and transportation.

7. We demand that the Congress of the United States submit an amendment to the constitution providing for an election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people of each State.

REFORM PAPERS.

The Progressive Farmer has the following timely article commendatory of the reform press of North Carolina. The same reasoning and argument given for their support and encouragement by all members of the order holds goods in every section of the country. The Progressive Farmer says:

"In North Carolina we have ten papers that have joined the reform movement. Very few if any of them are new recruits, their editors having been engaged in alliance work for some years. Most of these papers have been started or purchased with the view of advocating the reform movement, in most cases our farmers were very anxious that these papers be started, knowing the great influence of the press when directed right. Now the reform press has certain duties to perform. It must be pure, honest, truthful and fearless. There should be no extremist in the editorial chair, but at the same time a milk and cider man has no abiding place in the office of a reform paper. Any paper failing to come up to the requirements will be dropped from the list of reform papers. A paper should stand by our demands and work to change our conditions. But at the same time these papers should represent all classes. What is the duty of the members of the Alliance and the general public? The members of the Alliance own and are interested in the success of these papers financially and in the success of the reforms they advocate. Hence it is apparent that they should give the papers the most liberal support possible. Self-protection is the first law of nature, therefore these papers are entitled to the support of farmers first of all. Our National and State organs are entitled to liberal support, and great issues ought to be discussed in their columns. But the local papers should have more liberal support than they ever have had. These papers cannot depend on a little meat from politicians and others; they depend entirely upon a legitimate subscription list and advertising patronage. Another thought right here. Our people must stop sending such a great mass of matter for publication to the State and National organs. When a man begins an article for publication he naturally wants it to reach as many people as possible. Owing to this the larger reform papers are crowded almost out of existence. Now send some of your thunder to your local Alliance paper and try to air your views among your home people. This will not detract anything from the efficiency of the State and National organs, for they are always full to the brim, and may add interest to the local paper. Above all give your local paper more liberal support. Don't pay your money for plutocratic papers that don't care whether you are slaves or free citizens. Spread them among the people and make them interesting. If you mean business do this, if not get out of the reform movement and go to work on the other side.

ANOTHER WHEAT CIRCULAR

Calling Upon the Farmers to Hold Back.

A dispatch from St. Paul to a Chicago morning paper says: Farmers' Alliance leaders in Minnesota and North and South Dakota have resolved upon another attempt to stop the tremendous flow of wheat to the markets. The alliance, therefore, on Monday, began mailing from its headquarters a million of letters to farmers, calling a halt along the line. The letter states that the new Wheat Growers' Association and alliance secretaries all over the country are unanimous that wheat is bound to sell as high as $1.50, and possibly $2 per bushel, and they are unanimous in this warning to farmers not to sacrifice their wheat and give the speculators all the profit there is in it. The letter says the crop is being greatly overestimated by the newspapers and grain dealers. It is said at the headquarters of the Farmers' Alliance press bureau of information, in Washington, that the circular letter above referred to simply conveys information relative to the condition of the wheat crops of the world, which officers of the bureau say is such as must result in an increase of prices in the American product. The object of the bureau is to put information into the hands of producers in order to enable them to take advantage of existing conditions, and reap the benefit of any increase in price themselves, rather than let their products go to middlemen, who, it is asserted, are now buying wheat and will sell it later on at an advanced price. The circular referred to is not an official document of the alliance, but merely a letter of information, intended not only for the benefit of members of the alliance, but for farmers everywhere. The circular bears the caption, "Facts Worth Money," and its first paragraph says:

"We have hit upon a plan of advertising the state by showing our ability to make for the farmers in this country a few hundred million dollars, trusting that there are enough sensible and decent people among them to swell our circulation to such proportions that we would receive the proper reward for our expense and trouble. This idea was the origin of our now famous wheat circular, of which we sent out over a million about two months ago, and which has started a discussion about the breadstuff supply that has helped, to the extent of many million dollars, even those who through ignorance or necessity, threw their grain prematurely into the hands of speculators. We is ue this treatise on the wheat question in the same enormous numbers again, and request in the first place, all secretaries of the alliance to distribute them promptly and have special meetings called to discuss them.

DID NOT MATERIALIZE

The Cotemplated Cotton Pickers' Strike Was No Go.

Reports of Saturday from different sections of south Texas show that no trouble is antic pated over the much discussed cotton pickers' strike.

A Charlotte, N. C., dispatch says: Cotton picking has not fairly begun in this section as yet. Consequently nothing is heard of the cotton pickers' strike.

News comes from Charleston, S. C., to the effect that there are no signs of a strike in the cotton fields in any part of the state. Nobody seems to know anything about the alleged strike of cotton pickers. Farmers are paying from thirty to forty cents per hundred.

A Jacksonville, Fla., dispatch says: Inquiry in all sections of the cotton belt in Florida fails to discover any locality where the negro cotton pickers have joined the contemplated strike. A large portion of the cotton lands are cultivated on the lease and share system.

Montgomery, Ala., reports that there is no development of the cotton pickers' strike in Alabama. As far as known no such movement was ever intended there.

A telegram from Florence, Ala., says: The reported cotton pickers' strike has not been heard of by the alliance in this section. No circulars were received from Humphrey. Neither farmers or cotton pickers could afford it.

ELORIDA'S NEW SENATOR.

The Governor Appoints Ex-Congressman Davidson.

A Tallahassee dispatch says: Governor Fleming, on Tuesday, appointed ex-Congressman Robert H. M. Davidson, of Quincy, to be United States senator from Florida, to fill the vacancy caused by the failure of the legislature to elect a successor to Hon. Wilkinson Call. Colonel Davidson is a native of Florida. He was congressman from the First Florida district for fourteen consecutive years, having been first elected in 1876.

IN CONVENTION.

The Cotton Growers' Meeting in Atlanta.

The convention of cotton growers' met in Atlanta Tuesday morning in the alliance exchange building. When those present were called to order the fact was developed that only two delegates from outside of Georgia were present. They were G. A. Gowan, business manager of the Tennessee exchange, and Col. R. J. Sledge, of Texas. The call for the convention had been signed by prominent members of the alliance from all the cotton-growing states. The cause of the absence of delegates from the other states was explained by Major W. L. Glessner. He said that there was a misunderstanding as to the date of the convention. The South Carolina delegates were under the impression that the convention was to be held on the 17th, and the delegates from the other states thought it would be in October. Colonel Livingston suggested that those present go ahead and arrange a date for a general convention and take any other action they saw proper. This was agreed to. A committee of five was appointed to prepare a plan and issue a call for the convention. The chair appointed as this committee J. O. Waddell, chairman ex-officio; T. J. Lyon, L. F. Livingston, W. L. Glessner, T. E. Winn and Dr. J. W. Taylor. The committee prepared and submitted the following resolutions:

Whereas, The state alliance and State Agricultural Society of South Carolina suggested the holding of a convention of representation from the cotton states, for the purpose of considering the question of reducing the acreage of cotton; and

Whereas, The state alliance and State Agricultural Society of Georgia at their meeting appointed committees for the purpose of considering this question, and those committees having met in joint session in Atlanta on the 10th instant and adopted this suggestion; therefore

Resolved, That the alliance of South Carolina having suggested Atlanta as the place of holding such convention, and the holding of the Piedmont exposition in Atlanta giving an opportunity of securing very low rates from all points in the south, we request that representatives from the cotton states meet in Atlanta on Tuesday, the 29th of October next, for the purpose of considering the question of reducing the acreage of cotton, the handling, classification and selling of cotton.

Resolved, That the representation in said convention be double the representation of the several states in the lower house of congress, with the addition of the presidents of the state alliances and agricultural societies.

Resolved, That all exporters, manufacturers, factors and other manipulators of cotton be invited to attend said convention and participate in its discussion by proper representation.

Resolved, That the secretary be directed to give notice to all state organizations of the action of this joint committee, and that all papers friendly to the movement be requested to publish these resolutions.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted. The following resolution was also adopted.

Whereas, The commission appointed by the different State Alliances in the cotton States having been satisfied that many arrangements can now be made with foreign cotton consumers and manufacturers for the direct sale of cotton to exporters, therefore be it

Resolved, That we recommend the sale of cotton to exporters, under such regulations as may be agreed upon between exporters and the commission.

One of the principal questions presented to the meeting was the King cotton bale cover, which is both fire and water proof. After this was shown to those present, a resolution was adopted requesting Mr. King to prepare a paper for the next meeting, showing the advantages of his process for baling cotton over jute bagging now in use. The convention then adjourned to meet October 29th next.

The Skewer.

The skewer was formerly used as a kind of a tally-stick, and it continues to find similar employment at Lyons, where the butchers rarely fail to stick in the middle of a piece of meat a small wooden cylinder announcing by so many notches what every housewife knows to be the exact weight of the meat.

A Boodler Sentenced.

Judge (severely)—"You have been found guilty of stealing the people's money, and you are sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary, and to pay a fine of five hundred thousand dollars."

Great Boodler—"Yes, y'r honor."

Judge—"But as you will never be able to pay the fine, the fine is remitted."

Boodler—"Thank you, judge."

Judge—"And if you conduct yourself properly the law will allow time for good behavior, and you can get out in about a year and a half."

Boodler—"Thanks, judge."

Judge—"And, by the way, if you happen to feel ill in a week or two, the court will issue an order allowing you to go home to die."

Boodler—"Thanks, judge; but suppose I don't die?"

Judge—"Don't mention it. Call the next case."—New York Weekly.

ALLIANCE TALKS.

NEWS OF THE ORDER FROM ALL SECTIONS.

Items of Interest to Alliancemen Everywhere.

The Mill Creek, Ga., Alliance endorses the Ocala platform of the Farmers' Alliance "whether it be known as the first party or the third party, and that our worthy State President be instructed to stand upon it, even if it be called first or third party."

The Progressive Farmer says: "It is now pretty certain that many of the farmers who oppose the Alliance are not at all acquainted with its doings or objects. They accept the biased statements of partisan papers without making any investigations or without studying the matter. This is very unfair."

The Milton (W. Va.) Star says: "Quite a number of uninformed farmers labor under the delusion that the Alliance movement is of very recent origin, and will have but an ephemeral existence. Such is not the case. Texas, the State of its birth, has just held her twelfth annual State Alliance, and the order in Texas is much stronger in number and more united in purpose and more determined in resolution than ever before. The order, however, in many of the States is young in years but strong in spirit and growing fast. The order now in the United States numbers about four million members."

The Free Press (Winfield, Kans.,) says: "Most of the so-called farmers or agricultural papers are nothing but partisan papers clothed in a garb calculated to deceive the people. The farmers cannot afford to support papers that are opposing their interests. For years these papers have taught the farmers that they should let politics alone, and that working harder and harder was the key-note to success, and most of the mischief that bad legislation has brought about must be attributed to this attempt to keep the farmer out of politics. It has been the schemes of the money kings, and it is time that the people were opening their eyes to the true situation of affairs."

Dakota Ruralist (Huron, S. D.) says: "One can hardly pick up a republican paper of the North or a democratic of the South without finding one are more editorials or copied articles smiching the character of the Alliance leaders. Such papers are not considered faithful unless they can show their ardor in that particular line. No word of commendation for the Alliance or the principles it advocates is ever seen in their columns, hence, what rot it is for men who are laboring to extend the principles of the order to still cling to the filth that is poured in upon them weekly. Fight for your own and your enemies will respect you for your manhood. The fight is now on. The question is, shall we be freemen or wage slaves? 'Shall the citizen or the dollar rule?'"

The Alliance Monitor (Falkville, Ala.,) says: "The Alliance comprises a majority of the voters of Alabama. These voters have the right to their opinions, to their policies, to their plans and their purposes. They are simply exercising the right of citizenship in all they have undertaken and all they propose to accomplish. They have all their material interests and the welfare of their children involved in the result. It is not only their right, but their duty to do all they are undertaking. They would be recreant to the demands of manhood and every obligation incumbent upon them if they should do less. A majority of them regard the union of the West and South as the easiest, best and safest plan to be pursued, and those who claim to be their leaders should seek that consummation."

The People's Journal, (Lompac, Cal.) says: "Alliancemen as well as others, should not believe one-half the reports of Alliance doings that are telegraphed to the city dailies from the east. They are generally framed to suit the schemes of the enemies of the Alliance movement, and i they can cause dissensions in the ranks of the Alliance on this coast, or deter farmers and laborers from joining the organization the object aimed at will be accomplished. The leading organs of both the great political parties either sneer at or boldly antagonize the Alliance movement, and the smaller fry copy their remarks as so much solid truth. From this time on till after the election next fall Alliance men may be on the lookout for all manner of "yarns" in a certain class of papers, calculated to injure a movement that is becoming a terror to the capitalists and monopolists whose golden riveted collars the conductors of such journals wear."

The Independent (Grand Forks, N. D.) says: "The opponents of the sub-treasury plan ought to address themselves to the task of showing how much preferable it is for the farmers to sell products at cost of production and pay the syndicate which purchases them from 50 to 100 per cent. profit when they are consumed. That is the condition now. The elevator trust is on top. The question is, should this elevator trust robbery continue, or had the government best provide protection? How? The Alliance offers the sub-treasury. If there is a better or more efficient plan to meet the demands and requirements, let it be brought forth. But the present robberies ought not to continue, nor ought the government to permit them to continue. The farmers want the government to perform its function to protect the citizen from robbery. They pay for the protection. They want it; they are entitled to it. If they shall persist and insist, they will get it. The question must be met. It must be settled aright. It will be settled aright, if there is any power in votes; and votes decids every issue in this country."

LAND LOANS.

The Economist says: There is much confusion which has led to considerable misapprehension in regard to the land loan demand of the Alliance. The precise language of the demand is as follows:

"We demand that the government shall establish sub-treasuries or depositories in the several states, which shall loan money direct to the people at a low rate of interest, not to exceed 2 per cent per annum, on non-perishable farm products, and also upon real estate, with proper limitations upon the quantity of land and amount of money."

This does not contemplate the wild indiscriminate loans that is charged against it, but expressly declares to the contrary, that the amount of both land and loan shall be properly limited. It leaves all the safeguards and limitations to the wisdom and discretion of Congress, whose proper function is to legislate upon all matters of this character.

STATE MEETINGS.

So far the results of the State meetings have been very gratifying. They have disclosed a healthy growth in membership and, what is far better, a unity of sentiment and determination that is sure to bring success and progress to the Order. In Mississippi, which was among the last to hold its meetings, the brethren were practically a unit upon the demands of the Order, and were filled with enthusiasm over the great work now in progress throughout the State. The bitter political contest and relentless warfare that is being made on the Alliance there, has both increased and solidified the membership and proved under great difficulties the vitality and vigor of the Order. In Missouri the State meeting has been held and the honor of the Alliance vindicated. The welfare of the Order is now in loyal keeping and a rapid increase in membership and unification among the brethren is looked for in the near future. The brethren in the State are loyal and intelligent, and can be trusted to do what is right and proper. All good Alliance members should rejoice at the changed condition in Missouri, and aid the brethren there in their contest for a correct interpretation of the demands of the Order. —Economist.

STAND BY THE DEMANDS.

The Tarboro Advocate rises to remark: "The more we read the comments of the press of both parties, and note its attitude toward the Alliance, the more united and determined we should be in our efforts to secure the reform measures which the Alliance has inaugurated. There is an under-current that is sweeping against the foundation of our order with such a force that unless vigilantly watched and earnestly resisted, will have the effect of destroying much of the power and influence of the organization. While our brethren are sanguine of accomplishing many things for the good of the organization, they should not be forgetful of the fact that the mightiest forces arrayed against us are to be resisted; and in order to resist them successfully we must be united in one solid line. We must hazard almost anything in order to secure the utmost unity and harmony in the organization. The most essential prerequisite to the securement of any reform in which the masses of the people are interested is unity, and we admonish our brethren throughout the country to stand by the demands as adopted at Ocala, Florida. They are the embodiment—the essence—of the principles of honest, just, wise and economic government, and it is our duty to maintain them. After calm and deliberate reflection they were formulated for adoption by that great convention, and seeing in them the embodiment of wisdom and justice, they were adopted as the platform of the Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union of America. We have espoused a great cause—one that requires gigantic efforts on the part of an oppressed and down-trodden class of people to throw off the fetters of the enormous money powers of the country, and let not petty jealousies and bickerings estrange you in the fight against these monsters.

THE OCALA DEMANDS—KEEP THEM BEFORE THE PEOPLE.

1a. We demand the abolition of national banks.

b. We demand that the government shall establish Sub-Treasuries or depositories in the several States, which shall loan money direct to the people at a low rate of interest, not to exceed two per cent. per annum, on nonperishable farm products, and also upon real estate, with proper limitations upon the quantity of land and amount of money.

c. We demand that the amount of the circulating medium be speedily increased to not less than $50 per capita.

2. That we demand that Congress shall pass such laws that will effectually prevent the dealing in futures of all agricultural and mechanical productions; providing a stringent system of procedure in trials that will secure the prompt conviction, and imposing such penalties as shall secure the most perfect compliance with the law.

3. We condemn the silver bill recently passed by Congress, and demand in lieu thereof the free and unlimited coinage of silver.

4. We demand the passage of laws prohibiting alien ownership of land, and that Congress take prompt action to devise some plan to obtain all lands now owned by aliens and foreign syndicates; and that all lands now held by railroads and other corporations in excess of such as is actually used and needed by them be reclaimed by the government, and held for actual settlers only.

5. Believing in the doctrine of equal rights to all and special privileges to none, we demand—

a. That our national legislation shall be so framed in the future as not to build up one industry at the expense of another.

b. We further demand a removal of the existing heavy tariff tax from the necessities of life, that the poor of our land must have.

c. We further demand a just and equitable system of graduated tax on incomes.

d. We believe that the money of the country should be kept as much as possible in the hands of the people, and hence we demand that all national and State revenues shall be limited to the necessary expenses of the government economically and honestly administered.

6. We demand the most rigid, honest and just State and national governmental control and supervision of the means of public communication and transportation, and if this control and supervision does not remove the abuse now existing, we demand the government ownership of such means of communication and transportation.

7. We demand that the Congress of the United States submit an amendment to the constitution providing for an election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people of each State.

REFORM PAPERS.

The Progressive Farmer has the following timely article commendatory of the reform press of North Carolina. The same reasoning and argument given for their support and encouragement by all members of the order holds goods in every section of the country. The Progressive Farmer says:

"In North Carolina we have ten papers that have joined the reform movement. Very few if any of them are new recruits, their editors having been engaged in alliance work for some years. Most of these papers have been started or purchased with the view of advocating the reform movement. In most cases our farmers were very anxious that these papers be started, knowing the great influence of the press when directed right. Now the reform press has certain duties to perform. It must be plain to all. The editors of such papers must be honest, truthful and fearless. There should be no extremist in the editorial chair, but at the same time a milk and cider man has no abiding place in the office of a reform paper. Any paper failing to come up to the requirements will be dropped from the list of reform papers. A paper should stand by our demands and work to change our conditions. But at the same time these papers should represent all classes. What is the duty of the members of the Alliance and the general public? The members of the Alliance own and are interested in the success of these papers financially and in the success of the reforms they advocate. Hence it is apparent that they should give the papers the most liberal support possible. Self-protection is the first law of nature, therefore these papers are entitled to the support of farmers first of all. Our National and State organs are entitled to liberal support, and great issues ought to be discussed in their columns. But the local papers should have more liberal support than they ever have had. These papers cannot depend on a little meat from politicians and others; they depend entirely upon a legitimate subscription list and advertising patronage. Another thought right here. Our people must stop sending such a great mass of matter for publication to the State and National organs. When a man begins an article for publication he naturally wants it to reach as many people as possible. Owing to this the larger reform papers are crowded almost out of existence. Now send some of your thunder to your local Alliance paper and try to air your views among your home people. This will not detract anything from the efficiency of the State and National organs, for they are always full to the brim, and may add interest to the local paper. Above all give your local paper more liberal support. Don't pay your money for plutocratic papers that don't care whether you are slaves or free citizens. Spread them among the people and make them interesting. If you mean business do this, if not get out of the reform movement and go to work on the other side.

ANOTHER WHEAT CIRCULAR

Calling Upon the Farmers to Hold Back.

A dispatch from St. Paul to a Chicago morning paper says: Farmers' Alliance leaders in Minnesota and North and South Dakota have resolved upon another attempt to stop the tremendous flow of wheat to the markets. The alliance, therefore, on Monday, began mailing from its headquarters a million of letters to farmers, calling a halt along the line. The letter states that the new Wheat Growers' Association and alliance secretaries all over the country are unanimous that wheat is bound to sell as high as $1.50, and possibly $3 per bushel, and they are unanimous in this warning to farmers not to sacrifice their wheat and give the speculators all the profit there is in it. The letter says the crop is being greatly overestimated by the newspapers and grain dealers. It is said at the headquarters of the Farmers' Alliance press bureau of information, in Washington, that the circular letter above referred to simply conveys information relative to the condition of the wheat crops of the world, which officers of the bureau say is such as must result in an increase of prices in the American product. The object of the bureau is to put information into the hands of producers in order to enable them to take advantage of existing conditions, and reap the benefit of any increase in price themselves, rather than let their products go to middlemen, who, it is asserted, are now buying wheat and will sell it later on at an advanced price. The circular referred to is not an official document of the alliance, but merely a letter of information, intended not only for the benefit of members of the alliance, but for farmers everywhere. The circular bears the caption, "Facts Worth Money," and its first paragraph says:

"We have hit upon a plan of advertising the state by showing our ability to make for the farmers in this country a few hundred million dollars, trusting that there are enough sensible and decent people among them to swell our circulation to such proportions that we would receive the proper reward for our expense and trouble. This idea was the origin of our now famous wheat circular, of which we sent out over a million about two months ago, and which has started a discussion about the breadstuff supply that has helped, to the extent of many million dollars, even those who through ignorance or necessity, threw their grain prematurely into the hands of speculators. We issue this treatise on the wheat question in the same enormous numbers again; and request in the first place, all secretaries of the alliance to distribute them promptly and have special meetings called to discuss them.

DID NOT MATERIALIZE

The Cotemplated Cotton Pickers' Strike Was No Go.

Reports of Saturday from different sections of south Texas show that no trouble is antic pated over the much discussed cotton pickers' strike.

A Charlotte, N. C., dispatch says: Cotton picking has not fairly begun in this section as yet. Consequently nothing is heard of the cotton pickers' strike.

News comes from Charleston, S. C., to the effect that there are no signs of a strike in the cotton fields in any part of the state. Nobody seems to know anything about the alleged strike of cotton pickers. Farmers are paying from thirty to forty cents per hundred.

A Jacksonville, Fla., dispatch says: Inquiry in all sections of the cotton belt in Florida fails to discover any locality where the negro cotton pickers have joined the contemplated strike. A large portion of the cotton lands are cultivated on the lease and share system.

Montgomery, Ala., reports that there is no development of the cotton pickers' strike in Alabama. As far as known no such movement was ever intended there.

A telegram from Florence, Ala., says: The reported cotton pickers' strike has not been heard of by the alliance in this section. No circulars were received from Humphrey. Neither farmers or cotton pickers could afford it.

FLORIDA'S NEW SENATOR.

The Governor Appoints Ex-Congressman Davidson.

A Tallahassee dispatch says: Governor Fleming, on Tuesday, appointed ex-Congressman Robert H. M. Davidson, of Quincy, to be United States senator from Florida, to fill the vacancy caused by the failure of the legislature to elect a successor to Hon. Wilkinson Call. Colonel Davidson is a native of Florida. He was congressman from the First Florida district for fourteen consecutive years, having been first elected in 1876.

IN CONVENTION.

The Cotton Growers' Meeting in Atlanta.

The convention of cotton growers' met in Atlanta Tuesday morning in the alliance exchange building. When those present were called to order the fact was developed that only two delegates from outside of Georgia were present. They were G. A. Gowan, business manager of the Tennessee exchange, and Col. R. J. Sledge, of Texas. The call for the convention had been signed by prominent members of the alliance from all the cotton-growing states. The cause of the absence of delegates from the other states was explained by Major W. L. Glessner. He said that there was a misunderstanding as to the date of the convention. The South Carolina delegates were under the impression that the convention was to be held on the 17th, and the delegates from the other states thought it would be in October. Colonel Livingston suggested that those present go ahead and arrange a date for a general convention and take any other action they saw proper. This was agreed to. A committee of five was appointed to prepare a plan and issue a call for the convention. The chair appointed as this committee J. O. Waddell, chairman ex-officio; T. J. Lyon, L. F. Livingston, W. L. Glessner, T. E. Winn and Dr. J. W. Taylor. The committee prepared and submitted the following resolutions:

Whereas, The state alliance and State Agricultural Society of South Carolina suggested the holding of a convention of representation from the cotton states, for the purpose of considering the question of reducing the acreage of cotton; and

Whereas, The state alliance and State Agricultural Society of Georgia at their meeting appointed committees for the purpose of considering this question, and those committees having met in joint session in Atlanta on the 10th instant and adopted this suggestion; therefore

Resolved, That the alliance of South Carolina having suggested Atlanta as the place of holding such convention, and the holding of the Piedmont exposition in Atlanta giving an opportunity of securing very low rates from all points in the south, we request that representatives from the cotton states meet in Atlanta on Tuesday, the 29th of October next, for the purpose of considering the question of reducing the acreage of cotton, the handling, classification and selling of cotton.

Resolved, That the representation in said convention be double the representation of the several states in the lower house of congress, with the addition of the presidents of the state alliances and agricultural societies.

Resolved, That all exporters, manufacturers, factors and other manipulators of cotton be invited to attend said convention and participate in its discussion by proper representation.

Resolved, That the secretary be directed to give notice to all state organizations of the action of this joint committee, and that all papers friendly to the movement be requested to publish these resolutions.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted. The following resolution was also adopted.

Whereas, The commission appointed by the different State Alliances in the cotton States having been satisfied that many arrangements can now be made with foreign cotton consumers and manufacturers for the direct sale of cotton to exporters, therefore be it

Resolved, That we recommend the sale of cotton to exporters, under such regulations as may be agreed upon between exporters and the commission.

One of the principal questions presented to the meeting was the King cotton bale cover, which is both fire and water proof. After this was shown to those present, a resolution was adopted requesting Mr. King to prepare a paper for the next meeting, showing the advantages of his process for baling cotton over jute bagging now in use. The convention then adjourned to meet October 29th next.

The Skewer.

The skewer was formerly used as a kind of a tally-stick, and it continues to find similar employment at Lyons, where the butchers rarely fail to stick in the middle of a piece of meat a small wooden cylinder announcing by so many notches what every housewife knows to be the exact weight of the meat.

HER FATHER'S PET.

BILL ARP SAD BECAUSE HIS DAUGHTER HAS GONE TO COLLEGE.

And That Set Him to Talking About Our Educational System--Other Topics of Interest Discussed.

These are solemn times now—there is nobody dead or dying, but there is a lost child, and that is nearly as sad. We know where she is, for we sent her there; but it is hard on the old folks to send their youngest child away, especially when she is a girl and the last of the litter. It took us a few days to realize that she had gone. Sometimes she goes to spend a night with a schoolmate, and it seemed like she was there and would soon come back, but she doesn't. Her piano is closed, and its dark rosewood case looks darker now. There is a feeling of sadness around the house. The sewing machine is having a rest, for she made her own clothes, and she cleans up the house and sets the table and lights the lamps and helps her mother, and when the cook quits she can make as good a biscuit as I can. She loves her home and loves me, and when I am grunty or sad she knows it and rubs my head with cologne and combs my black hair and cheers me up, and I get well, but I am sick right now and she is not here.

I was in hopes we could finish her schooling right here, but we can't. We have no college and the high school is limited by poverty. We are taxed enough in all good conscience to have anything we want. I am paying now about one hundred dollars a year for other people's children, and have to send off my own. There are many parents are doing the same thing and to my mind it is all wrong in principle. Our county pays $7,000 to the school fund of the state and we get back only $7,000 of it. The other $10,800 is scattered all over the state to educate white and black. Our town pays out $1,000 a year to educate the negroes in the corporation, and we get no thanks for that. All this tax is based upon the idea that we get it all back in making good citizens out of the children as they grow up. If that is really so, we will try and be content, but the whole system is a strain upon our philanthropy. Every community would like to keep their money at home, and if it is not spent right we can make a fuss about it. Our town pays $6,000 for school tax and our county pays $11,000 more, and we can't help thinking that if we could keep the $10,000 that is sent away what a home college we could build in our own community. Ten thousand dollars a year for an income would give us a first-class institution, and it would save us a big lot of money, besides $3,000 a year that is going away right now from this town to other female colleges. That makes $13,000 a year that we are out of pocket, and our people are not happy. But all's well that ends well.

Our Jessie has gone to the Agnes Scott, at Decatur, to finish up. We had to send her somewhere, for she couldent climb any higher at home. And be sides, it was thought best to send her away for rest and repose. The boys of the town don't seem to have very much to do, and so they indulge in the delightful employment of visiting the school girls and this disturbs their tranquility and distracts their susceptible minds from study and wholesome reading and meditation. By day and by night they are coming and going and getting up parties and playing tennis and baseball and other hilarities, and as it couldent be stopped without bad manners it was thought best to send the girls away and let them stay until their minds came back to them. I heard one afflicted parent say that he was afraid his daughter's mind was clean gone. We are not troubled about Jessie on that account, but she does need some time that she can call her own. Some time to read and study and devote to her music. She is gone now—and the boys will frequent these parts no more, I reckon. No more will we be entertained with the thrilling narratives of baseball, and tennis, and the heroic achievements of the Cedartown nine, and the Acworth nine, and the Cartersville lawn tennis club that cost $40 for its equipment.

I heard Sam Jones preach a sermon once to parents about these same troubles, and he stretched forth his hand and said: "Now, boys, I see you here, and I want you to hear me. I want you to keep away from my house until I tell you to come. My daughters are at school, and I don't want their minds distracted from their studies. I like you and I like your fathers and mothers, but there is a time for all things, and you must keep away from my house. Well, of course, if you come I will treat you politely and invite you into the parlor, and I'll send for Bob and Paul to come in and entertain you, and if you can make anything off of Bob and Paul you are welcome to it, but you shan't see my daughters."

Well, it's right hard to drive the boys away, for they come with good intent, and I never saw a mother who was not pleased with attention to her daughter and I never saw a daughter who was offended at it, and so we just had to send the girls away. Of course, it costs money, but what is money compared with the restoration of a disordered mind? I restored Mrs. Arp's mind by marrying her when she was sweet sixteen, and some of these boys want to try the same medicine.

It's most astonishing how close the young set child gets to a parent's heart—the boy to his mother's heart, and the girl to her father's. One by one the older ones marry or leave us, and we get weaned after a time and take fresh hold and cling the closer to the last. The sweetest pathos in the Bible is the pleading of Judah for his little brother Benjamin. It made Joseph weep and it makes me weep every time I read it. Our "Benjamin" hasn't got a coat of many colors, but he has a spotted cap and a red surcingle that he wears, and I'm afraid the Ishmaelites will get him some of these days.

The Agnes Scott is a new institution and has just gotten a fair start. The loved and lamented Tom Cobb named his college at Athens for his daughter Lucy, but Mr. Scott has named this one for his mother. He has already spent $80,000 on it, and keeps on spending. I predict that he will not stop as long as he lives. Just let a man get his heart tied unto some great charity or something for the good of humanity and it seems to expand and absorb him, and becomes his life work. I believe that a wise providence designed this so that great things might be done, and he raises up men to do it. Alfred Shorter began his great work with $10,000. That is all he thought he could spare. But after awhile he strained himself to $20,000, and then to $30,000 and $50,000, and he never stopped until he died, and he had given $125,000 to found the Shorter college at Rome, and it is there to-day as his monument.

The Agnes Scott is most happily located. It is just far enough from the state capital to get all of its advantages and patronage and none of its hindrances. It is in the heart of the chinquepin region—a region too poor to be sickly, and where the timber grows only large enough to be storm proof, and the hills and the hollows just high enough and low enough for drainage and good roads. The institution is in a beautiful grove and elevated, the ground descending gently from every side, and it is less than five minutes' walk from the depot, where twelve passenger trains a day go and come from Atlanta, and a dummy line besides. The lighting, heating and ventilation seem to be as perfect as human ingenuity can make it, and the protection against fire absolutely secure. The rooms are all models of comfort and are provided with the most substantial furniture. Nothing has been neglected that the pupils need for their health and their reasonable pleasure. Bathrooms, with hot and cold water, are on every floor, and the entire outlook and inlook are cheerful and refining. I would like to take Mrs. Arp there and let us become inmates and stay, at least as long as Jessie is there.

With a corps of the best educators that could be found in the south, this institution has already taken a high stand among the female colleges of the land. The time has come when it was wanted, and it is there. Long may Mr. Scott live to enlarge it and equip it for its great work in educating and refining our daughters until they shall become as the polished corners of a temple. May this institution loom up and become a cynosure like the old granite mountain that is in full view from its turrets. That same old imperishable mountain that used to be our trysting place when Mrs. Arp and I were young and lived near by. Sweet are its memories. Once there was a lofty tower upon its crest and I remember ascending its spiral stairs with my sweetheart by my side, and when we reached the pinnacle we saw the fleecy clouds below us and as I looked into her hazel eyes it seemed to me that I was a little nearer heaven than I had ever been before. Delightful memories! Ambition was high then and so was hope and expectation. The world was very lovely and I was thankful that I lived. But now the mountain's top seems bleak and cold and cheerless, and my experience is that the safest retreat and the surest happiness is found among the humble flowers that blossom at its base.—BILL ARP, in The Constitution.

BALMACEDA SUICIDES.

The Quondam Chilean Leader Ends His Life.

The New York Herald, of Sunday, prints a special from Valparaiso, Chile, stating that Balmaceda committed suicide Saturday at the Argentine legation, in Santiago, by shooting himself in the head with a revolver. The dispatch says Balmaceda left Santiago August 29th in hope of making his escape from Chile, but seeing every avenue of retreat cut off, returned September 2d and went direct to the Argentine legation his intention being to go aboard the vessel Condell, which he expected to find in San Antonio bay. Upon arriving there he found the vessel had sailed. Since his return to the Argentin legation, in Santiago, Balmaceda had been in an extremely nervous condition. No one, with the exception of the Argentine minister and one other man, who was devoted to the ex-president, were permitted to talk with or even see him. Senor Umburia had a long talk with Balmaceda Friday night relative to the latter's ideas about the advisability of giving himself up to the junta. Balmaceda went to bed about midnight. About 8 o'clock a. m., a pistol shot was heard in the bedroom assigned to Balmaceda. Breaking open the door of Balmaceda's room, it was found that he had shot himself. The body was still warm. There was a gaping wound in the temple.

RUN INTO THE WAGON.

Three People Killed at a Railroad Crossing.

A procession of wagons returning from a negro campmeeting at Liberty, S. C., were crossing the Richmond and Danville railroad about two miles beyond Central, Ga., Sunday, when the north-bound vestibule train came along and struck one of the wagons containing two negro women, a child and a man. The wagon was torn to splinters, the two women and child instantly killed, and the man supposed to be fatally injured. Strange to say, the mule escaped with slight injuries.

THE PANGS OF HUNGER

Lead Starving Peasants to Burn and Plunder.

A Vienna correspondent of the London Chronicle says that there have recently been a large number of incendiary fires in Russia, starving peasants having set fire to houses in order to have an opportunity to plunder them. Nine places in Kieff district have been plundered in two days. Many arrests have been made.

The Two Loves.

Love is often deaf to those
Who love her deeply;
Deaf and blind as death may be
To grief or gladness.
Ah, that Love should hold a heart
At best but cheaply!
Such a heart as none can lure
To cruel madness.

Love, alas! is born of earth,
And drifts supinely.
Now she finds a bitter joy
In vulgar measure;
Now she sings with open throat,
And sings divinely,
Passion-sweet in all her dream,
In all her pleasure.

Oh! when Love meets Love in guise
Supremely tender,
Just as crystal song meets song
In perfect blending,
Then she soars among the stars
To her surrender.
There is neither pain for her
Nor ending.

Miss Sally's Surrender.

BY HELEN WHITNEY CLARK.

"Now, Miss Sally, I don't like the idee of you a-livin' here all alone in this big ramshackle of a house, without no neighbors nigher then across the street—I reely don't.'"

"Wal, Squire Nickajack, how be I a-goin' to help it? A lone woman like me, without a chick nor a child to keep me comp'ny, is bound to be alone, an' I don't see how I kin help it."

Miss Sally sat up very straight and prim, and glared at the squire, who glared back through his silver-bowed spectacles.

"If you'd consent to share my humble ruff"—he began.

"Which I won't!" declared Miss Sally, flatly.

"You wouldn't be left to the mercy of the first gang of burglars that comes along," finished the squire, who evidently regarded burglars as a kind of gregarious creatures who hunted in gangs.

"A fig fur your burglars!" retorted Miss Sally. "I've lived here as snug as a bug in a rug fur the last year an' more, an' I ain't afraid of your burglars."

But the squire shook his head ominously.

"The pitcher that goes often to the well is sure to be broke at last," he quoted. "But if you won't hear to reason an' sheer my humble ruff—"

"Which I won't!" obstinately repeated Miss Sally.

"Humble ruff," went on the squire, ignoring the interruption, "then I say you ought to have your hired man sleep in the house. Hannah Higgins ain't no purtection, an' you ought to have that hired man sleep inside, as I said."

"Give my spare room up to the hired man, indeed!" sniffed Miss Sally, disdainfully. "I shan't—an' that's flat! An' besides, there ain't no use, I tell you. I've got bolts and bars, an' I ain't afraid of no burglar that ever walked!"

"Oh, very well!" returned the squire. "A willful man must have his own way, they say, an' I reckon it's jest so with a willful woman. But when you wake up some fine morning and find your silver spoons gone, you'll wish you'd a' took my offer."

"When I find 'em gone, mebbe I will, Squire Nickajack, but I won't before," smiled Miss Sally.

And the squire took his leave in high dudgeon.

Miss Sally Sweet had inherited the old house, along with her grandmother's solid silver spoons, from a relative lately deceased, and, being blessed with stout nerves, she determined to occupy the old homestead, though it was a rather lonely and isolated position.

Mike, the gardener, slept in a sleeping chamber over the stable, with Hannah Higgins, the maid-of-all-work, occupied a couch in the room along with her mistress.

Miss Sally was not a nervous woman, however, and usually slept as soundly, with only Hannah Higgins for a companion, as if troops of assistants had been within call.

But on the very night of her interview with the squire, she was awakened about midnight by a cracking on the stairs.

She listened, but the sound was not repeated, and she soon reasoned herself into the belief that she had been mistaken.

Nevertheless she took her lamp—which was always left burning—and went out into the hall to investigate, but no one was in sight. She descended as usual—no burglar was to be seen.

Completely reassured, she retraced her steps, casually noticing, before entering her own room, that the door opening onto the veranda was slightly ajar.

"That was the noise I heard," she reflected. "The wind blowing made the door creak on its hinges. I may as well lock it, though."

And closing it with a bang, she turned the key and retired to rest, sleeping as soundly as usual until morning.

On descending to oversee Hannah in getting breakfast, however, she found that young person in a state of the greatest excitement.

"Somebody's been in an' broke open all the drawers, mum, an' carried off your silver spoons," she announced, tremblingly. "But I 'ope you wouldn't lay it agin me, as never touched nothink in my life," she sobbed, apprehensively.

"Nonsense, Hannah. Of course I don't suspect you," said Miss Sallie.

And thus reasured, Hannah wiped her eyes, and explained all she knew of the burglary, which was little enough.

She had found the kitchen window wide open, and the spoons and other silverware gone, and she was ready to take her Bible oath that she didn't know "nothink" of their disappearance.

"Go and send Mike for Squire Nickajack," ordered Miss Sally.

And Hannah flew to her bidding, but returned with the information that Mike was not to be found.

"Which I suspect as he has went after the cows," added Hannah.

"Then go for the squire yourself," commanded the mistress. "I must get my spoons back, if possible."

And away Hannah sped, soon returning with the squire.

"I needn't to say how sorry I am, Miss Sally," ventured the squire, vainly endeavoring to put on a long face.

But Miss Sally ruthlessly interrupted him.

"Go up stairs, Hannah, and air the bed clothes." Then turning a serious face to the squire, she confessed, bluntly, "You was right and I was wrong. But if you'll only get my spoons back for me, I—I—"

"You'll consent to sheer my humble ruff?" cried the squire, joyfully.

"I—I suppose so. But you haven't got 'em yet," responded Miss Sally, grimly. An' you won't be apt to git 'em nuther, while you set there, winkin' an' blinkin' like an owl in the sunshine!"

Before the squire could open his lips to answer, a terrible screech was heard up stairs, followed by the sound of heavy footsteps and the banging of a door.

In another minute Hannah came flying into the room, pale and terror-stricken.

"Oh, mum," she wailed, "such a fright as I've had! I dropped the pitch down to look the bedstead, as you told me, mum, when I should hear a noise lurkin' houtside but Mike. An' 'e jounced right through the door, like a crazy critter, an' hupset me, pilers an' bedclose an' hall. An' the way 'e tore down stairs—a 'urricane is nothiuk to 'im, mum!" and Hannah paused for want of breath.

"Are you sure it was Mike?" asked Miss Sally, doubtfully.

"As sure, as sure, mum! I see 'im meself. But 'ow 'e got hout there, an' the door shut an' locked hinside, is more'n I can tell."

"Why—" began Miss Sally.

But the squire cut her short.

"Stay here—stay here!" he cried.

And leaving the two women staring after him, he tore up the stairs with as much alacrity as one hundred and eighty pounds would allow.

He soon reappeared, however.

"There's your spoons, Miss Sally, safe an' sound!" he chuckled, depositing a sack, which jingled musically, at her feet.

"Then Mike was the burglar, and I locked him out on the porch myself!" reflected Miss Sally, when the spoons had been examined and found to be all safe and sound.

"I brought 'em back to you, though," reminded the squire. "So remember your promise, Miss Sally."

Mike made his escape, and was never heard of in that neighborhood again. But Miss Sally Sweeting is the "squire's lady" now, as the wedding took place a year ago. And Hannah Higgins is still in her service.—[Saturday Night.

The Fanatical Wahabis.

The Wahabis are a fanatical sect of Mohammedans which appeared in the heart of Arabia about the middle of the eighteenth century. Their name was taken from that of their leader, a noted dervish, and the object of their movement was to restore Mohammedanism to its orignal simplicity. They regard the Turks as idolatrous, and will not admit that the Turkish method of worship is in accordance with the teachings of the Koran. Toward the close of the last century they rose in armed rebellion against the Ottoman government and overran the most of Arabia. Wherever they went they compelled the people to return to the practices of the fathers, obliging them to lay aside all costly apparel and ornaments of gold and precious stones, and, in particular, to cease the use of wine and tobacco. The last-named article was the object of special aversion, and "no smoking" was a rallying cry among them for a long time. They captured Mecca and Medina, the holy cities, held them for several years, and it is related that when the former was surrendered twenty-four camel loads of pipes and an enormous quantity of tobacco were burned. Their insurrection was finally suppressed by Egyptian and Turkish troops, but they were never conquered, and the present rebellion in Arabia is by the same fanatics and for the same purposes as the great Wahabi revolt in the latter part of the eighteenth century.—[Boston Transcript.

The Gar Breathes Out of Water.

It is well known that the gar-pike rises to the surface and breathes the air direct, as it has a pneumatic duct connecting the throat with the air bladder. Few, if any, of the modern lung fishes inhale the air direct. It is probable that the pirarucu of the Amazons, which has a large, lung-like swimming bladder, breathes air in this way; while in Southern Florida we were told that the Jew fish or tarpon rises to the surface every few minutes to breathe, and that it has an air bladder eighteen inches long.—[New York Independent.

"Stone of Destiny."

The "Stone of Destiny" was a large block of stone, concerning which accounts are very conflicting. According to one authority it was taken to Ireland, from some other place not mentioned, by Tuatha na Danaan and set up in Tara. The stone was therefore famous for its appearance in Irish history, for on it the kings of Tara were enthroned. It was removed to Scotland by Fergus, who placed it in Albany, but about the year 840, the first definite date in its history, it was removed to Scone. In both places it fulfilled the same purpose that it served in Tara, as a throne of the newly crowned king, and a tradition concerning it became current that the seat of empire would abide with it. In 1296 it was captured by Edward I. and taken to London, where it was placed in the coronation chair. All the sovereigns of England from that time have been enthroned upon it, and a reverence is entertained for it that Americans find difficult of comprehension. The most ancient legend connected with it declares it to be the stone on which Jacob placed his head when lying down to the sleep in which his famous vision occurred.—[Boston Transcript.

Fooled by a Trick.

A well-known clergyman of this city was asked to solve the following puzzle a few nights ago: If all the children that King Herod killed were in such a manner that only their arms from the elbows to the tips of their fingers were visible above the ground, how could you distinguish the arms of the boys from those of the girls? The reverened gentleman worked at it fathfully, but was obliged to give it up. "For shame, doctor," cried the interrogator. "The idea that you should forget that the children that Herod killed were all boys."—[Buffalo Commercial.

Heavy Cattle.

Two of the heaviest cattle ever seen in Kansas City were two steers that weighed 8040 pounds, one of them tipping the beam at 4000 even, while the other was 40 pounds heavier. They were red Durhams and almost exactly alike. They were six years old. The larger one was exactly 12 feet long, and they both stood six feet high. The owner had been offered 50 cents per pound for them, which would make them worth $4020, but he held them at a higher price and proposed to take them to the World's Fair.—[New York Witness.

Saltest Body of Water on Earth.

Lake Urumiah, in Persia, 4100 feet above the sea, is, according to British Consul-General Stewart at Tabris, the saltest body of water on earth, being saltier than even the Dead Sea. It is eighty-seven miles long and twenty-four miles bread, and contains nearly twenty-two per cent. of salt. Its northern coasts are incrusted with a border of salt glistening white in the sun. It is said that no living thing can survive in it, but a small species of jelly-fish manages to maintain an existence in its waters.

To Cool a Bedroom.

If the sleeping room is warm it may be cooled for a time by wringing large pieces of cotton out of water and hanging them before the open windows, says the Ladies' Home Journal. Leave the door open, and as the air comes through the wet cotton it will be cooled. This is a good device for cooling a sick room; the clothes can then be wet again and again. Keep the gun turned low during the process of undressing, and sleep without a light unless it is a they night lamp.

They Live High.

It has long been supposed that Galera, a village in Peru, 15,685 feet above the level of the sea, was the highest inhabited place in the world. Mr. Arthur Pearce, an engineer who has been prospecting and making meteorological observations in the Andes, has discovered two mining camps that are even higher. These are Arevichiary, 17,950 feet, and Muecapata, 16,153 feet and more above sea level, each with a population of miners averaging 200 the year around. High as some of the points are on the Panama or Yara Railroad of Peru, of which the Galera Tunnel is the summit, that road will be surpassed by a narrow-gauge railroad now under construction to connect with it. This, when completed, will have a length of seventy-five kilometres and a mean altitude of 15,850 feet. In one of the mines a tunnel is being driven at a higher elevation than Galera, which, when completed, will be fully as long if not longer, than that tunnel. This work is being done by means of compressed air brakes, and the tunnel is lighted throughout by electricity. The work comprises several moving camps, each in itself a centre. The concern is one of the two largest mining concerns in the world, under one proprietorship and managership, if, indeed, it is not the largest. To facilitate the work of the five centres they are connected by telephone lines passing over more than 17,000 feet each, the mean height of the lines being over 16,000 feet.—[St. Louis Republic.

One Man's Method of Enjoyment.

A New York Commercial Advertiser reporter dropped into a furnishing and clothing store on Nassau street the other day and saw one of the salesmen busily engaged with a well-dressed, portly old gentleman of benign expression, who held a boy, ragged and unclean by the hand. A few moments later that urchin was taken into a dressing-room, from which he soon appeared, clad from head to foot in clothes such as he probably never dared to hope to ever possess. Hat and shoes, necktie and handkerchiefs completed the present to the little fellow, who was also given underwear enough to last six months. The old man and the lad he had befriended disappeared and the reporter asked for a little information. "Why," said the salesman, "it is the delight of that man to clothe ragged street Arabs. I suppose he comes in here or goes into some other store down town two or three times a week with a poor boy in tow, who is soon transformed into a decent-looking lad. It's his hobby, and a good one, too, I think. Don't you? He can afford it, and I believe the solid enjoyment he gets out of his pet way of getting rid of some of his surplus money is much greater than the pleasure many a rich man finds in his yacht or his horse."

Proper Care of Shoes.

When you come home with wet feet don't throw aside your boots to get hard and mouldy. Stand them up, put them in shape, and then fill them with oats, such as are given to horses. This will, in a few hours, draw out the moisture out of the leather, keep the boots in shape meanwhile, and leaving it soft and pliable. The oats can be used again and again. This is a relic of the days when long, rollicking, outdoor travelling was done under difficulties and in weather the present generation has no conception of.—[New York Herald.

correspondent of the Birming- Age-Herald from near Gads- Alabama, writes thus practi- and sensibly as to how to ttle the "hard times":

very one you meet, with a few eptions, has something to say t "hard times," "tight money," and if you were to "catch on" the complaint you would be ut as gloomy as the most of the ple appear to be. I have a rt, truthful story to tell in your per and hope it may aid the e men in our State to arrive at cause and the remedy for hard es among the farmers.

n 1867 I found myself on a fair rage farm, just where I am now ting to you, with one good mule, roken-down army horse, a fair of farming implements, mostly ond-hand, but without a dollar credit and just $6 75 in cash. It s the last week in January and time was come for us to pitch r crops for the year. I had a all quantity of corn, about ough, with economy, to feed my ck and give my family meal for ir or five months. Times were en hard with me sure enough. y near neighbor was a little bet- off, but not as much as I ought him to be at the time. e were talking over the matter hen he informed me that he was oing to Gadsden the next day to ake some arrangements for credit enable him to make his crop, nd asked me to go with him and e what I could do. We went to own. It was not long before my eighbor had secured his credit ith a note and mortgage, which e was to trade out during the ear.

I tried to do the same, but it was o go. The merchants did not know e and I could not make the se- urity they demanded. Well, we ent back home together, my eighbor, with a smart load of acon, flour, coffee, sugar, and dry oods and shoes for the children, with a dress for his wife, and a Sunday coat for himself. My wag- on was empty and I, disconsolate, with nothing to take to my fireside put a heavy heart and a will to work. I told my wife all about my failure to get credit and we talked the matter over and over until near midnight. "Well," she said "Tom, we have got two good cows, some hens and a few pigs, a good garden and the best of health. So we will stay at home and get our credit from our work." Bless her soul, she was the wisest woman I think, that ever lived on earth, and among the best that ever went to heaven. I took her advice and at the end of the year, I had seven bales of cotton, 240 bushels of corn, had saved 1200 pounds of bacon, banked up snugly 100 bushels of sweet potatoes; while my good wife had $14.60 made from her eggs, chickens, butter, honey and be- sides had bought herself a summer dress and bonnet and cloth enough to make the under garments for all the children. And best of all, I did not owe a man on earth a cent.

My neighbor who had the credit I could not get, made eleven bales of cotton, a small corn crop, no meat and had run his credit until he was several hundred dollars be- hind in debt. I met him in Gads- den, during the month of January, 1868 after he had settled with the merchants, and sold his cotton. All he had to show for his years work was a new buggy, that he really did not need, and about $80 in cash. In 1872 my neighbor sold out to pay his debts and keep the sheriff away and moved to Texas, where he came to want. The same year I had $2350 loaned out and drawing a good interest, well secured, and I have never borrowed a cent or a thing from any one or ever had my name on a merchant's book for a nickle's credit. I have often thought and most firmly believe that the best thing that ever hap- pened to me was my failure to get credit in 1867.

Near twenty-four years have passed since I had my disconsolate ride back to my humble home from Gadsden. I have since reared a family of seven children, given them the best education the coun- try could offer, have built a large new home and barn and have enough, thank the good Lord, to keep me and my family in comfort as long as I shall live. I want no sub-treasury help and never have wanted it but once and then, thank God, I could not get it. There is not a farmer in Alabama, worthy the name of a farmer, who cannot do just what I have done.

W. T. McC.

THE CHILTON VIEW, speaking of Hon. Hector D. Lane, Commis- sioner of Agriculture says:

"Mr. Lane the appointee is a brother of Chas. P. Lane, editor of the Huntsville Mercury, which pa- per has been finding all the fault possible with Gov. Jones' adminis- tration since the new Governor was inaugurated, and it is a very general impression that the ap- pointment was given Hector Lane to shut off Charlie Lane's criti- cism."

Editor Lane was in Montgomery after the appointment had been announced, and called on the Governor. He told him that the appointment would embarass him as to his course towards the Governor, and he would like to know what was expected of him, or had been promised of him in that regard. The Governor re- plied that neither the editor of the Mercury, nor the past or future course of the paper had been con- sidered in making the appoint- ment and that nothing had been asked or expected in that regard. The Governor further told editor Lane that, in his opinion, the course of the Mercury had been so unfair to him in the past that it had done him more good than harm, and that he was indifferent about his attitude in the future. There can be no doubt about this as editor Lane mentioned it to one or two gentlemen while here, and the Governor when asked about it replied that he did have such a conversation with Editor Lane.

We reprint the foregoing from the Montgomery Advertiser in or- der that our comment may do no injustice to the Governor.

Stanton Notes.

Two weeks ago last Thursday, we recorded a sad and sudden death of one of our citizens. On last Thursday death came among us again, not quite so unexpected however, but equally as sudden, and relieved Mr. Edward M. Gantt of his long suffering. His wife had left him for only a few min- utes to prepare the table for din- ner, and was shocked to find her husband dead when she returned.

Mr. Gantt when a boy of four- teen came with his father from Tenn., locating in Dallas county, near Selma. His father did not live long after he came to Ala., and young Gantt was taken in charge by an uncle, Dr. Gantt, who resides in Selma. The Dr. gave him a fair education, com- pleting his course at Yale College, Conn., after his return from Yale he made engineering a profession, and began engineering and it is said he ran the first train of cars over this line, known then as the Rome & Decatur railroad. He leaves a wife, three sons and a daughter to mourn his death in which they have the sympathy of our entire community.

Saturday last was no small day at Stanton, cotton came in by the wholesale and to make the day one of more interest, there was a very large "little" law suit in which the mammoth sum of 10 cents was the occasion. It seems that Mr. R. M. Roebuck's son was en- gaged in hauling logs to the Chil- ton Lumber Co's., saw mill while others were cutting the lumber by the M. One man by the name of Chandler could not get any of the draymen to haul a log he had on account of its being knotty, young Roebuck said he would haul it, which he did. This displeased Chandler, and he demanded much more than the log was worth. Roebuck refused to pay the amount, but agreed to replace the log or pay him ten cents, which was all fair, but Chandler declined to accept either, deciding he could get bet- ter justice from the courts. The case was tried resulting in Chan- dler loosing it and having to pay the costs which amounted to $7.50, thus ending the first ten cent law case Stanton has ever had.

GOOD PUBLIC ROADS.

The Southern Cultivator says:

"It is possible that in solving the question of public roads the Southern States may solve the convict labor question."

Good public roads are a neces- sity, and the first step to be taken in this state is to repeal the pres- ent unjust, unequal and oppressive road laws, which throw the entire burden of keeping up the roads upon those least able to bear it. The tax of ten days road duty, coming at a time of the year, when the farmer or laborer can least af- ford to pay the same, and the ab- sence of a property or income tax for the construction and mainte- nance of roads that enhance the value of real estate, is a disgrace to civilization of the age.

The counties are now compara- tively free from debt, and the rate of taxation can be reduced one- half and still allow a liberal appro- priation annually for the construc- tion of permanent highways upon scientific principles. The legisla- tor or legislature that secures good turnpikes in the prairie sec- tions of Alabama will be entitled to the lasting gratitude of genera- tions yet unborn, and will immor- talize himself or itself.

If each community, each Farm- er's Alliance, and every agricul- tural association, and the boards of trades of the cities will address themselves to the discussion of the public highways and then pub- lish the results of their investiga- tions and researches, the press of the State will do its part, and the next legislature of Alabama will solve the problem. Some of the great minds of the State are now employed upon this subject, and the future is bright with promise.

What Will It Be?

This is a question which interests the minds of many families who are living in unhealthy climates; and in looking for homes they look for a community whose people are social and religious, whose climate is healthful and where the school interest is on a solid growth. Then if this is the desire of any one, let him come to Clanton. Here he will find all these and more. He will find all that is necessary for the happiness of anyone. The people of the country are aroused to the school interests and ere long they will have a house second to no small town in the State, and a corps of teachers that will instil into the minds of the young high and noble aims and prepare them well for the duties of life, and for entering the highest and most renowned colleges.

Clanton is not on a "big boom," but slowly and surely building and growing. New and handsome residences are being erected and the lumber interests still thriving. The soil of the country is level and productive. Farmers are prospering and when they succeed it is a manifolder which writes success upon the business of every other profession. Our people are of the best people in the world, and we have no broken down aristocracy in our midst. Our people and their interests are one, and upon the whole, we have the best community on the Louisville & Nashville road. Our railroad facilities are unsurpassed. In one day we can go to Birmingham or Montgomery and return. People are coming into our country and settling, and if you would get a good home among good people, come at once to Clanton in Chilton county, and you can buy and buy cheap.

B.

We clip the following items of local interest from Saturday's Advertiser:

The Governor on yesterday appointed Samuel L. Ariedge, Notary Public and Justice of the Peace, Chilton county.

Birdeye Graham, colored, who was sent up from Chilton county several months ago, for assault to murder, and escaped last January was captured in this city by Patrolman Perdue, yesterday morning. There was a reward of $400 dollars for him. There are several more badly wanted convicts at large, and the convict bureau is making every effort to capture them.

It will be remembered that Birdeye Graham was discharged from the coal mines after serving a short sentence for carrying concealed weapons. He also was at the time under six years sentence for assault to murder Dan DeJarnette, and will go back to the mines to serve that sentence.

Money is lost if you buy your clothes before you look through our immense stock of clothing. ALEX RICE, Montgomery.

The "Great Show."

Of course those who read this and especially those who have been so fortunate as to attend either of the former Expositions, will readily understand that we refer to the Southern Exposition at Montgomery which opens its Third Annual Meeting on Oct., 28, continuing until Nov. 11th. We notice other fairs and expositions are laying claim to the word "Great," but we cannot understand why, unless they are great as failures. For two successive years the Southern Exposition without asking aid from the State, have delighted their patrons with two of the nicest, best, most entertaining and instructive shows ever given in the South. The management this year, with the experience of two years, intend giving a better show than either of the former. The main building is already crowded full of the finest class of exhibits. Their stock show will be a great improvement over former years, and this is saying a great deal, for heretofore their stock in this line has been immense. Their stable room for race horses is nearly all engaged and many fast flyers will be present to delight the lovers of fine racing. A professional has been engaged as starter, which insures fair play and honest races. As the principal attraction they have again secured the mammoth "WILD WEST SHOW" of the celebrated Indian Scout, Pawnee Bill, who since last year has added many new features.

Another attraction worthy of note is "DAY FIREWORKS," a novelty in this section. This display will be especially attractive on children's or school day, November 6th.

Races in Balloons and Parachute by a gentleman and lady, will be another thrilling and attractive feature.

Other minor attractions will delight and entertain the visitors. Our advice is to go and carry your family. You can get low rates on all railroads, and board at reasonable rates at boarding houses and hotels while in the city.

Jemison Locals.

The Mulberry Baptist Association convened with Jemison church on Wednesday last and had a profitable meeting. A large crowd attended, and among the visiting ministers were Dr. C. S. Anderson, of Ft. Payne, Rev. C. W. Hare, of the Alabama Baptist, Rev. Mr. O'Hara, of Columbiana, and Rev. J. M. McCord, of Verbena.

Mr. James McDonald, died at his home on Sunday morning last, and was burried with Masonic honors at the cemetery at Pine Hill, Sunday morning. He was in his 80th year, having been born in S. C., in 1812. He came to Alabama many years ago. We tender our sympathy to his bereaved widow.

Our friend, Mr. R. H. Gaines, is visiting his old home at Jemison, much to the delight of his many friends.

Mrs. Lizzie Nobblett, who has been quite sick for sometime is much improved.

Miss Mattie Hand, who has had fever for several weeks is slowly improving, and we trust she will soon be convalesent.

Miss Minnie Wells spent several days at Jemison last week, but returned to Dry Valley Sunday leaving more than one sad face behind.

Mrs. J. S. Catts, of Verbena, visited relatives in Jemison last week.

The farmers are rapidly gathering and marketing the cotton crop, and trade in our town is growing better.

We heard this morning of the death of Mr. B. Moore, which occurred yesterday very suddenly at Mr. Sam Curry's, but have not heard any particulars.

Mr. and Mrs. Loren Trescott are keepers of the government lighthouse at Sand Beach, Mich., and are blessed with a daughter, four years old. Last April she was taken down with measles, followed with a dreadful cough, and turning into a fever. Doctors at home and at Detroit treated her, but in vain, she grew worse rapidly, until she was a mere "handful of bones." Then she tried Dr. King's New Discovery and after the use of two and a half bottles, was completely cured. They say Dr. King's New Discovery is worth its weight in gold, yet you get a trial bottle free.

ALLIANCE TALKS.

NEWS OF THE ORDER FROM ALL SECTIONS.

Items of Interest to Alliancemen Everywhere.

An exchange says: We are waiting for an over production of money to move the over production of crops to pay off the over production of debts, and to feed and clothe the over production of people.

The Bevier (Mo.) Appeal says: "Farmers and laboring men in general go to work and elect the idlers and enemies of labor into power, who, in turn, go to work and enact laws to rob and fleece the very ones who gave them power to do so, and for years the farmer wageworkers have meekly and uncomplainingly submitted to them."

The Arkansas (Searcy) Economist says: "Why there should not be perfect unanimity of sentiment between the merchant and farmer with regard to financial reform we fail to see. What benefits the latter must benefit the former. The prejudice which has arisen should be put aside, and they should stand together in the great battle for an increase of the currency."

The Alliance Echo (Kansas City, Mo.) says: "The farmer pays the taxes. If he lies his neighbors will tell the assessor, and he is caught up with, but his bro her in the city is sent a blank to fill out, and he writes as much or as little as he pleases and swears to it and returns it. If he has a palace home with costly furniture and rooms elegantly furnished from cellar to garret, worth $25,000, he gives it in at from $3,000 to $5,000. If he has cash and bonds to the amount of $10,000 he will not return a cent. Should he have a large sum of money deposited in the banks he draws it out, takes a certificate check and has the cashier hide it away in his vaults till the assessment is taken. Hence the burden of taxation falls upon the farmer who can't well evade the law, if he is so disposed, or upon the poorer classes in the city who have houses and lots that can't be covered up."

The Alliance Sentinel (Rogers, Ark.) says. There is one glaring, monstrous fact, that the people will not fail to fully realize, and that is, that in all the assaults that the opposition make against the sub-treasury plan, scheme or proposition, it has not presented one single line for the relief of the people. They condemn the sub-treasury but offer nothing in its stead. The Alliance asks for the adoption of the sub treasury plan or some other proposition that is as good, for the people must have relief, and that speedily; this is a fact that will be realized by all the people. The power of contraction has done its terrible work, and the people are groaning under its oppression, and they must have relief. Therefore, if the subtr-easury plan will not meet the emergency, gentlemen of the opposition, present some other plan that will be equally as good in meeting the necessities of the people. Be assured the Alliance will hold on to the sub-treasury plan until some other plan as good or better is presented."

FROM LOUISIANA.

A New Orleans dispatch says: The call of the dissatisfied members of the Farmers' Alliance for a third party convention, to meet at Alexandria, October 2nd, has proved a political surprise to all. A large element in the alliance were dissatisfied with the LaFayette combination made by the state alliance with the anti-lottery democrats some weeks ago. They appealed to President Polk, who sided with them, and, backed by this decision, they have determined to hold a convention next month and place an entire independent state ticket in the field. This will complicate matters a great deal, and will prove a severe blow to the anti-lottery cause. It will place three tickets in the field—democratic, alliance and republican, and possibly four. It will probably hurt the anti-lottery people, since it will lose them a great many farmers, who will go off in this third party movement.

A NOVEL SUBTITUTE.

The Laurens Advertiser, which has been fighting the sub-treasury bill, has been asked to suggest a subtitute, and the following is given as its plan which is claimed to be at least "better than the sub-treasury:" "Following out the demand of the Ocala platform, let the government issue bonds at a reasonable rate of interest to the extent of $900,000 000, and buy the railroad and telegraph lines Then let the government issue a paper currency redeemable in railroad passage or freight, or tele raph toll limited to the estimated amount of travel, hauling and messag-sending likely to accommodate the population. To illustrate, a bill of a certain denomination presented to a government train conductor would call for passage ten, thirty or 100 miles, or for carrying a bale of cotton a pecified distance, say from Laurens to Richmond. The government should, of course, make such bills legal tender, and receive them in payment of all taxes and import duties. Gold, silver and greenbacks might be kept in circulation just as they are now, a fixed standard of value of each to each other and to the new currency having been ascertained."

Dakota Sun (Wessington Springs, S. D.) says: "A distiller deposits a barrel of whisky in a government warehouse, and receives a certificate which is negotiable at a bank as a government bond. The distiller borrows what money he needs upon it at a low rate of interest, and the government takes care of the whisky for three years, during which time it substantially increases in value. Meanwhile the government at public expense looks out sharply for the supposition of illegal distilleries, so that the tax when paid is a burden which falls solely on the consumer. Is this class legislation, or not? Now is it not better that the farmer's wheat is in a government warehouse awaiting a rise in the market, where in case of forfeiture it goes to the government, which is the people, than that it lies in the elevators at Duluth or Chicago, awaiting a 'corner' in the market to be the prey of the speculators? You must expect these people to howl like the 'drinkers of crime' mentioned by the Prophet Joel, or like Demetrious at Ephesus and the 'workmen of like occupation,' mentioned in the XIX chapter of Acts. All the misery of the world has been caused by disobedience of the divine injunction 'in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread.' The robber, the miser, the slave holder, the gambler and the speculator have striven to eat their bread in the sweat of other men's toils. At every movement [illegible] of the nation means that eit-

'paternalism.' The first and best government the world ever saw was the most paternal. It was the patriarchial states of Abraham and Job."

OFFICIAL RULING.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 13, 1891.

To whom it may concern:

Owing to the fact that there has been and is yet a misunderstanding among a great many of our State officers in regard to the payment of "per capita dues" by the State Alliances to the national, I have requested the national president to make a ruling on the subject in answer to questions asked him, covering the whole matter, which ruling you will find below. I take this method of giving each State timely notice that the delegates from no State Alliance will be seated at the next meeting of the Supreme Council of the National Farmers Alliance and Industrial Union, unless the State secretary makes his annual report and pays the per capita dues according to the following ruling.

J. H. TURNER,
Secretary National Farmers Alliance and Industrial Union.

Mr. Dear Sir and Brother: Replying to your letter of September 1, requesting rulings on two questions concerning the finances of the Alliance, I make the decisions which follow:

Your first question is: "Will the per capita dues of the several state alliances for the year 1892 be due and payable on the first day of November, 1891? On this question I rule yes. My ruling is based on section two of article seven of the national constitution of constitution, which reads as follows: A per capita tax of five cents shall be paid for each male member into the national treasury by each state organization on or before the first day of each year." The dues are payable in advance under the provisions of section twenty-eight of the statutory laws, which reads as follows: "The per capita dues shall be five cents, due annually in advance on the first day of November with the last day of grace, February 1 following."

Your second question is: "If you rule in the affirmative, will the delegates to the next meeting of the Supreme Council be seated, if the State secretaries do not make their reports and pay said per capita dues for the year 1892?" I decide they can not. I base this decision on section 2 of the statutory laws, which reads as follows: "Delegates to the Supreme Council will not be entitled to seats in the body unless settlement of the national per capita dues of 5 cents for each male member has been made by the State secretary, accompanied by the proper amount of money to the national secretary and State secretaries shall make such remittance and report promptly on or before the 1st day of November."

Yours truly and fraternally,

L. L. POLK,
President N. F. A. and I. U.
Attest: J. H. TURNER, Secretary.

DELAWARE STATE ALLIANCE.

The Delaware State Alliance was organized last week. Officers were elected and the Ocala platform was indorsed in the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, by the Alliance of the State of Delaware, in convention assembled, that they accept and indorse the demands made by the National Alliance in session at Ocala, Fla., in December, 1890."

The following resolutions were passed amid much enthusiasm:

1. The principles of our Order are founded in the divine wisdom and justice of God as set forth and exemplified in His word, which we acknowledge as the only infallible rule of faith and practice.

2. In this word we are taught to love our neighbors as ourselves, to do justice and love mercy. We therefore ask nothing from any man or class that we would not willingly grant. We seek no selfish advantage and ask no special favor.

3. But we do demand fair play and equal rights for ourselves, as farmers, and, while we are willing and ready to bear our full share of the public burden, we are not willing and will no longer submit to pay nine-tenths of all the taxes levied for county and municipal purposes; demand that invested capital, such as bonds, mortgages and stocks, which yield a larger and more certain return, with less labor and care than our farms, be taxed exactly as they are, at its real value.

4. We further demand that the latter, when collected, shall be wisely and economically spent for the benefit of the citizens at large and not to reward favorites or professional politicians for political service, real or imaginary.

5. We are neither a party or partisans, but are political to this extent: That we demand the selection of good, honest and true men for office, and we will support no others; and especially do we demand the selection of honest and courageous men for senators and representatives in our State legislature, and men who are imbued with the principles we advocate and who will unhesitatingly pledge themselves to carry them out if elected.

6. We further declare that, while we have our party preferences respectively, we are yet freemen, and not the slaves of any party or factions, and we will therefore support only such men as believe in our principles and are willing to support them, no matter to what party they may be allied.

7. That under the head of farmers we include and recognize all who draw their support directly from the land.

8. We also declare our deep and sincere sympathy with workingmen of all classes, and we will aid them on every proper occasion to secure their rights and the just reward of their labor; and we ask of them to unite with us in the support of these principles and the attainment of these ends.

A GREAT MISTAKE.

Following is the comment of the Progressive Farmer, (President Polk's paper) on the recent threatened strike by the colored cotton pickers of the south. The article is headed "A Great Mistake" and is as follows: "We see from the National Alliance, organ of the colored Farmers' Alliance of the United States, that R. M. Humphries, General Superintendent, has perfected arrangements for a general strike of the colored cotton-pickers throughout the South, to go into effect on the 12th of this month, which was last Saturday. He advises them to go about it peacefully and stand firm until their demand is granted. They want $1 per hundred for all cotton they pick. We think this a great mistake on the part of our colored friends at this time. With cotton selling at 7 and 8 cents there is absolutely no profit in it. To even 50 cents per hundred is a big price, fully equal to the price of the cotton. An additional 50 cents per hundred means $1.50 added to the cost of raising the cotton after it is ginned. If that cotton was selling at 10 cents our farmers would just be where they now are after adding the extra $1 50 to the cost of raising and picking. The white farmers of the South are the best friends the colored people have. Some of them have not treated them as they should, but generally speaking the relations have prospered where the whites have prospered. The negro farmer and the white farmer are both on the same platform today. They are suffering from the same cause and the movement now on foot is not calculated to remedy the evils. It is the duty of our white Alliance people to see that our colored farmers have an equal chance in life. But in taking this step the colored Alliancemen attempt to better their condition at the expense of their white brethren. Reforms should not be in the interest of one portion of our farmers at the expense of another. If both white and colored farmers can better their condition at the same time, then the country will be better for all classes. But for either color to benefit themselves at the expense of the other, is simply a family throat-cutting business. If our white and colored farmers can, by a united effort, remedy our financial system, get better prices for the products we raise, raise the price of farm labor, then all will have an equal chance to succeed. But as we see this cotton pickers' strike, it is a direct blow at farm owners which will cost a great deal and mount to nothing in the end. One thing is certain. Our farmers cannot afford to pay $1 per hundred for cotton picking. Another thing is certain: Unless both white and black work together to secure general and equal relief, nothing good will come out of it. We think that after proper consideration the colored alliancemen will see that they are taking an improper and suicidal step in demanding a thing impossible, and that they will reconsider the plan for a general strike. We profess to know as much about the situation and about cotton as Superintendent Humphries, and we do not hesitate to advise our farmers to leave their cotton in the fields rather than pay more than 50 cents per hundred to have it picked. The speculators are mainly responsible for the low price of cotton and so is our financial system. Strike at the root of the disease rather than at the top, for this movement is simply a blow at the top.

CROP REPORT.

Uncle Sam's Weekly Weather Bulletin.

The weather bureau's crop bulletin for week ended September 19th, says: It has been a warm week east of the Rocky mountains, the greatest excess in temperature occurring over the central valleys where warm, dry weather was most needed for the ripening of corn. Over the greater portion of the corn region the daily excess in temperature ranged from 6 degrees to 8 degrees, and this high temperature, attended as it was by almost continuously clear weather, must have forced the ripening of corn, which had been retarded in growth during the three previous weeks of cool weather. In the cotton region the temperature was slightly in excess. There was a general deficiency in rainfall over the whole country east of the Rocky mountains, with the exception of a few limited localities where local showers gave more than the normal rainfall. These small areas are located in North Carolina, Texas, eastern Michigan and northwest Iowa. There was an almost total absence of rain in the lower Mississippi, lower Ohio, and lower Missouri valleys. Heavy local showers occurred in the east gulf states and lower lake region, while very light showers were reported from all other districts.

GENERAL REMARKS.

Virginia—Conditions were excellent for the growing crops, though the weather was rather too warm the past few days for tobacco already cut.

North Carolina—The warm, sunshiny week was most favorable for all crops and farm work. Cotton is opening more rapidly, though picking is not yet general.

South Carolina—The high temperature and excessive sunshine scalded and rusted the cotton, shedded the young fruit and caused immature bolls to open. The damage is believed to be more than formerly reported.

Alabama—The rains of last week greatly benefited all crops. There is no material change in the condition of cotton since the last report.

Mississippi—Growing crops are suffering from dry, hot weather. Cotton harvesting is in progress; the staple is good, but the sunshine is opening immature bolls. Rain could not materially benefit cotton.

Louisiana—The weather was generally favorable and there is a slight improvement in the prospects, though all crops, especially cane, need rain. Excellent harvesting weather. Cotton is opening rapidly and picking is well under way.

Arkansas—Continued warm days and cool nights in the northern portion of the state have caused cotton to shed, with a consequent further reduction in its condition. Cotton picking has become general. Corn and other crops are in good condition, but warm rains are needed.

Texas—The weather was favorable for cotton picking, which has progressed rapidly. The staple is unusually long and clean. Showers have improved late cotton, and the top crop in central and eastern Texas. Prospects continue fair over northern Texas.

Tennessee—Late crops are suffering from the drought and planting has been suspended. Hay making and fodder saving are progressing finely. Cotton picking is under way. The crop is short. Warmth and sunshine are required to mature late corn.

Kentucky—Corn is maturing rapidly, and is about safe from frost. Tobacco is being cut; the crop was seriously damaged in Christian county by half. Pastures need rain. Fall plowing is nearly completed.

A CRAZY MOTHER

Hurls Her Children and Then Herself Into the River.

A Sioux Falls, South Dakota, dispatch says: Workingmen on the railroad saw a woman walk to the Great Northern bridge, throw an eight-year-old boy into the river, hurl an eighteen months old baby after him and plunge into the water herself, Sunday. Boats reached the scene and dragged the three bodies ashore, but too late to save the mother and babe. The woman is the wife of a contractor named Neprosich, and had become crazed on account of her husband's business reverses.

LILLIAN AS A LUNATIC.

The Gay Adventuress Landed in the Asylum.

A Knoxville, dispatch says that Mrs. L. M. Gould, of Murphy, N. C., noted for killing her husband, was on Monday night, sent to the insane asylum at that place. She has been in Knoxville for some days and created quite a sensation by her attempts to kiss several men the first day she was there. The woman has been eating opium, and a reputable physician made all do with that she was insane. Pending an inquisition of lunacy she was committed to the county asylum.

THROUGH DIXIE.

NEWS OF THE SOUTH BRIEFLY PARAGRAPHED

Forming an Epitome of Daily Happenings Here and There.

The Agricultural and Mechanical college at Auburn, Ala., opened Wednesday with a very large attendance.

R. M. King, the Seventh Day Adventist, convicted in Obion county, Tennessee, of Sabbath breaking, has appealed to the United States supreme court.

Fire at Fort Worth, Tex., Tuesday, destroyed the Ellis hotel, a five-story structure and the three-story annex, together with the contents, valued at $180,000. Total loss, $150,000 insurance, $22,000.

Buena Vista furnace, at Lexington, Va., employing several hundred men, shut down Wednesday on account of serious damage to the stack. It will probably not be able to start up for several weeks.

A Knoxville, Tenn., dispatch of Thursday says: Governor Buchanan has called the election in this congressional district to supply the vacancy caused by the death of L. C. Houk, for Saturday, November 21st.

Thursday morning the long-expected fair inaugurated by the colored people opened its first exhibition at the Chattanooga driving park. The fair is expected to exhibit the work of the colored people of that section in agricultural and mechanical lines.

A Mobile dispatch says: Frank Clorgue, president of the Bank of Maine, of Bangor, Me., and his brother, E. V. Clorgue, of New York, organized the Mobile Trust Company, Tuesday with $500,000 capital, to do a trust and general banking business.

The Southern and Southwestern Railway Club, composed of the principal mechanical officials of the railroads of the south, assembled in Nashville Thursday in annual session. The object of the annual gathering is the discussion of railway machinery and appliances generally.

The Cleveland and ten business houses were burned at Sheffield, Ala., Sunday night. The fire started about 7 o'clock, orginating in the rear of the building. The buildings are a total wreck. The loss is about one hundred and ten thousand dollars, with light insurance. The fire is supposed to be entirely accidental.

A Los Angeles, Cal., dispatch of Monday says: A second libel has been filed against the Chilean steamer Itata, at San Diego, by United States Marshal Gardener, for $200,000, for damages sustained in bringing the vessel back from Chile. The case will come up before Judge Ross, in the United States court.

On Thursday Chattanooga's new cotton compress was put to work on 150 bales of cotton, the first order it has had since completed. The first hour the compress was timed, turning out sixty bales, and the whole lot was finished in two and one-half hours. Chattanooga expects to handle more cotton this season than five previous years.

The German and German-American citizens of Richmond, Va., celebrated Wednesday—German day—and the one-hundredth anniversary of Koemer's birth, by a street parade and a volkfest at the exposition grounds. A feature of the day was the unveling of the bust of Koemer, the work of Monyhan, and the singing of songs of the poet soldier.

On Thursday Judge Simonton filed in the United States circuit court, at Charleston, S. C., his decision of the motion made by Attorney General Pope for the dismissal of the injunction restraining the Carolina farmers and all other phosphate companies from entering or mining in the Coosaw territory. The decision denies the motion and says the petitioners must give eight days' notice before again making the application.

A Columbia, S. C., dispatch of Thursday says: Under the auspices of the Good Templars lodge of Columbia, 35,000 petitions for signatures asking the legislature to enact a law prohibiting the liquor traffic in South Carolina, are being sent out. A bill to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors got a respectable vote in the legislature of 1889, and it is believed that if backed up by numerously signed petitions the coming legislature will enact a prohibitory law.

A Chattanooga dispatch says: The broad of public works and the Chattanooga Electric Street Railway Company were indicted Thursday by the grand jury for obstructing Oak street, and L. G. Walker, W. T. Pope and C. C. Snyder, of the board of public works, and Sam Divine and C. A. Lyerby, of the railway company, were arrested and placed under bond for their appearance at circuit court to answer the chagre. The electric road has been fined before for a similar offense.

A Chattanooga dispatch says: What promises to be a sensation developed Monday. The county clerk subpoenaed the officers of the land companies doing business in the city to appear and show cause why they should not pay the five-hundred-dollar state privilege license under the law of 1889. The county and city have the right to assess the same tax, which would make $1,500 per year for each company, and $4,500 for each company for the past three years. Many of the companies declare they will go out of business. At a meeting Monday the real estate men decided that they would test the constitutionality of the law. Considerable interest exists. Another meeting will be held Saturday morning.

BISHOP TURNER,

The Colored Divine, Talks Glowingly of Africa.

A Boston, Mass., dispatch says: Bishop Henry McNeil Turner spoke to a large congregation of colored people Monday night in the African Methodist Episcopal church, on Charles street, on his proposed trip to Africa, and is advocacy of the migration of 100,000 or 150,000 of the colored race to that continent. His observation, he said, had taught him that there was little hope for the colored race in this country; that the best thing a number of them could do was to go to some other country, set up a government of their own, and demonstrate that they had in them native ability to administer the affairs of state. In Africa he saw such a country. It was rich in gold, silver, precious stones and minerals of all descriptions, such as a people starting to govern themselves would need to make them strong and mighty. He fervently believed that the black men and women in America would finally be the instrument to redeem that Christianless Africa and plant on her soil one of the grandest governments the world ever saw.

Some Wealthy People.

Milton is worth $3,000,000.

Phil Armour, the Chicago pork king, does an annual business of $40,000,000.

The duke of Hamilton is said to draw a neat little rental of $150,000 per annum for his tenantry in the island of Arran.

Mrs. T. N. Egery of Bangor is said to be the richest woman in Maine. The Bar Harbor Tourist rates her at $4,000,000.

A. J. Drexel heads the list of Philadelphia rich men with $35,000,000. The city has 160 millionaires, whose total holdings foot up over $400,000,000.

The late king of Bavaria was a shrewd investor in spite of his madness, for the art treasures which cost his majesty 10,000,000 francs, and left by him, have just been valued at $25,000,000 francs.

John Fitzgerald, the president of the Irish National league in America, is the richest man in Lincoln, Neb., having a fortune of $1,500,000. He began his career as a laborer with pick and shovel on a western road.

Herman Celman, the South American millionaire, owns a $1,000,000 yacht, the Southern Cross, is only 28 years of age and has an income of $500,000 a year. He is the only son of ex-President Celman of the Argentine Republic.

One of the prominent guests at Saratoga this season has been Mr. D. O. Mills, the banker. He is a small and wiry man of about 65, with a bright face and a clear blue eyes. He dresses most modestly, and does not look as if he had an income of $1,000,000 a year.

John I. Blair of Blairsville, N. J., is reputed to be worth all the way from $50,000,000 to $100,000,000. He has never sold a share of stock in any enterprise with which he has been associated, and has money invested in scores of railroads, some of which he absolutely controls.

Advancement of Woman in 100 Years.

If any creature on earth has reason for exultant, tearful, heavenward rising thankfulness it is the modern woman. Never in all the world's history has she been so free from burdens, so exalted in privileges as to-day. The nineteenth century is the era of her coronation. To-day she stands queen of herself and of the world. In the palmiest days of the "good old times" the only woman who was allowed any privileges or culture was the courtesan. The wife's home was a prison, and her hands alone were of value.

Whether or not she had any brains she was not permitted to discover; and this has held substantially true the world over, until within the last one hundred years, and the most convincing proof of this is the character of the books of the best society. You would not dare to read aloud in mixed society any book of the last century. Books were not made for women; and so whether they were decent or not was a small consideration.

Even the old preachers indulged in coarseness of language that would not now be permitted in a political harangue. Some of Martin Luther's sermons could not be read in a modern school. Swearing in the drawing room and in the "best society" was no uncommon thing ninety years ago. Even the ladies themselves not rarely indulged in it.—Minot J. Savages in Arena.

"German Syrup"

Croup. We have selected two or three lines from letters freshly received from parents who have given German Syrup to their children in the emergencies of Croup. You will credit these, because they come from good, substantial people, happy in finding what so many families lack—a medicine containing no evil drug, which mother can administer with confidence to the little ones in their most critical hours, safe and sure that it will carry them through.

ED. L. WILLIS, of Alma, Neb. I give it to my children when troubled with Croup and never saw any preparation act like it. It is simply miraculous.

Mrs. JAS. W. KEAR, Daughters' College, Harrodsburg, Ky. I have depended upon it in attacks of Croup with my little daughter, and find it an invaluable remedy.

Fully one-half of our customers are mothers who use Boschee's German Syrup among their children. A medicine to be successful with the little folks must be a treatment for the sudden and terrible foes of childhood, whooping cough, croup, diphtheria and the dangerous inflammations of delicate throats and lungs.

Nothing can be [illegible] in favor of the best medicine in the world that may not be said of most worthless. In one case, it is true; in the other, it isn't;—but how can you distinguish?

Judge by what is done. The only one blood-purifier that's guaranteed. It's Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery—and this is what is done with it; if it doesn't benefit or cure, in every case, you get your money back. Isn't it likely to be the best?

All the year round, as well at one time as another, it cleanses and purifies the system. All blood-poisons must go. For Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Scrofula, Salt-rheum, Tetter, Erysipelas, or any blood-taint or disorder, it is an unequaled remedy.

It's the cheapest, too. With it you pay only for the good you get.

And nothing else is "just as good." It may be better—for the doctor. But he isn't the one that's to be helped.

HOW TO GET WELL

for me but to face the music, and I hailed one of the many drivers who were anxious to get passengers. I assisted my fair Clorinda to a seat, and in a few moments we were whirling along through the rain. Hardly had we gone two blocks when Clorinda said she was hungry, and asked me to stop and get supper. My feelings can easier be imagined than described as I thought of my empty pockets, and tried to reason her out of eating so late at night. All my arguments were fruitless, however, for my dear Clorinda was not to be thwarted.

"Thinking that fortune might befriend me by some means then a mystery to me, I ordered the driver to stop at the nearest restaurant. We entered the saloon and took seats at a table in the centre of the room. I determined to eat as little as possible, but Clorinda was not by any means so delicate, and quietly took the liberty of ordering what she wanted. In vain I looked around to see if by chance the place contained an acquaintance, but to my dismay not a familiar face was to be seen.

"As you may imagine, I was not in a hurry to leave the table, but my companion began to show strong signs of restless anxiety to get home, so I thought I had better start and have it over as soon as possible.

"I had formed many plans of how I was to pacify the cashier at the desk, but the wretch had more human nature in him than I imagined.

"While walking down the restaurant I turned to Clorinda and suggested that she had better go out and get into the carriage while I was settling the bill and buying some cigars, which I wanted to take with me. To this she made no objection, as luck would have it.

"I walked on till I came in front of the smiling individual who was waiting for payment, and with as bold an air of innocence as I could assume I told him I had forgotten my pocket-book in the hurry of getting ready for the theatre, but I would call next day and settle the bill.

"'Too thin a story to pass here, sir,' he ejaculated. 'We do a strictly cash business.'

"'I don't want to be bullied about such a trifle,' I continued, but the man had completely changed into a hog by this time, and coming out from his place behind the desk, he looked wicked enough to choke me then and there.

"'I will call a policeman and have you arrested,' he said in a menacing tone, loud enough to be heard by all the people in the place.

"My blood boiled at the insulting manner of the man, and I lost all control over my actions.

"'Get out of my way and let me pass, you scoundrel!' I said as I made a dash for the door.

"A general scuffle ensued, and I believe I was giving him a few well-aimed blows, when, to my horror, a policeman rushed in and collared me as roughly as if I had been a madman.

"'What's this all about?' he demanded of the clerk, who was blind with rage.

"'Arrest that man and take him to the station-house, and I will go down and make a charge against him.'

"'But let me explain,' I cried, in a loud tone.

"'Explanations at the station-house,' said the officer, as he dragged me into the street, where a crowd of idlers had already gathered to see the fun.

"As I reached the sidewalk I saw the carriage drive off at a rapid rate. I learned afterward that Clorinda became alarmed for her own safety, and promised the driver a liberal reward if he would drive to her father's house. This made matters worse, for it looked as if she was an accomplice of mine, and fled for fear of arrest.

"Imagine the state of my feelings as I was being marshaled through the streets, with five hundred urchins yelling all around me! When we reached the police station the usual preliminaries were gone through. The restaurant keeper appeared, and made a charge against me of 'swindling and deliberate assault without provocation.'

"I told my story, but of course it went for nothing, as the policeman gave his evidence in affirmation of the charges. Of course I was walked off to a cell to pass the night in thinking over my troubles.

"In the morning after being escorted before a police justice, I was tried, and fined ten dollars. I telegraphed to a friend down town, who soon came to my assistance, and paid the fine. I went home to my boarding-house, and, as luck would have it, the people in the house were ignorant of my adventures during the night. I suppose they thought I had been on a spree, but they said nothing, and I did not enlighten them.

"That evening I made up my mind to call upon my dear Clorinda and her parents for the purpose of explaining my conduct. All through the day I had been framing excuses, which were, for the most part, equivocations. When I reached the door my heart beat so strongly that I felt my courage giving way, and I stood on the stoop for several minutes before I could summon sufficient courage to ring the bell.

"When the girl came to the door I asked if Miss Swan was at home. She said 'yes,' and politely asked me to 'take a seat in the parlor.'

"In a few moments the servant reappeared, bearing a card with the compliments of her mistress. I glanced at the card, and on it was written in a clear, delicate hand:

"'Have you got rubbers on? Have you the money to pay for your supper? If not I will lend you the necessary amount. C. S.'

"I made a dash for the door, and was soon in the street, fearing lest the father should appear and kick me out of the house.

"And now, my dear boy, do you wonder that I am still a bachelor? My advice to you is—beware of sailing under false colors."—[New York Weekly.

A Destroyer of Hessian Flies.

Entomologist Forbes of the Illinois State University, has been experimenting with the larvæ of a parasite brought from Europe, which is claimed to be a deadly enemy of the Hessian fly. A small patch of wheat, about one yard square, was inclosed in a bottomless box so arranged that the grain could have air and light to grow. A considerable number of Hessian flies and the larvæ of the parasite mentioned were put in, and the box was so closed that they could not escape or other insects get in, and thus the experiment was begun. The larvæ have hatched out and are flourishing well. They are almost microscopical insects, and seem to have been created solely to prey upon the Hessian fly. They are neatly formed, wasp-shaped little mites, and are supplied with a sharp sting or anger. With unerring instinct they find the place where the fly has laid its egg under the husk of straw, and boring down into it, the parasite lays his egg inside the egg of the fly. There it develops into a minute grub, consuming the egg of the fly and destroying it. This is, in outline, what has been proved by the experiment made, and it has been surmised that the parasite will prove to be more destructive in this country than it has appeared to be in Europe. It was totally unknown hitherto to scientific people in this country, and was first discovered committing its depredations in Southern Russia.

BILL ARP TALKS.

WITH HIS FRIEND JAKE OF SOME PUBLIC MATTERS

The Alliance and the Sub-Treasury. Who Will Pay the Big Bounties?--A Personal Devil.

Uncle Jake is not a scholar, but is a reader and a thinker. He takes some papers and borrows others. He is getting old and is quite amiable and tolerant. His natural disposition is not to criticise, but rather to apologize for everything and everybody. When there is conflict and excitement and bitterness, he takes no side, but offers excuses for both.

"There are two sides to this thing," says he, "and folks ought to discuss it more calmly." It always interests me to draw him out on the perplexing questions of the day, and hear him express his "leanings."

"I havent mind enough," says he, "to decide betwixt 'em, but it will all work out right after while. Our Heavenly Father is mighty good to His creatures as long as good people are in the majority. He would have saved Sodom if Abraham could have found ten good people there. I don't know how big the town was—big as Atlanta, I reckon, but it must have been an awful place. God puts up with a heap before He lets his wrath boil plum over. He never sent the flood until the number of good people was reduced down to eight, and I reckon one of them was a pretty hard case and was just saved on account of his kinfolks. I believe there is many a young man and young girl, too, who will be saved on account of their father and mother. Atlanta is said to be a right wicked town, but I reckon there are several hundred good people there—pretty good people—and I think she is safe. The towns are worse than the country, for you see the devil hasn't got time to run round from house to house and whisper his devilment in their ears. He wants 'em by the wholesale. He won't set his trap to catch one bird. He has got sense, he has. He wont waste his ammunition."

"Uncle Jake," said I, "what is your opinion about this home for the veterans that has raised such a commotion? "Well, now," said he, "since it has sorter quieted down I reckon a man can talk a little without being misconstrued. While they were all so mad on both sides I never said nary word. It wasent prudent. There are two sides to it and both of 'em are good sides. There isent much difference betwixt 'em really, but they dident know it. Everybody is willing to do something for the veterans, and the question is, what is the best thing to do. If they had taken a little more time and sent out circulars, and had the magistrates in every district to send in a report of how many old soldiers in his beat had no kinfolks that he had rather stay with, and who would probably go to the home, then there would have been something substantial to depend on. There may be right smart of 'em in the state—I don't know.

"I asked our members about it and they dident know of any in Bartow. It's mighty hard for an old soldier to break up his associates and go off alone. A man has got to be mighty nigh a vagabond to do it. I heard Sam Jones say that the soldiers' homes up north were perfectly scandalous. That nobody was in 'em but a lot of vagabond foreigners who came over here without families and pitched into the fight and they have gone to the homes and draw their pensions and set around all day and drink beer and play cards, and they are considered up there a perfect nuisance. But our veterans are not that kind, and if we can help them we want to do it. But I know some mighty worthy ones who need help and won't go to the 'home,' either—they love their homefolks too good for that. Something might be done for them. There are two sides to this question, and the boys oughtent to get mad. They are all for the veterans, and the widows, too, and it don't make any difference what them papers up north say about it. Whatever we do won't lose a friend or convert an enemy up there. It makes me sorter mad to hear our people say 'what will the north say about it!'"

THE ALLIANCE AND THE SUB-TREASURY.

"Uncle Jake," said I, "what's your opinion about the alliance and the sub-treasury?" "Oh, I don't know," said he, "it will all work out right after a while. There are two sides to it, and whenever there are two sides it gets up discussions, and we will have to wait until the argument is over. It is in a right smart tangle yet, but the people will do right when they have time to see what right is. The farmers are raising a powerful rumpus and if they are demanding too much it's a good way to get something. I remember when the watchword of our party was $54.-40 or fight,' but we settled down to $36.30 and dident fight either, for that was all the territory we were entitled to.

"Folks have to make a fuss sometimes, or they will be run over. You know Bob Smith actually quit his corn crop and went to preaching all the week, and when his boss made a fuss against it, Bob said: 'We is just obleased to go to preachin' You white folks done got dis world, and we niggers is a fixin' to git the nex one.' The farmers have been paying tribute to protection for seventy-five years, and they are tired. They want their time to come. They want a bounty in some shape. Sugar has got one, and why not cotton and corn and wheat and rice? Five dollars a bale on cotton would help powerfully, and that would be only $40,000,-000 a year. That's nothing for a government like this. Suppose we paid $100,000,000 a year to the farmers in bounties, they would get the money and their products be no higher. The poor people would get them as cheap as ever. I can buy my sugar at 5 cents, but the sugar planters have to get 2 cents a pound more. This plan would stimulate farming and beat the sub-treasury scheme. The manufacturers have had that much or more for fifty years through the protective tariff—why not the farmers?"

"But Uncle Jake," said I, "where will the government get the money to pay the bounties?" "Oh, I don't know," said he, "where there's a will there's a way. There's the income tax that they could make as heavy as they please, and they could put some more on whisky—whisky will stand a right. It pays $100,000,000 now, and could just as easy pay $200,000,000."

"But suppose," said I, "the temperance movement abolishes whisky—what then?" "Why, then," said Uncle Jake, smiling, "we would have such a millennium we wouldn't want any bounties—we wouldent need any. If whisky was aboli-hed it would save a thousand millions a year to the country. Without whisky we would all get rich. Whisky runs poverty and poorhouses and lunatic asylums and orphans' homes and jails and chaingangs and prisons of all kinds. Whisky runs the courts and the taxes and pretty much the lawyers and doctors, to say nothing of broken vows and broken hearts. We could afford to swap away every bounty and pension and protection to get rid of whisky, but we won't talk about that now, for it's not in sight. It's only a hope, a dream. The devil will give up everything before he will whisky."

A PERSONAL DEVIL.

"Uncle Jake," said I, "do you believe in a real, personal devil?" The old man looked surprised. "Why not?" said he, "Why not? Don't the Bible tell us about him and all his officers—Satan and Beelzebub and Apolyon and Moloch and Belial and all those fellows? Why, the old scoundrel came here first. He had possession when Adam was created and he began right straight to work on him, and he's been a workin' on his posterity ever since. Don't I feel it? Don't I know it? He's been working on me all my life, and I have to fight him every day. What makes me have wicked thoughts—thoughts of passion revenge, envy, covetousness. When that mean old rascal, Jim Wilkins, was tore all to pieces by the cyclone, what made me glad of it? Don't I know that all such thought are unbecoming to a gentleman? What makes me love to hear Sam Jones scarify the people, what makes a little child show passions and selfishness before it can talk? The Lord dident make us that way, not at the start, He dident. The old devil is at the bottom of every bad thing, and we have just got to fight him, that's all. If he whips the fight here, then we become his subjects, and go straight to his kingdom, fire or no fire. That's what I believe. If I tell my boy not to go in a-washing this evening, he is perfectly free and able to mind me or not mind me, and just so the Lord has made me a free agent, to do right or do wrong. The good spirit works on me and the devil works on me, and I can take my choice—that's what I believe."

Sam Jones and Sam Small have got together again, and they make a powerful team. It doesn't matter what some folks or some papers say about them they are shaking up the people. I don't know what would become of us if it were not for the preachers. I saw a man shedding tears last night while Sam Small was talking who hasn't had a tender thought or a pure one in years, they say. May be he will come to himself yet, and, like the poor prodigal, go back to his father's house. I hope so. Everybody hopes so. Some folks don't like the spasmodical, emotional religion, but it is better than none. It puts a man to thinking, and is a sign that he is not clean gone. Our tabernacle is an institution and a comfort. It is crowded every day and every night, and all its influence is for good. Hundreds go there that won't go to the churches, and some of them are gathered in.

There are but two great highways in this world and one of them leads to the churches and the other to the jails. Not that so many reach the prisons, but you can see the jail away off at the end of the avenue they are on. Their bent is in that direction. And you can see the spires of the churches away off at the end of the other. The churches are the freest houses on earth, and the best. They have no secrets, and the doors are wide open, and you pay what you please, and everything that is done or said there is for peace; nobody quarrels or fights. You can't say that much of any political meeting or any secret society or grand jury or alliance meeting. I never heard of a young man being made worse by going to church. There is a sad song that says, "Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?" that a poor mother was singing. Well, if I were to step in and say "He's at church, madame," wouldent she be happy? Parents are not afraid of the church. They may not belong to it, nor go to it, but I never saw one who tried to keep his child away. Did you?

Well, no; I never did. I have read about them, but I reckon it was a romance.—BILL ARP, in Atlanta Constitution.

BUSINESS FAILURES

For Last Quarter as Reported by Dun & Co.

Business failures of the United States as reported by R. G. Dun & Co's. mercantile agency for the quarter ending September 30th, number 2 754, against 2,196 failures for the same quarter in 1890. Liabilities for the quarter amount to over $44,000,000, as against $35,500,-000 in 1890, showing an increase for 1891 of 558 failures and nearly nine million dollars in liabilities for the quarter. In nine months of the year 1891, just closed, the failures of the United States number 8,628, with liabilities of $136,000,000, against 7,581 failures and $100,000,000 of liabilities for the three corresponding quarters of 1890.

FOUR KILLED.

Another Fatal Accident on the Rail.

A dispatch from Akron, O., says: Freight train No. 85 on the New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio road collided with section passenger train No. 2, near Kent, Wednesday morning at 3 o'clock. Four persons were killed, including the engineer and fireman; thirty injured. The passenger train was occupied almost entirely by members of the Olin family going to their reunion at Bennington, Vt. The train was running as the sixth section of eastbound passenger train No. 4. The freight crew claim that they saw no fog on the engine of the fifth section to indicate that another train was to follow.

ALABAMA BRIEFS.

Newsy Notes Paragraphically Presented.

A Merchant's Telegraph company line is being built to extend from West Point, Ga., via. Opelika, Lafayette, Roanoke on to Gadsden, to connect at that point with the Postal Telegraph company.

The abstract of assessment from Russell county shows a total valuation of $2,-405,559, which yields a total tax of $9,-641.63. The valuation of this county last year was $2,250,960, which yielded a total tax of $9,016.08.

The Chattanooga and Gulf Railroad, formerly the Chattanooga and Durham, is being built by the Crawfish Springs Land Company from Chickamauga to the coal mines on Round mountain, a distance of seventy and a half miles.

Gadsden reports that the necessary money has been raised and work has begun on the building for the Coosa Valley exposition. The work will be rushed as rapidly as possible. The people are taking great interest in it, and it will be a success from the start.

The Anniston street railway was sold at sheriff's sale several days ago and was bid in by W. W. Stringfellow, trustee of O. E. Edwards, and the First National Bank. The price paid for it was $47,-500. A new company will be organized and the line equipped with electric cars as early as possible.

A special from London to the St. Louis Post Dispatch says: "J. B. Plant has secured the consent of 90 per cent. of the bondholders of the Alabama Midland railway to his scheme to guarantee 5 per cent. on $1,400,000 worth of bonds, issued at 6 per cent. Nearly all these bonds are owned in London.

J. A. Richardson, resident engineer at Atlanta for the Tennessee and Coosa extension of the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis, is reported as saying that eight miles of rails have been received and track laying is progressing as fast as possible. This will complete the track from Gadsden to within two miles of Guntersville.

The Oxford lake line began running electric cars a few days ago. There was a balloon ascension and other attractions at Oxford lake, and the people turned out in large numbers. Three electric cars will run at present, leaving Oxford for Anniston and the lake every twenty minutes. The coaches are perfect gems, and Oxford is proud of her lake line.

W. L. Lawler has been convicted of bigamy in the city court of Gadsden and sent up for two years. He married a Miss Sheffield at Attalla last spring and a few days afterwards she learned he had a living wife in Georgia. On being confronted with this evidence he skipped out, but was arrested in Anniston a short time afterwards.

The Journeymen Tailors' union of Birmingham went out on a strike a few days ago. All the merchant tailors in the city, except one firm are affected. The cause of the strike was a refusal on the part of employers to sign a new scale of prices. This new scale provided for an increase, variously estimated at from 5 to 10 per cent; the increase applying most largely to "extras."

The Anniston News says: "Few states can show the fast growth that Alabama can, and in order to let the country at large know of our great wealth, let us join hands and make the state fair at Birmingham, October 20 to 31, boom. Attractions of all kinds are now entered. For the instruction of visitors to our state fair we would say, they have secured more attractions in horses, cattle, sheep and wonders, than ever before shown in the south. Send your stock and go yourself."

Coming Conventions.

The Alabama State fair will be given as low rates as any of the great exhibitions now swinging around the circle clamoring for public patronage. None of them will excede the state fair and agricultural fair soon to be given at Birmingham. A large attendance will be expected from all sections of the country. The Piedmont fair at Atlanta will open on the 18th. The American Brickers' association will convene in New Orleans on the 10th of November. The American Public Health association will convene in Kansas City on the 26th of October. The Brotherhood of St. Andrew will assemble in St. Louis on the 23d of October. The American Missionary association will convene in Cleveland, O., on the 20th of October.

School Enumeration.

The state superintendent of education has received all the reports of school enumerations from the various counties in the state. The total footing of all the people in the state within the school ages shows a population between 7 and 21 of 547,5[illegible]. Of this number 307,[illegible] are white and 239,[illegible] are colored. The school enumeration two years ago showed a total population of [illegible] of which 925 were colored. The enumeration just closed shows a total increase of 24 855 in the school population within the past two years. The whites have in this time increased in number over two years ago, 11,887. The increase in the colored population in the same time was 13,968.

Down on the Lottery.

Ever since the lottery law of Mobile was amended and the mayor began his system of daily arrests the buzz of the policy wheel has no longer been heard in the streets and lanes of the city. The policy shops had full sway at one time and the thing became a nuisance and had to be suppressed. A few days ago a tri-daily lottery started up again under peculiar circumstances. The lottery law has this exemption "provided that the provisions of this act shall not apply to the distribution of presents to subscribers by newspaper proprietors or publishers." The lottery men have issued a little weekly paper and makeshift with no news in it and this they sell at a subscription price of 10 cents a month, the receipt bearing the policy number and being in fact a lottery ticket that will participate in the tri-daily drawing. The first time the wheel turned to make a drawing John F. Perry, the alleged manager of the new lottery scheme, was arrested by the mayor's order.

Mrs. Johnson in Court.

The preliminary examination of Mrs. Julia A. Johnson, charged with the murder of her husband, Capt. W. D. Johnson, was commenced Tuesday morning at Moulton, before Hon. J. C. Kumpe, judge of probate. As has already been published, the murder of Captain Johnson occurred at his home nine miles east of Moulton, on the morning of August 27th, last. There was no one in the house at the time of his death, except his wife and she reported to the neighbors that her husband had committed suicide. A coroner's jury was empaneled by the nearest justice of the peace, who, after hearing the testimony, rendered a verdict in accordance. Hon. G. T. Robert, coroner of the county, not being satisfied with the verdict of the squire's jury, empanneled a second, a week later and had the body exhumed. The result of the second inquest was an application to Governor Jones for a requisition on the governor of Arkansas for the body of Mrs. Julia Johnson, charged with the murder of her husband. Long before the hour set for the opening examination the court room was literally packed. Several important witnesses were examined. Voluminous evidence was offered for the defendant and the State offered none in rebutal. After listening to the argument of the counsel, Judge Kumpe remanded the defendant to jail without bail. Application has been made for a writ of habeas corpus, which will be tried before Judge H. C. Speaks at an early date. Opinion as to the defendants guilt seems to be somewhat divided.

THE STRIKE ENDED.

The Railroads Have Filled the Strikers' Places.

A dispatch of Friday from Savannah, Ga., says: From present indications the colored laborers' strike is about to end. It is not the strikers, however, who have brought this to pass. They are as d Sant as ever, and display not the slightest inclination to compromise. The railroads, however, have had agents out for the past few days, and this afternoon, as a result, found 750 men at work at the Ocean steamship wharves. The new laborers, who are all colored, are being paid on the new scale, which is an advance of 5 cents an hour over the old rate.

ORDERED TO VALPARAISO.

Uncle Sam Sends the Cruiser San Francisco to Chile.

A Washington dispatch says: During the afternoon of Wednesday Commodore Ramsay was in consultation with Secretary Tracy, and the result was an order for the cruiser San Francisco, then at Payta, Peru, to proceed immediately to Callao and thence to Valparaiso. If necessary, further instructions to govern the course of the vessel, when she arrives at Valparaiso, will be sent to her when she touches at Callao. Secretary Tracy declined absolutely to give his reason for sending the ship back to Chile, and refused to discuss the case.

When the sub treasury bill passes, everybody will want to go to farming, and we'll have big crops.

From recent statistics it is estimated that the average life of men in the different callings and professions is as follows: Farmers 64 years; bank officers 64; clergymen 66; lawyers 54; merchants 51; physicians 51; carpenters 49; manufacturers, bankers, painters, shoemakers and mechanics, 43; editors 40; musicians 39; teachers 34; clerks 34; operators 32.

It is Commissioner Lane.

The Alabama Supreme Court has decided that the Governor had a legal right to appoint a Commissioner of Agriculture at the expiration of Commissioner Kolb's term; and the Lane-Kolb contest has resulted in ousting Kolb and giving Lane the place. Justices McClellan and Coleman dissented. This is a legal victory not only for Mr. Lane and his attorneys but for Governor Jones as well. The court was unanimous in the opinion that Kolb could not hold over, the dissenting justices holding that a special election should have been had to fill the vacancy.

Sub-Treasury Primer.

What is a sub-treasury?

A warehouse where the farmer pawns his cotton.

How much does the farmer get on his cotton pawned at the warehouse?

The farmer gets four out of every five dollars.

Who gets the other one dollar, the farmer or the government?

The government holds it to pay for interest, insurance, loss of weight, decline in price of cotton etc.

Who devised the sub-treasury system?

It was either a syndicate of politicians or a syndicate of speculators.

Can a speculator deposit cotton in the sub-treasury?

A speculator can deposit cotton in a sub-treasury.

How many bales can he deposit in the sub-treasury?

If he has $60,000,000 he can deposit the entire crop valued at $300,000,000.

How can a speculator do this?

Say every fourth or tenth county had a ware house. Speculators with $100,000 buy cotton, send it to the warehouse, draw $80,000; buy again send that to the warehouse and draw $64,000; buy again draw $51,000; buy again and deposit, and draw money, and so on until $100,000 would corner $500,000 worth of cotton. Margins would not bother him, and he could hold on so long as he paid interest, insurance and warehouse. In this way speculators could corner and control three hundred million dollars worth of cotton with one-fifth of that amount of money.

Would the speculators get half the crop raised by the farmers on shares?

Yes, for most of the cotton raised by renters is mortgaged to the land owner or the merchant, and if this cotton got to the warehouse it would be after the speculator bought it.

If half or all the cotton raised was put in the warehouse, how much would this increase the per capita circulation?

Half the crop is one hundred and fifty million dollars and 80 per cent. of this is one hundred and twenty million. There are sixty-five million people, hence you see the per capita would not be increased two dollars.

How much would it take to build, equip and run the warehouses one year?

It would take one-half the value of the entire cotton crop, and we believe it would take two-thirds of it.—Exchange.

Live at the Farm.

A mere book education such as is gleaned from histories, geographies, grammars, etc., may do more to create a distaste than a taste for farm life. The farmer's boy must be educated to a liking for it—to love animals and poultry, to admire the country rather than cities, and to enjoy work not so much for its relations to money or wealth as for the pleasure that work brings. These are many and should be pointed out and contrasted with the cramped and artificial life of the city. The culture of crops, trees, lawns, gardens and hedges can be combined with mental pleasures that strip drudgery of much of its terrors. Just as the drudgery necessary in the fine arts is forgotten in the pleasant thoughts it awakens.—The Ploughman.

He Grew Rich in a Day.

Chicago Herald.

How a man can be as poor as Job's turkey one day and the next be worth $1,000,000 was forcibly illustrated in a story told by A. C. Hunt, Jr., of Laredo, Texas, to a reporter for the Herald yesterday at the Sherman house. Mr. Hunt is son of Ex-Governor Hunt, of Colorado, who is now lying very ill at the Sherman house. "One day back in the early 80's I was with a government surveying party that stopped at Rosita, Col," said young Hunt. The little town had a couple of general merchandise stores and a saloon or two that supplied the mining prospectors who were working the valley which lay between two mountain ranges. It was a bitter winter day when a poor prospector of the name of Bassick came into one of the stores and told the proprietor that his wife and children were starving in a shanty down in the valley; that his supplies of food had run out, and also his money, and asked if he could buy some flour and meat on credit until he could send to relatives in the east for money. The proprietor of the store turned a deaf ear to the entreaties of the poor prospector. With a sad countenance the poor prospector went across the street to the other store and repeated his story. The proprietor, whose name was Allen told poor Bassick that he wouldn't see any man's family starve, and gave him a sack of flour and a side of bacon, and assured him that when that gave out he might call for more. Allen, however, also informed Bassick that he didn't expect that he would receive any pay, for he had already lost a great deal of money in selling provisions on these sympathetic stories from prospectors.

"The very next day Bassick struck a vein of silver on his claim on a little hump mountain in the valley. Bassick knew it was only a matter of time until he would be a millionaire, and he came right into Rosita and gave Allen a promise to turn over to him $50,000 as soon as possible to repay him for the sack of flour side of bacon and the kindness that saved his family from starving. Bassick's claim is now known as 'Horn Silver Mine.' He has taken out $2,000,000 worth of ore, and it is a big mine yet. He gave Allen $50,000 in cash. This money Allen used judiciously, and to-day he owns a big store and is rich, too. The proprietor of the store across the way who refused to aid Bassick, is still a poor man."

The County Printing.

Some time since Mr. George H. Rogers, of Birmingham succeeded in making a contract with the county commissioners of this county for the county printing, such as cannot be done in Scottsboro. The prevailing idea among the commissioners is to get the work done within the state, if possible, and they were under the impression that Mr. Rogers was doing such work in Birmingham. However, the following extract from a letter from the Register in Chancery in Birmingham will throw a different light upon the matter.

"If George H. Rodgers has a book-binding and stationary house here, I know nothing of it.

"My information is, that he simply places any orders that he may get with any house that will take them and allow him the best commission.

"I am also informed that he sends most of his orders to non-resident parties."

It occurs that if the commissioners are going to let out the work, under such circumstances they had as well award the contract to a citizen of the county.—Scottsboro Age.

Time at the Station.

New York Press.

She had yawned six times, looked at the clock four times, and pretended to be asleep three times, but the young editor who was calling upon her was so much in love that he did not observe these manifestations of weariness. At length she said:

"Most newspapers have mottoes, haven't they?"

"Some have."

"Has yours one?"

"Yes."

"What is it?"

"We are here to stay."

"I could have sworn it was something of that kind," she said with a sigh, and the silence resumed.

Age and Widowhood.

The Blount County News has the following marriage notice:

"Married. — Near Reid's Gap, Blount county, Ala., September 27, 1891, by M. M. Russell, Esq., Mr. Isaac G. Albritton to Mrs. Adeline Bailey. The venerable bridegroom has passed the three score and ten milestones and has been a lone widower about three months. The bride was a widow and has attained her 33d year.

Rev. S. M. Adams, president of the State Alliance is canvassing the State for some purpose as yet unannounced. His last address was at Childersburg. It is to be presumed that the purpose of his canvass is too well understood to need be explicitly set forth. He is a candidate for Congress.

Commissioner Kolb has turned over the office of Commissioner of Agriculture to his successor, Mr. Lane. Capt. Kolb will enter at once upon an active canvass of the State in the interest of the Southern Exposition and incidentally or accidentally for Governor. He is without an equal in Alabama for killing two birds with one stone.

Notice.

All parties indebted to the undersigned are respectfully requested to come forward and settle. This means one and all. I am compelled to collect what is due me and cannot extend further indulgence. Please call and settle with me, or Mr. W. H. Wright, my agent. R. EHRMAN.

Merit Wins.

We desire to say that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits,

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India Missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this recipe in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. NOTICE TO NON-RESIDENT.

Alabama Iron and Steel Co., Plaintiffs vs. J. T. Hodge, Defendant.

In Circuit Court, Chilton county, Ala.

Whereas, an attachment was issued in favor of Plaintiffs and against the Defendant in the above stated cause, returnable to the Spring Term, 1891, of the Circuit Court of Chilton county, Alabama, and was levied upon one bay mare about five years old as the property of the Defendant: And it being made known to the court that the said defendant is a non-resident of the State, and his place of residence unknown, it was ordered by the court that said cause be continued to the Fall Term, 1891, of said Circuit Court, and that notice of the issuance of said attachment and levy upon said Defendant's property be given the said J. T. Hodge by publication once a week for three successive weeks in the Chilton View, a newspaper published in Chilton county, and that a copy thereof be sent by mail to the said J. T. Hodge if his place of residence can be ascertained.

Witness my hand this, the 7th day of October, 1891. W. H. FOSHEE, Clerk Circuit Court of Chilton County, Alabama.

Lane have been circulated and signed asking for an appointment to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Mr. J. M. Ponder. Both vacancies will no doubt be filled before the November meeting of the board.

Every farmer in the State should have the State's interest at heart enough to contribute some article from his farm for exhibition at the Great State Fair—all articles returned to you free. Ala. State Fair Oct. 20th to 31st—Birmingham.

The Mobile Register, always the best paper the State affords, contains some good points on its town and we extract these paragraphs:

We are expected to "boost" Mobile in and out of season and not a few of our friends are actually angry with us because we do not lie enough in behalf of our city. We seek consolation in the knowledge of the fact that when one lies too much there will not be much credence for the truth when one desires to tell the truth and is anxious that the truth shall prevail. Aside from moral grounds, therefore, we shall have to continue to disappoint our friends who want us to do their lying.

In the matter of advertisements there is some fault to find with the people also. We do not want any one to place an advertisement in this paper as a favor to us. We claim that we have a good, bona fide circulation here in Mobile and in the surrounding country and that our columns are attentively read, not only by subscribers but by borrowers and fault-finders. We believe that any advertisement placed in a paper of this character, is worth to the advertiser the space it occupies; we give full return for the investment made with us and therefore honors are even.

The first paragraph reminds the VIEW of a goodly number of experiences of its own. For instance, a man whom we never heard of and who is not a patron, recently got into some trouble in Selma and was fined for carrying concealed weapons. He lived in Chilton county and when he returned, it seems that he came back without his revolver. He at once sent us a communication for publication in which he bitterly charged the solicitor who prosecuted him with stealing the weapon. We held the communication and notified the writer that it would be inserted at the regular rates of twenty cents a line over his own signature, provided he would remit at once as in such cases we prefer to collect before the funeral. We havn't heard anything more from him.

The Register's second paragraph is also a reminder. Though we have cut our circulation down to within five hundred which we send to those who are willing to pay for the paper, yet from communications and other means of information which a paper constantly receives from people who want to criticise somebody else, or who have divers grievances to parade, we are convinced that the VIEW has between two and three thousand readers who don't help it any financially. Not they. So wags the world away.

Enough horses now entered to insure to best of races at the Great State Fair. Three good races a day.—Oct., 20th to 31st.—Birmingham.

A Statement Corrected.

EDITOR CHILTON VIEW:

Dear Sir, and Bro.—I notice to-day a statement from your Lily correspondent which is erroneous and liable to injure a first-class institution. Your correspondent sates that: "Prof. Douglass has been engaged to take charge of Prof. Pratt's school at Six Mile. His advanced age rendered it imperative for him to find—a young man into whose hands he could place his charge etc."

That statement besides being erroneous does Prof. Pratt great injustice. What are the facts? Simply these: Prof. Douglass has been employed as a teacher in the Six Mile High School, just that and only. Prof. Pratt is still in charge, and in full control of that excellent institution. Prof. Douglass being merely a teacher in the intermediate department. As I have my information from Prof. Pratt, I know whereof I write.

Please publish in justice to all concerned.

Yours Fraternally,

ALLIANCE TALKS.

VOICE OF THE ORDER FROM ALL SECTIONS.

Items of Interest to Alliancemen Everywhere.

The Oregon (Populistic) Alliance Herald says: "If the Farmers' Alliance had whispered half as often as the newspaper opposition have given out news to that effect, it would long ago have been forgotten, but instead of being forgotten it is being remembered in a very lively way, and the remembrance promises to become even livelier as the presidential contest approaches."

Says the National Economist: "That false charge is being repeated, that the demands of the Alliance have a precedent in the cedula system that was so disastrous in Argentina. The truth is that the money system of that country is modeled almost exactly after the national banking system of the United States, the only paper money being issued on deposited bonds. The cedulas are simply mortgages, usually owned by foreigners, interest of which was guaranteed by the government, and are not the basis for a circulating medium such as the Alliance demands. On the other hand, they are a refinement of alien landlordism, an abuse, the removal of which is imperatively demanded by the order."

AND THEY ARE ALARMED.

The New York Times says business men have been interviewed in that city and they all fear that the Democratic party will make the mistake of favoring free coinage of silver. On which the Progressive Farmer comments as follows: "All we have to say is that no matter what their fears nor what action the parties take in regard to free silver, 'It is going to be done.' If the New York business men can't stand the law, they can go where the law will not reach them. The people are playing the game now and they will continue with more or less success until the 'fears' of the 'business men' of New York are fully realized. So, gentlemen, prepare to move your washing if you can't stand the pressure."

KEEP OUT OF POLITICS.

Every effort is being made to keep the farmers out of politics. It is a criminal offense punishable by slander and billingsgate. The farmers, however, have said out of politics too long; that is what's the matter. They have learned that many of the leaks in their pockets are of a legislative character; that hard times are not so much attributable to a lack of industry and good management on their part as to the fact that class legislation has systematically drawn their surplus into the coffers of the non-producing class. The farmers have done their worst managing by trusting their legislative interests to the care of those not in sympathy with them.—Progressive Farmer.

The New York Herald says: It will be interesting to observe the efforts of the Farmers' Alliance to control its members in their actions. The Alliance began yesterday to send out a million letters asking farmers to hold back their wheat for a great rise, which was confidently predicted. Whether the promise of improvement in prices will be fulfilled remains to be seen, but close observers of the Alliance will be most curious to learn how far the farmers will respect the judgment and authority of the officials whom they have elected. Should the Western piles of wheat suddenly stop, in compliance with the request made, the Alliance may safely be credited with a tremendous grip, for the American farmer is not given to holding back his farm products, no matter how low prices may be.

THE ALLIANCE AND ITS PLATFORM.

It is ridiculous to say that you are a friend to the alliance, but will not endorse its platform. You cannot divide the two, and must accept both together or neither. What would the alliance be without a platform and declaration of principles? It would be but a rope of sand, that must soon fall to pieces. There is nothing in a name, but the aims which an organization is striving represents a great deal. If you cannot endorse the Ocala platform you are not a friend to the alliance, and it is hypocrisy to pose as such. That instrument is the tie that binds our members together, and it demands the goal for which they are striving. You had as well profess to be a friend to the Christian church and deny the divinity of our Savior. If you love the alliance, you must also love our platform. They are one and inseparable.—Southern Alliance Farmer.

HEAVY LYING FOR A MALICIOUS PURPOSE.

It is evident that in the present struggle for political supremacy in this country the partisan papers are determined to stop at no amount of misrepresentation and downright lying that seems necessary to help their side in the controversy. It is one of the purposes of the Alliance movement and of the People's party to bury all traces of the animosity existing between the North and South on account of past differences. And much is being already accomplished in this way by the fraternal coming together of the men of these sections. But the old party papers and politicians are determined to keep alive this prejudice and animosity if it can be done. And they are again fanning the embers most vigorously. It is thought to be the only means of preventing the further growth of this fraternal feeling now promising the speedy heart union of the sections. The Northern papers are representing the men of the South as the intolerant bulldozers they ever were, or are represented to be, and nothing but a strong arm of the law can be depended on to cope with their lawless, vicious inclinations.—Hartford, Conn., Examiner.

A GREAT UPHEAVAL COMING.

A writer in the Boston Globe says: This is a very peculiar country, and it is a very suggestive fact that the rich are getting richer very fast, and the poor either keep along as they are or descend to a lower depth of discomfort and poverty. Now, it stands to reason that a condition of affairs so inequitable, making princes of one and slaves of another can not last. There will come as sure as fate, some great upheaval, and it is the very dread of that upheaval which keeps some, thoughtful men, from discussing the conditions. They hope by shutting their eyes to ignoring facts, to persuade themselves that they don't exist. They come to be quite content with things as they are, and, although they are confident that sooner or later the deluge may come, they don't care. How idiotic it is for the family physician to [illegible] shuttering glance on angry and threatening carbuncle. He can by his plaster conceal it from view. He can by his smooth and oily tongue, "there is no danger." Meanwhile the carbuncle is at work drawing to itself from every section of the system the virus which ultimately will flame fourth, with core inflamation, causing intensest pain and freight with danger. A more sensible physician would treat the carbuncle from the first, and by judicious means bring it along to the point where expert incision would afford permanent relief. It is a very easy thing for us to shut our eyes to the condition of affairs, but why? Surely it isn't wisdom to do so. Common sense says all men are brothers, and when the prosperous class recognize the fraternity, the comradeship, the brotherhood of the unfortunate class, all danger will pass away, the heavens will be clear, and the sun whose beams are for the healing of the nations, will shine upon one as upon the other, and for the best good of both. That time must come. It may not be in my days or in yours, but as certain as the revolutions, as certain as fate, as certain as God himself, there must come a change whereby men will stand more nearly on a level, and when this monstrous difference of millions on the one hand, nothing on the other, will be done away with."

THE OUTLOOK.

Never before in the history of the United States has there been such an onslaught on an organization as is now being made on the Alliance. Almost the entire press outside of the reform press are making a relentless fight against it, both Democratic and Republican. Nearly all the leading politicians on both sides are fighting us. The fight, too, seems to be thoroughly organized, as it is being made about on the same line in every State. The general policy seems to be to secure the services of a few Alliance leaders. Have them to deal out slush, slander, falsehoods and misrepresentations, and then the press passes it around with favorable comments. The question arises, why this onslaught? Why such unanimity in the opposition, and why such desperate means are being resorted to overthrow the order? The answer is clear and plain. It is the first formidable organization that has dared attack directly the Wall street and Lombard money power and endeavor to throttle their relentless grasp on the throat of the toiling masses. This is the issue and no dodging it: The people in open rebellion against the money power and oppression of Wall street. That the opposition is powerfully entrenched behind its millions there is no doubt. But, yet, there is hope. So far no particular inroad has been made into our ranks, but we are steadily gaining ground every day. The press to a great extent has lost its influence over the people, and turncoat politicians have completely played out, and if we can only succeed in getting every farmer and laborer, and every friend of pure and honest Democratic government to look this question squarely in the face, victory will perch upon our banner and our money kings be dethroned of political power. Brethren study this question well and meet it like true and brave soldiers. Every man must be to his post and every sentinel on the watch-tower.—Alliance Echo, (Mexia, Tex.)

A NEW PLAN.

The Alliance Farmer and Rural Messenger, official organ of Virginia State Alliance, gives a full description of the recent change of plan in the business effort of that State. The funds to conduct the business effort have heretofore been raised by a quarterly assessment of ten cents each upon the membership. It will hereafter be run on the "Rochdale" system. The capital is to be furnished by subscription, in shares of $10 each, to be taken by sub-Alliances, and the certificates held for their perpetual use. In describing the detail it says: The goods are to be sold "at a reasonable profit for cash only," there should be a considerable net profit "after paying running expenses and the interest on capital." In the constitution there is a distinction made between these two items, although in truth the "interest on capital" is fairly a part of the "running expenses." Now, what is to be done with the "net profit" expected? Suppose a semi-annual profit of 5 per cent—$2,100 on the capital of $42,000. This would be divided among those dealing with the exchange rateably upon the amount of their business—one-half in money and the other half placed to the customer's account as stock until he has $50 invested, when he may draw his full rebate, as well as interest on his stock, (the constitution says "not to exceed 6 per cent") but whatever the rate may be, all shareholders will receive the same per centage. So of the 5 per cent divided, the man or woman who had dealt with the exchange or one of its branches, to the amount of $200 in groceries, dry goods, fertilizers, or other commodities, would be entitled to a rebate of $10, of which $5 to be paid in cash, and $5 to his or her credit as stock bearing interest. The object of this latter provision is to give each one a permanent interest through joint ownership in the system. And the design throughout is to furnish goods at actual cost, deducting necessary expenses, such as salaries of agents, clerks, porters, and store rents, as well as interest on working capital, properly a part of the necessary expenses, as said before.

THE ALLIANCE GREATER THAN ITS LEADERS.

The Farmers' Advocate, Charleston, Va., says: "The Farmers' Alliance, as the great farmers' organization that is awakening so much alarm in political circles, is infinitely greater than any one or a dozen men in it. There is not an individual member enrolled on its list of membership, from the president down, that would not be given to understand by evidence most unmistakable that his service is only necessary in so far as his utterances and influence harmonizes with the demands of the united organization. No man, we care not who he is, or what has been his past services, can deviate a hair's breadth from the course mapped out, but what he is checked by a reminder that the path in which he is to walk is as straight and narrow as the way to glory, and the admonition, "walk thou in it," accompanies the reminder. There is no instance now recorded where any one man or set of men who attempted to run the machine to suit his or their own personal ambition but what he or they have come to grief. If this is so of those within the ranks, it is also eminently true of those without, and has been already forcibly illustrated. This is one of the most significant facts which goes to make up the grand aggregate of testimony that the Alliance is most thoroughly organized, and is a unit in its conception of the evils against which it is contending, and thoroughly in harmony as to the remedies necessary to correct existing abuses. No outside issues seem to disturb or distract. They have their eyes and minds steadfastly fixed upon the goal they have set out to reach. Ridicule, sophistry, abuse or appeal are equally vain. They are moving as an avalanche, and gathering in volume of members as they move, and defeat and disaster awaits every issue or policy which impedes their advance. One year ago politicians scorned and ridiculed it; one year hence they will tremble and quake as they are scattered like chaff in the current which accompanies it. The cloud is gathering; the storm is approaching. Its bursting will not have been without warning. We are an army of men every one of which is a leader, and the singleness and oneness of purpose quiets discord and smothers jealousies.

FIGHTING IN GUATEMALA.

An Unsuccessful Attempt to Overthrow Barrillas.

A dispatch of Tuesday from the City of Mexico says a revolution has been precipitated in the republic of Guatemala, which will unquestionably become general. A gentleman who left the city of Guatemala on the morning of the 16th instant, and who has just reached the city on horseback from the Mexican port of Acapulco, brings the information that an outbreak occurred in Guatemala city on the 16th instant, and was still in progress when he left. According to his story the people of that city were celebrating the anniversary of their national holiday. It appears that President Barrillas had personally appointed the orators of the day. To this the masses took exception, and when the orators took the rostrum it was the signal for a storm of stones, which set them to flight, they being chased across the big plaza by a howling mob, which shouted at the top of their voices: "Down with the government." "Down with despotism and tyranny; die Barrillas."

STONED AT EVERY STEP.

Exciting scenes followed, and every known liberal or partisan was driven from the plaza, being soundly stoned at every step. After that the masses elected their orators, and most violent and incendiary speeches followed. News of the riot spread rapidly, and soon Barillas threw a battalion of infantry into the large square for the purpose of dispersing the mob. They, with fixed bayonets, attempted to carry the plaza by assault. They were met with a shower of stones and bullets from revolvers. This unexpected action of the mob put them to ignominious flight, leaving many of their number on the plaza. The uproar was something to be long remembered. Members of the mob shouted: "Let's storm the national palace and kill Barrillas and restore the republican form of government. Guatamala should not be ruled by dictators. Plundering of the national treasury must cease."

GUARDING BARRILLAS'S RESIDENCE.

Barrillas then ordered the artillery into the plaza and the infantry and two cannon to guard his residence. When the guns were turned on the mob there was a general dispersing of them, though they discharged their revolvers at the artillerymen.

CABLE COMMUNICATIONS INTERCEPTED.

It is stated that cable communications with Guatemala has been intercepted. At 5 o'clock Monday afternoon, the American received a special dispatch from Newton, on the line between Guatemala and Mexico. A telegram was delivered to the Newton telegraph office by a special carrier and it brings the information that Barillas is master of the situation, he having put down the revolution after three days' hard fighting. The revolt was participated in by Montufar, son of one of the candidates for the presidency, who is a strong partisan of Barrillas. In attempting to make political capital of independence day, the mob threw him and his friends from the platform in the main plaza pelting them with stones until they found shelter in a neighboring house. From that time until the night of the 18th there was street fighting, sometimes the mobs being in control of the city, and at other times the army. The arrival of the troops from adjoining districts eventually restored Barrillas to power, and the city is thoroughly infested with soldiers. Martial law has been declared.

CONVICTS FRUSTRATED

In a Dastardly Plot to Hang a Jailor.

A Birmingham, Ala., dispatch says: W. F. Bentley, John Bentley, W. S. Cagle, Harvey Thomas, James Cross and B. Tetherow are a gang of robbers, burglars and train wreckers who now repose in Gadsden jail under sentence to the penitentiary. As soon as they have served out their sentence the United States government is ready for them with an indictement for wrecking a mail car near Springville. Recently they formed a plot to escape, and on Monday morning when Jailer B. F. Milton entered the corridor and unlocked their cells to turn them out for the day they leaped on him. Milton managed to throw the outer door keys out of the window and drew his knife with which he cut two of them. But they overcame him, tied a rope around his neck and were in the act of hanging him when a city policeman appeared. He entered the jail, ordered the men back to their cells and released Milton in the nick of time.

THE RATE FIXED

For Tourists Who Spend The Winter in Florida.

An important meeting of railway general passenger agents was held at Cincinnati Tuesday. Twenty-two passenger agents were present, each representing a road of the central traffic territory and of territory south of the Ohio river. The meeting was harmonious and fruitful. Winter tourists to Florida were fixed at 3 cents a mile both ways, from the Ohio river, to which will be added 80 per cent of the double local rates from points on the lines north of the Ohio river. The round trip to Jacksonville, Fla., was fixed as follows: From Cincinnati, $34; from Evansville, $33.40; from Louisville, $32; from St. Louis, $39; from Chicago, $45; from Indianapolis, $38.

A PECULIAR DECISION.

A Case Where Cash Alone Counts.

A Kountze, Texas, special to the New Orleans Picayune has the following: J. D. Bradley, ex-county treasurer, has been on trial charged with misappropriating funds of the county. Judge Hightower ordered the jury to acquit him, charging that the legal definition of money is legal tender coin, and that bonds or receipts are not money.

Judge Hightower is one of the state's brightest jurists, holds that no official can be indicted for embezzlement under present state laws unless he steals actual cash.

BOULANGER SUICIDES

To Hide His Impecuniosity and Drown His Sorrows.

General Boulanger, the French diplomat, who at one time played a most important role in the political affairs of France, suicided Tuesday in the cemetery at Ixelles, near Brussels. Following is the General's last message written the day before his death. In it the causes which led to his unceremonious taking off are explained:

BOULANGER'S LAST MESSAGE.

This is my political testament. It is my desire that it be published after my death. I shall kill myself tomorrow. I am convinced of the future of the party of which I have given my name. I cannot bear the frightful misfortune which befell me two and a half months ago. I have tried to get the better of it, but have not succeeded. I am persuaded that my followers are so devoted and so numerous that they will bear me no anger for disappearing on account of a sorrow so great that all work has become impossible to me. Let them remember the maxim, "uno avulso non deficit alter," and may they continue them to act against those who, in scorn of all laws, forced me to die far from my country.

Tomorrow I shall be a dead man. Today I have done nothing to reproach myself with. All my life I have done my duty and nothing but my duty. My death is no shame to myself, but it is a shame for my proscribers; those who sought to brand a loyal soldier by the judgment of a political tribunal. I desire to recall the fact that I have many times offered to constitute myself a prisoner if they would accord me common law judges. This the holders of power have always refused. Thus acquittal was not possible. In quitting life I have but one regret—that I have not died on the field of battle fighting for my country. That country at least will permit one of its children, at the moment of returning into nothingness, to recall himself to the memory of all lovers of LaPatrie. Vive la France! vive la republique!

Done and signed under my hand on the eve of the day of my death.

EARNEST BOULANGER.

A Paris cablegram of Thursday says: Mme. Boulanger, wife of General Boulanger, who is living at Versailles, was overcome with grief when informed of her husband's tragic death in the cemetery at Ixelles, near Brussels. She fainted twice within a short time after hearing the sad news, and is at present very much depressed in spirits.

WHAT THE PRESS SAYS.

The fact that the suicide of Boulanger made no impression upon European bourses, indicates the low ebb of the general's influence. The London Times, in commenting on the suicide of Boulanger says: "Boulanger cleared the air of French politics. If the republic is again menaced, the danger will come from more upright and manly aspirants for power than the Orleanist of Bonapartist intriguers, who figure in "coulisses du Boulangiste."

The Vienna correspondent of the London Standard says: Boulanger's suicide is the subject of conversation everywhere. His fate is compared with Balmaceda, which probably suggested it. Characteristic stories are in circulation about his devices to hide his impecuniosity. Many knowing his circumstances anticipated that such would be his end.

The Paris correspondent of the Times says: "Boulanger's only excuse is, that being once commonplace and sincere, he served without suspicion as an instrument of others. The irretrievable depth of his fate shows that France, henceforward mistress of her destinies, is no longer likely to take upon herself a master. With his corpse will be buried the latest personification of that execrable race known as the saviors of society.

A cablegram of Thursday from Brussels says: It has been decided that the funeral of Boulanger will take place Saturday afternoon. Henri Rochefort will attend the funeral, which will be a purely civil ceremony. The clergy, under instructions of the archbishop of Malines, have finally and definitely refused to officiate at the interment of the general's remains.

RYAN CASE SETTLED.

The Goods Bought by Claflin & Co., of New York.

At Atlanta, Ga., Tuesday afternoon, the Ryan receivership case was virtually settled by Judge Clarke accepting the bid made by the H. B. Claflin Company, of New York. The bid is as follows:

IN FULTON SUPERIOR COURT, Sept. 29, 1891.—To Charles S. Kingsberry, Receiver: The H. B. Claflin Company hereby modify the bid for the stock and fixtures of Stephen A. Ryan, formerly made by said company under the order of the court in the premises and as amended bills as follows:

1. For all and each the parcels of goods claimed by the parties named in the attached exhibit marked "A," the amount for each parcel set opposite each claim, being 65 per cent of the invoice value of such goods, and aggregating the sum of $115,668.13.

2. And for the balance of the entire stock, goods and chattels, including fixtures as inventoried by you as receiver, and including all things included in said inventory, the further sum of $68,123.87. This bid aggregates $183,792, and is made as an entirety composed of the two items.

3. In addition thereto, said company will contribute $2,500 as its proportion of the expenses of administering the estate in your hands, this to be in full of the liability of this company on that account.

4. And if the foregoing bid is accepted, said company bids itself hereby not to attempt thereafter to enforce payment of the note and mortgage of Stephen A. Ryan to said company, of date May 25th, 1891, and amounting to $125,108, principal, interest and attorney's fees, against said Stephen A. Ryan, or any party, complainant or defendant, in said case, but will deliver up the same to be cancelled.

WHAT WILL BE THE RESULT?

Many of the Atlanta merchants believe that just as soon as Mr. Claflin gets possession of the goods he will put Mr. Ryan in charge, and the store will be in full blast in less than two weeks. They do not like the prospect, some of them going so far as to express the fear that the reopening of Mr. Ryan's establishment will injure them, if he conducts the business as he carried it on before the crash came. Most of the clerks, bookkeepers, floor walkers, window dressers and cash boys, who were employed in the Ryan store, are anxiously awaiting its reopening. They are ready to respond to a summons at very short notice.

THE tobacco crop of Tennessee is the largest that has been known for many years. It was the intention to hold a grand Confederate reunion at Carthville, Tenn., on October 1, to raise funds for the erection of a Confederate monument, but the farmers were so busy with the tobacco crop that it was decided to postpone it until October 15.

Avoid This Step!

She is the girl who takes you off in one corner and tells you things that you wouldn't repeat to your mother.

She is the girl who is anxious to have you join a party which is to be "a dead secret," and at which, because people are free and easy, you are uncomfortable and wish you were at home.

She is the girl who tries to induce you "just for fun" to smoke a cigarette or to take a glass of wine, and you don't know, and possibly she doesn't, that many of the sinners to-day committed their first sins "just for fun."

She is the girl who persuades you that to stay at home and care and love your own, to help mother and to have your pleasures at home and where the home people can see them, is stupid and tiresome, and that spending the afternoon walking up and down the street, looking at the windows and the people, is "just delightful."

She is the girl who persuades you that slang is witty, that a loud dress that attracts attention is "stylish," and that your own simple gowns are dowdy and undesirable. She doesn't know, nor do you, how many women have gone to destruction because of their love for fine clothes.

She is the girl who persuades you that to be on very familiar terms with three or four young men is an evidence of your charms and fascination, instead of being, as it is, an outward visible sign of your perfect folly.

A Strange Birthmark

A curious story comes from Salt Lake City which is attracting much comment from friends and acquaintances of Policeman Charles F. Wanless, shot and killed by Joseph A. Barnes, Sept. 18, 1890, and may furnish medical men another subject for discussion. Barnes was having a quarrel with his wife, which the officer attempted to stop. Barnes fired, and the bullet passed through Wanless' heart, leaving a jagged bullet hole in the breast.

A married sister of the dead officer was telegraphed and came to the funeral from her home in Salt Lake. She was much affected by the tragedy, and took the loss of her brother to heart. In a short time she returned home. About three months ago, as the report is heard here by friends of the dead officer, his sister gave birth to a boy perfectly formed, but with a red birth mark over the heart of the exact shape and appearance of the wound made in Wanless' breast by the bullet from Barnes' pistol.—Denver News.

To Take Off a Tight Ring.

Finger rings that are worn constantly often become too tight, and when from some cause or other it is necessary to remove them the task becomes difficult and in some cases painful. A very good way to take a tight ring from a finger is to put a thread of soft white silk in a needle, and pass the needle under the ring. Pull one end of the silk upward with the hand, and twist the remaining silk around the finger several times until it reaches the nail. Then pull on the other thread, and the ring will slip off very easily.—Exchange.

Do You See the Moral?

A French publisher who had heard of young Balzac as likely to do well went to call on him with the intention of giving him 3,000 francs for a novel. Upon finding he lived in an obscure part of the town, however, he determined to reduce this sum to 2,000 francs. On arriving at the house and discovering he lived on the fourth floor it struck him that 1,500 francs would be ample; but on reaching his attic and finding him eating a penny roll he offered but 300 francs, with which he bought "La Derniere Fee."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Trying to Give Away a Baby Carriage.

"I suppose," said a Brooklyn woman yesterday, "that it was the easiest thing possible to give away an article of positive use and value, but I find it is not. I own a perfectly good baby carriage, for which my big 4-year-old baby has no longer the slightest need, and for six weeks I have been trying to bestow it as a gift upon somebody. I could have sent it direct to some hospital or day nursery, but I had a fancy I should like to pick out personally some poor mother who would be delighted with such a windfall. But I have not been able to find her. I began with the sister of my nurse, the wife of a hard working mechanic, but I was told she had already secured and was paying a dollar a week upon 'a fine carriage with blue plush and a satin parasol.'

"A friend's washerwoman came and looked at it and decided it was too large to stand in her hallway, so she continues to carry her big baby to and from the person she leaves him with while she is out at work. I spoke to a physician who had, I know, a considerable charity practice, and he told me after a fortnight's interval that his offer of the carriage to four different poor and working mothers had aroused no enthusiasm. Every one of them expected to have 'a new one before the summer.' I called in a woman from the street who was carrying a baby of weight seemingly beyond her strength.

"She looked it over without ardor, but finally said she would take it and would come back for it in the afternoon. I never saw her again. The effort now is becoming interesting, and I shall continue it until the person who will be thoroughly glad to own the carriage is encountered. She must exist somewhere in this big city."—New York Times.

Old Lady—"Yes, I heard folks a talkin' 'bout that in a street car, an' I went right to work an' tried it, but t'want no use."

"Indeed! Did you get a machine?"

"No, I had one in the garret. Young Dr. Nocash left it when he went off without payin' his board. I fetched it down an' put one o' the sponges in the dishpan an' the other on the hired girl, and then I turned the crank, but she just jumped an' howled an' broke more dishes than the hull invention was worth."—New York Weekly.

"August Flower"

For two years I suffered terribly with stomach trouble, and was for all that time under treatment by a physician. He finally, after trying everything, said stomach was about worn out, and that I would have to cease eating solid food for a time at least. I was so weak that I could not work. Finally on the recommendation of a friend who had used your preparations with beneficial results, I procured a bottle of August Flower, and commenced using it. It seemed to do me good at once. I gained in strength and flesh rapidly; my appetite became good, and I suffered no bad effects from what I ate. I feel now like a new man, and consider that August Flower has entirely cured me of Dyspepsia in its worst form. JAMES E. DEDERICK, Saugerties, New York.

"The baby is dead."

That was the sad telegram that came to us from far away where one of our boys is living.

It saddened the household, for we had never seen the child nor the mother, and they were to come and visit us next month, and expected to be so happy. There is trouble that is trouble—grief that is grief. The first child, and old enough to have twined around the young mother's heart and absorb d her very life. The father can love, too, and caress and feel a father's pride, and he can weep and feel desolate. Time will temper his grief, but a mother never ceases to lament the death of her first-born child.

It has been more than thirty years since we lost one, but the little garments that he wore are hidden away somewhere, and sometimes I see the mother fondling them as they lie in the old trunk—the trunk that holds her heart's best treasures. It was Sterne who said "God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb," and so in time the young mother's grief will be sweeter than it is sad, and she will rise from it with a hope and a trust that she never knew before. A child in heaven is a tie that cannot be broken—it is not lost—it is saved. But still the pang of separation is very crushing to the parent's heart. How the world shrinks up; how mean and insignificant are all its pleasures. I have felt that way, and been comforted with the feeling, and so I know has every parent who has lost a child.

Well, I suppose I must answer my friend, Colonel Dawson, for he is a friend and a Georgian, and was kind to me when I last visited New York, where he lives. He complains in the last number of The Sunny South that I have given Montgomery as the author of that beautiful hymn:

Prayer is the soul's sincere desire,
Utter'd or unexpressed.

And writes two columns in proof that his mother wrote it. He says that he published the same declaration in the Chicago Current in 1887. I did not see that; nobody down south saw it. What is "current" in Chicago is not very current here, and so I think that is excuse enough. The hymn has been set down to Montgomery for fifty years or more without question. It is in every hymn book of every Christian denomination. It is in every edition of Montgomery's works that I have ever seen. I have a copy before me, published in Edinburg in 1860, which gives high verses to the hymn. John Bartlett's standard work on "Familiar Quotations" is now in the sixth edition, and quotes the hymn from Montgomery. W. Davenport Adams, another standard author on English literature, give the same authorship. And so Colonel Dawson has no good reason for requesting me "to be more careful in the future about coddling and abetting British marauders of the property of American genius." I am sure that no American, and certainly no Southerner, desires to claim for the claim of Montgomery, but rather would take both pride and comfort in seeing Mrs. Dawson's authorship established. It seems that Mrs. Dawson died in 1819, in Cynthiana, Ky., and left her poetical manuscripts in possession of a friend. Among them was found this hymn of ten verses in her own handwriting. It seems further that in 1819 Montgomery published a volume of his own poems and included this one, which he marked "Anon." How it got into Mr. Montgomery's possession is not explained.

But enough of this. It is sufficient for me to know that it is the most beautiful hymn and to believe that Mrs. Dawson and Mr. Montgomery are both in heaven.

And now comes another friend and gently chides me for setting down John Wesley as a Methodist. He asserts that John and Charles Wesley maintained to the last their connection with and allegiance to the Church of England, and that they were never deposed from it. No doubt that is true—but still they were the founders of Methodism. The Established church of England was closed against them. They and their followers formed a society, and it was called the Methodist society. They appointed laymen to preach and assigned them circuits. In 1735 John came to Georgia as a missionary with General Oglethorpe, and returned to England in 1738 and connected himself with the Moravians. He says in his autobiography that he never was converted until a quarter before 9 o'clock on Wednesday night, 24th of May, 1738. In 1744 he attempted to preach at Canterbury and was forbidden by the magistrates. In 1784 he assumed the office of bishop, and in 1784 ordained Rev. Thomas Coke bishop of America. Coke came over immediately and established the Methodist Episcopal church. Mr. Wesley abridged the English liturgy—prepared his own collection of hymns and wrote his own discipline. If, with all these departures from church government and church control, Mr. Wesley chose to call himself an Episcopalian, it was his privilege to do so, but hardly anybody would so classify him. I do not say that the treatment by the Church of England was wrong or unreasonable, considering his independence and defection, but nevertheless it is such that the Episcopal church cannot claim him with propriety. He is the common property of the Christian world.

Now, let me say that these letters from friends known or unknown are always welcome. Of course I make mistakes and am glad to be reminded, for it provokes more careful investigation. There is no comfort that costs less and is worth so much as letter writing. I get a good letter today from an old cousin that I have not seen for forty years, and then you will wish you had written me a letter yesterday. Every boy would be happy to get a letter from his father. Children, very dear, you write to me. Don't hesitate—write often—write regularly—write as you would talk if you were sitting by my side. Don't hesitate because you can't write a long letter. Just say you are well and happy, and that there is no letter, and that you are glad to hear from me. Tell me how everybody does and how the good mother is getting along. Tell me about the children—their sayings and doings—their little troubles and their joys. Tell me about the old folks at home. How they look and how they are getting along. Tell me if you are ready to go to work, and if you have been kindly received and treated. How you like your employer and his family. Tell me if he is in his eightieth year, and his wife the same, and they are hale and hearty and happy, and he quotes "John Anderson my Jo," and writes without glasses and says his love for old friends grows purer and stronger as the years roll on. He writes me periodically and is always cheerfully and I put his letters among my treasures. These letters for home and heart are the only compensation for absence, for separation of kindred and friends. Solomon felt it when he said, "As cold water is to a thirsty soul so is good news from a far country." Then write to your parents, children—write to your brothers and sisters—write often, write thoughtfully. Don't write hurriedly and carelessly like it was something disagreeable that had to be done—but take pains both in the manner and the matter—write a letter that is worth the postage and will do to read more than once. There is no better evidence of good conduct and good principles than the affectionate and carefully written letters that a school girl or a college boy sends home to the parents once a week.—BILL ARP, in Atlanta Constitution.

TRADE REVIEW.

Outlook of Business as Reported by Dun & Co.

Dun's review of trade for week ended October 3d, says: Business failures occurring throughout the country during the week number, for the United States, 201; Canada, 29; a total of 230, against 344 last week. The week brought the expected reaction in stock, with the passage of dividend by the Missouri Pacific, and some troubles among western roads; but in the business of the country no reaction appears, nor are there signs of discouragement. In very many cases the farmers will realize for their wheat grown this year more than the entire cost of their farms. Unseasonably hot weather has for the time retarded some trades, but a change is already noticed. It is fortunate for the country that the apprehension of a financial difficulty this fall has powerfully restrained the speculative tendency. Tobacco has risen threeto eight cents in the Connecticut valley, and producers are realizing large profits. Sales of dry goods are large in the aggregate, but in lightweights far below last year's. Cotton goods are a little less active, but print cloths firm at 3 cents, and of prints some styles are an eighth or quarter higher. Sales of wool at different markets are not 3 per cent below those of last year thus far.

Boston reports a closer money market and satisfactory trade, especially in dry goods since the cooler weather came. At Philadelphia money is in fair demand, building is more active and improvement is seen in all lines of dry goods and clothing, though there is complaint in these, as in other branches of trade, of slow collections. At Baltimore the shoe trade exceeds last year's. At all points reporting at the south trade is improving except at Savannah, where the great strike suspends the movement of cotton.

In spite of several more circulars advising the farmers to hold their wheat, the price had declined about 1 cent. Corn has advanced 2 cents and oats 1¼, and while cotton is unchanged in price, pork products have changed but a trifle, and coffee and oil are a little lower. There is more perplexity than usual regarding yield of cotton, but most conservative estimates conclude that a large decrease in product is probable, making a market for heavy stocks, which were brought over from last year.

Imports of merchandise, though smaller than a year ago, when the movement was exceptional, are quite large, and exports from New York for the past two weeks are nearly equal to those of last year. Railroad earnings exceed last year, as do exchanges at various clearing houses outside of New York, though but slightly, and there are as yet no symptoms of the artificial monetary pressure which some have apprehended.

THE CARRIAGES UPSET

And their Occupants Fearfully Used Up.

A dispatch from DesMoines, Io., says: A series of frightful accidents occurred in a funeral procession at Altoona, Monday, in which one man was killed outright, four other persons fatally injured and a score of people bruised and fractured. A procession of forty carriages was following the remains of Nichols Hemstreet from the church to the cemetery, located some distance out of town. While the procession was winding down a hill, a team in the rear became frightened at a steam threshing machine, and started to run. The road was narrow, and the runaway horses ran into and upset a dozen of carriages in front of them, breaking them into splinters, and scattering the occupants broadcast. A panic ensued as other teams ran away. Men and women jumped out of carriages only to be trampled on by runaway teams. When quiet was restored it was found that Edwin Drestell, of Altoona, was killed; Joseph Perdue, telegraph operator, from Grinnell, internally injured, and cannot live; Mrs. J. O Mason, aged seventy-six, leg broken in two places and otherwise injured, not expected to live; F. S. Sayre, skull fractured, cannot live; Mrs. F. C. Lane, of Newton, so badly frightened that there is believed to be no chance for recovery. Among others badly injured were Mrs. James Parker and Mrs. Isaac Parker, both of Altoona. Fully twenty others were more or less injured.

ALABAMA BRIEFS.

Newsy Notes Paragraphically Presented.

The grand jury of Morengo county, found seventy-nine true bills, of which seven were for murder, one for rape, one for arson, thirty for minor felonies and the balance for misdemeanors.

The supreme court has fixed the dates for the various divisions and for the calling of Jefferson county. This county will be called by the court on November 23 and December 5. A good deal more time is required for Jefferson than for any other county in the state, and special concessions are made to her in the matter of time.

Lorenzo M. Wilson died at Mobile, Wednesday, aged eighty-two years. He was a native of Maryland and came here in 1836, and became prominent in local business affairs. He was until consolidation with the Louisville and Nashville railroad, vice president and general manager of the Mobile and Montgomery railroad.

The county fair, held at Double Springs, under the auspices of the Winston County Agricultural Society, was, considering it was the first thing of the kind ever attempted in the county, quite a success. Some good stock was on exhibition and much farm produce. The members of the Agricultural Society are enthused over their first attempt to promote a spirit of emulation among their brother farmers of the county, and will prepare for a more elaborate exhibition next year.

At a meeting of railroad officials, consisting of Capt. E. E. Tyler, of the Western of Alabama; Dan Curran, of the Montgomery and Eufaula; J. J. McKinney, of the Mobile and Montgomery, and the Alabama Midland people, with Capt. McClintock, manager of the Car Service association of Birmingham, a car service association for Montgomery was organized under the name of the Car Service Association of Alabama, taking in all existing and hereafter to be formed similar associations in the state to take effect in a few days.

The Alabama oyster law test case was decided by Judge Semmes in habeas corpus proceedings several days ago at Mobile. The test was made to see whether the new law, forbidding the shipment of oysters in the shell out of the state at certain seasons and by rail only, would stand. The judge decides that a prohibition of this character is unconstitutional as a violation of the freedom of interstate commerce. The case will be appealed. The case was brought about by the action of the agents of Mississippi canneries dependent upon the Alabama oyster reefs for their supplies, and which have been shut off from Alabama reefs since the law was passed last spring.

A Talladega correspondent says: One of the most gratifying occurrences lately was the full settlement by the Birmingham and Atlantic railroad of all claims against them. They were behind as much as three months with some of their employes, and on account of stringency in money matters had been unable to settle. Several days ago, W. H. Skaggs and D. M. Rogers went to New York and the consequence was, on their return, that all creditors were requested to present their claims and receive their money. This road is supposed to be in fine shape now to proceed successfully, and will build some extensions which have been contemplated.

An Important Decision.

The attention of the circuit court at Columbiana during the entire past week, was occupied with the trial in the case of Frank Nelson, Jr., against the Shelby Manufacturing and Improvement company. This is one of the most important cases that has been tried in this court for many years, and involves the validity of all the land sales made by the Shelby Manufacturing and Improvement company at their sale in April, 1890, when about $200,000 worth of property was sold. The purchasers claim that the sales are void under the statute of frauds, and also because of representations made by the president of the company as to the purposes and policy of the company looking to the development of the city. The present suits were brought to recover the one-third of the purchase money paid at the time of the sale, amounting to about $75,000. The suit has been hotly contested, and the trial has excited great interest, as the case was regarded in the nature of a test case. The trial resulted in a verdict for the defendant.

The Contest Decided.

The Supreme Court of Alabama has decided the protracted contest for the office of commissioner of agriculture, which has engaged the attention of the people of the state since the first of September. Three of the five judges, Chief Justice Stone and Associate Justices Clopton and Walker, hold, in an elaborate opinion, that the act of February 18, 1891, did not repeal section 180 of the code, which gives the governor power to appoint and could not repeal said section until the general assembly of August, 1892, as fixed by the act, and that the appointment of Mr. Lane to the office is authoritive and valid. The able opinion of these learned jurists refers incidentally to the inconvenience and expense which would be entailed upon the people of the state by a special election and argues that the law of the Code and the act of the 18th of February, 1891, were not in conflict, and, therefore, that both were operative at the expiration of the term of the incumbent, September 1, 1891. Of course this settles the contest as to the possession of the office and the law of the case. The question as to the right of the governor to appoint in this instance is adjudicated, and the decision is final. The decision of the judicial majority reverses the decision of the lower court and remands the cause to be tried again before Judge Randolph, but the trial of the cause will only be formal, as the decision of the court of last resort has settled the law of the case. The opinions, after days' of study and consultation, are as strong and exhaustive as any ever delivered from the bench of any state, and both agree in holding that the office was vacant from September 1, 1891. The opinion of the two distinguished associate justices, McClelland and Coleman, is also elaborate and able and criticises in some particulars the binding opinion of their distinguished associates. They hold with Judge Randolph, before whom the case was first tried, that the act of February 18, 1891, repealed section 180 of the code, leaving the office elective at the time of the first vacancy, and that the governor should have ordered a special election to fill the vacancy, under subdivision 4 of the section of the code which provides for special elections. They further hold that the governor had no authority to appoint and that the appointment of Mr. Lane was not authorized by law. In support of their position, they cite principles, alleged to be settled, that where a statute is clear and unambiguous in its terms, it must be construed by its language, regardless of inconveniences and absurdities which may arise from such construction, and that the power and duty of the governor to order a special election is clearly set forth in the code. Hence they argue that the whole question should have been remanded to the people at the proper time as provided, in their opinion, by the act of February 18, 1891. Such in brief is the outcome of the great Lane-Kolb contest for the office of commissioner of agriculture, which has agitated the people of the state for the past thirty days.

THE DAVIS STATUE

Is Finally Accepted by the Committee.

A Jackson, Miss., dispatch says: The committee appointed to pass on the acceptance of the marble statue of Hon. Jefferson Davis, for the vestibule of the monument of this city, on Tuesday finally decided, by a vote of fifteen to seven, five not voting, to accept the same. The association accepted this decission and paid the contractor in full for the monument. The statue had been previously placed on its pedestal in the monument by the contractor, there being no ceremony attending the same, nor will there be any, as the ceremonies were virtually had when the monument was unveiled on June 28, last. The reason the statue was not accepted on arrival was because many thought it was not a good likeness of Mr. Davis. Since the contractor has put it into position, however, and cleaned it up, the resemblance to him is much greater than at first. He is represented standing delivering a speech with one hand extended. The pose is graceful, and the work is a magnificent piece of sculpture.

RUSSIA'S FAMINE

Threatens Revolution---Terrible Stories of Distress.

Cable advices from Russia received at Boston, Tuesday say that entire states are being deserted on account of the famine. They also assert that a new law has been made forbidding the sowing of seed this fall, so that the acreage next year will not be sufficient for the home supply, still less for export. So great is the distress that the people have been driven to pillaging each other, first setting fire to villages and then robbing the inhabitants. The distress is a greater menace to the government than all the efforts of the nihilists. The famine may cause a revolution where the love of liberty has failed. Aid is being sent in by Holland Jews and nihilist societies of Armenia. The latter have sent $4,200.

With the close of hostilities in Chili the United States trade with that country has been resumed. South American steamers will now land as all the Chilian ports.

"Savin' Mother."

The farmer sat in his easy chair,
Between the fire and the lamplight's glare,
His face was ruddy and full and fair.
His three small boys in the chimney nook
Conned the lines of a picture book.
His wife, the pride of his home and heart,
Baked the biscuit and made the tart,
Laid the table and steeped the tea,
Deftly, swiftly, silently.
Tired and weary and weak and faint,
She bore her trials without complaint,
Like many another household saint,—
Content, all selfish bliss above,
In the patient ministry of love.

At last, between the clouds of smoke
"There's taxes to raise, an' int'rest to pay,
And ef there should come a rainy day,
'Twould be mighty handy, I'm boun' to say,
T' have sumpthin' put by. For folks must die,
An' there's funeral bills, and gravestuns to buy,—
Enough to swamp a man, purty nigh.
Besides, there's Edward and Dick and Joe
To be provided for when we go.
So 'f I was you, I'll tell you what I'd du:
I'd be savin' of wood 's ever I could;
Extra fire don't du any good;
I'd be savin' of soap, an' savin' of fle,
And run up some candles once in a while;
I'd be rather sparin' of coffee an' tea,
For sugar is high,
And all to buy.
And cider is good enough for me.
I'd be kind o' careful about my clo'es,
And look out sharp how the money goes;
Extra trimmin'
'S the bane of women.
"I'd sell off the best of the cheese and honey,
And eggs is as good, nigh about, 's the money.
And as to the carpet you wanted new,
I guess we can make the old one du;
And as for the washer an' sewing machine,
Them smooth-tongued agents, so pesky mean,
You'd better git rid of 'm slick and clean.
What du they know about women's work?
Du they calkilate women was born to shirk?"

Dick and Edward and little Joe
Sat in the corner in a row,
They saw the patient mother go
On ceaseless errands to and fro;
They saw that her form was bent and thin,
Her temples gray, her cheeks sunk in;
They saw the quiver of lip and chin;
And then, with a warmth he could not smother,
Outspoke the youngest, frailest brother:
"You talk of savin' wood and lie
An' tea an' sugar, all the while,
But you never talk of savin' mother!"

SAVED BY A DRESS.

Miss Callie McGee of America had an experience a short time ago that she will not forget and in which she showed rare courage and presence of mind in the face of the greatest danger.

America is a small hamlet situated in Lee County, in the wilds of Eastern Kentucky, and consists of two dwelling houses, a country store and postoffice.

Miss Callie had been teaching school in the "Bear Creek" district, which lies on the waters of Bear Creek. In going to and returning from school each week she is obliged to pass over Bear Wallow Mountain—so called by the early settlers on account of the great number of bears that formerly made it a resting-place in their migrations from the Chimney Mountains to the Cumberland. For several years past, however, no bears have been seen, and the inhabitants have long ceased to apprehend any danger from these animals. One Saturday Miss Callie started for her home, for the purpose of passing the Sabbath with her mother. She was accompanied by her little niece, who is only three years old.

The road between Bear Creek Valley and America is lonely even for a mountain road, and from the base of the mountain on the one side to the foot on the other—a distance of three miles—there are no signs of human habitation. While slowly climbing the mountain, on the further side from this place, the child trampled upon a sharp thorn, and, childlike, she screamed in her agony. While Miss Callie was trying to pacify her she was suddenly startled by a rustling of the bushes at one side of the road, and upon looking around discovered a large black bear stepping slowly and cautiously into the road about forty yards in her rear.

For a moment Miss McGee stood gazing at the bear, too terrified to seek safety. Then, catching up the child in her arms, she fled rapidly up the steep mountain side. Casting a terrified glance backward over her shoulder, she was appalled to see the bear break into a lumbering gallop and start in pursuit. The child, frightened at the unusual actions of her aunt, was screaming at the top of its voice, and the bear apparently redoubled his efforts to reach them. Panting and gasping for breath, she at length reached the top of the mountain almost exhausted, and upon looking back discovered the bear still in pursuit and rapidly decreasing the distance between them, being now scarcely twenty yards behind her.

Occasionally the bear gave an angry snort, as if enraged at being balked of his intended prey. His heavy, labored breathing was now distinctly audible to her ear, and she realized that her strength was failing, and that it was impossible for her to continue her present pace much longer. Clasping the child still more closely to her bosom, she made one more desperate effort to outfoot her pursuer. While continuing her flight, the child's hat, with its gay ribbons and flowers, became accidentally disarranged and fell to the ground. After running a hundred yards or more, Miss McGee ventured to look back once more, and her relief may be imagined when she saw the bear biting and tearing at the hat lying on the road.

Miss McGee said that at sight of this she instantly recovered presence of mind, and coolly began to calculate on her chances of escape and her best method of procedure. She knew that the nearest house in which she could seek safety was still nearly two and a half miles distant, and the chances of meeting any one able to assist her on that lonely mountain road were very few. She knew that she could not keep up her present rate of speed much longer, so she moderated her gait, although she still made good time.

She had gained perhaps two hundred yards on the bear, when upon looking around she discovered him again starting in pursuit, having succeeded in demolishing the hat. She now rapidly proceeded to divest the child of its sacque and threw it down in the road. Upon reaching the spot in the road where the garment was lying the bear again stopped and proceeded to destroy it before continuing his pursuit. Miss McGee made good use of the time lost by the bear, and when he again started in pursuit she was a good distance ahead. As he again neared her she threw the child's dress down into the road, and again the attention of the bear was attracted and a few precious moments gained.

She continued this method, coolly waiting each time until the bear had nearly overtaken her, then dropping some article of wearing apparel into the road, until the child was entirely divested of clothing, then she began upon herself. She was already within less than a mile of a dwelling and began to feel confident of her ability to delay the animal until she reached it. Her gloves were first sacrificed, and gained a few minutes' respite from pursuit. Her hat went next; then basque, and last of all her dress skirt. The latter succeeded in holding the attention of the bear until she reached the house of Mr. John Miller and was once again in safety, although almost destitute of clothing.

The bear, attracted by the squalling of some pigs in a pen near the road, made no effort to effect an entrance into the house, but left the road and went to the pig pen for the purpose of procuring a pork dinner. Mr. Miller was not at home, and the bear's chances for securing a young porker seemed to be good, when Miss McGee took down a Winchester that was above the door, and, despite the entreaties of Mrs. Miller, the plucky teacher proceeded to the pen. As the bear saw her approaching he roared upon his hind legs, and stood ready for fight. Miss Callie quickly brought her gun into position and fired, the ball passing through the animal's heart, and he fell dead. He proved to be a "whopper," and tipped the beam at 287 1-2 pounds.

Strange Positions in Death.

During the late Civil War a detachment of United States soldiers foraging aroung Goldsborough, N. C., came suddenly upon a small band of Southern troops who had dismounted. These latter immediately jumped into their saddles and all scampered away except one, after being exposed to one round of firing. The soldier who did not escape was seen standing upright, with one foot in the stirrup of his saddle. In his left hand he held the bridle and the horse's mane, while his right hand grasped his rifle near the muzzle, the stock being on the ground. The horseman's head was turned toward the right shoulder, apparently watching the approach of the enemy. Some of the Union soldiers were preparing to fire again, when their officer ordered them to desist and to make the defiant man a prisoner. The man was then ordered to surrender, but he made no answer. When he was approached it was found that he was stone dead, and perfectly rigid in the attitude described above. It took considerable of an effort to force his left hand to release the horse's mane and to remove the rifle from the right hand. When the body was laid upon the ground the limbs preserved the same position and the same inflexibility. The man had been struck by two balls fired from Springfield rifles. One of these had entered to the right of the spinal column and had made its exit from the body near the region of the heart. It had left a slight indentation in the saddle and then dropped to the ground. The horse remained unhurt, having stood the fire because tied to a tree by a halter.

The following is another incident: At the battle of Williamsburg Dr. T. P. Reed examined the body of a United States scouve who had received a ball in the forehead just as he was climbing over a low fence. Like the Goldsborough case above, this man had preserved the last attitude of his life. One of his legs was half over the fence, while his body still remained behind. One hand was raised level with his forehead with the palm forward as if to ward off some imminent danger.—[St. Louis Republic.

In Old Ocean's Depths.

Now that the whole ocean is mapped out for us, there is no longer any romance in hidden ocean depths. The Atlantic, we are told, if drained, would be a vast plain, with a mountain range in the middle running parallel with our coast. Another range crosses it from Newfoundland to Ireland, on the top of which lies the submarine cable. The ocean is thus divided into three great basins, no longer "unfathomed depths." The tops of these sea mountains are two miles below sailing ships; the basin is almost five miles. These mountains are whitened for thousands of miles by a tiny, creamy specks of shell, lying as thickly on their tops as frost crystals on a snow bank. The deepest parts are red in color, dotted with volcanic craters. Through the vast mediterranean depths [illegible]

NOTICE.

Members of the Executive Committee of the Democratic party of Chilton county, will meet at the courthouse in Clanton, on Tuesday, the 20th inst., at 10 o'clock a. m. on the committee and attend to other important business.

J. H. DOSTWICK, Chairman.

Charles Stewart Parnell, the great Irish leader, died last Wednesday.

The Second Ecumenical Methodist Council met in Washington City on the 7th inst.

A Georgia editor writes: "The longer we run a newspaper and write about people or events the more we realize how impossible it is to scratch every man on the spot where he itches the most."

Columbia Recorder: The Third Party leaders are doing everything in their power to keep the people from reading the sound Democratic newspapers of the country in order that they may keep the people in the dark upon what the enemies of Democracy are doing.

The Hon. Merret Street, a prominent citizen of Clay county, Ala., recently deceased, has bequeathed to his state the money for a co-educational college. Four hundred and twenty acres of land and money to erect the necessary buildings are set aside by the terms of the will. An endowment fund to pay the salary of teachers is also provided. The land is near Ashland, Clay county. Never was a bequest more urgently needed.

The two Georgia evangelists, Sam P. Jones, and Sam W. Small, have been ordered to appear before the grand jury. They conducted a revival at Rome, Ga., some days ago and charged corruption so pointedly upon the people and the administration of justice that Supreme Court Judge Maddox charged the grand jury to compel the Evangelists to make their charges in legal form, and prove their truth or shut up. Attachments have been issued for the reverend gentlemen. Small is now in Massachusetts.—Ex.

The building boom has struck Eutaw. We are glad to see that several of our young men are getting ready to erect stores and presume such earnest arrangments for the business of life are prompted by their love of some fair ones whose happiness and comfort they wish to secure.

That's right gentlemen, you'll have twice the influence when you marry and settle down.

The above is from the young lady editor of the Eutaw Whig, and from such a source it is both rich and rare. In cases where the benedict does not "settle down" to whittling sticks around a country store it may prove true as to the "influence." Young man of Eutaw, now is your "accepted" time.

The Birmingham papers and perhaps a few politicians of the eigth congressional district are trying to bring Gen. Jos. Wheeler into the field for governor, as an alliance candidate against Gov. Jones. Gen. Wheeler declines to enter the race. He is known as "Fighting Joe Wheeler," but he has much discretion, and will not be disposed to jump into such a political muss as the next gubernatorial campaign in this State promises to be, especially when the chances for his success would be exceedingly doubtful. Kolb or Jones will be the shibboleth of the next convention we opine, unless one of them dies or is permanently disabled before the convention meets.

The Troy Enquirer says:

Do you know what made Birmingham the first city of Alabama, and did you know the greatest dry goods merchant in that city, F. Cahoon, started on a very small capital and invested nearly half of that in advertising?

Don't you know that advertising brings trade to the town and to your door?

Printers ink costs but little and it has done more to advance the civilization of the world than any other one thing.

When your customers cease to see your advertisement in the paper they forget that you keep as good a stock of goods as your neighbor, and "Never speak as they pass by."

GROCE—LANE—LONGSHORE.

A Scheme to Prevent the Nomination of Colonel Grant.

From the Piedmont Post.

Lively times may be expected in this, the fourth congressional district. Indeed the battle has already begun and the candidates are hustling lively, whether the people are taking much interest or not. Four men are looking toward Washington with fond anticipations, but it is hard to tell just now who will occupy the seat so long and so ably filled by Gen. Forney. The four candidates are Col. L. W. Grant and Rev. M. H. Lane, of Calhoun, Mr. Longshore, of Shelby, and Dr. Groce, of Talladega.

Of these three, Messrs. Lane, Longshore, and Groce are strong advocates of Alliance principles while Col. Grant is mildly opposed to the extreme measures of that order.

Of the alliance candidates the Rev. Mr. Lane is the most desirable, as the others lean considerably to the third party. In fact, Dr. Groce has openly declared his mind in that direction, and Mr. Longshore joins him and others in the fight against the democracy and its best leaders.

Col. Grant is the full-fledged democratic candidate and against him the fight of the other three will be made.

It is understood that the alliance trio will go into the convention and combine their strength on their strongest man to defeat Col. Grant.

A Post reporter recently had a short talk with Col. Grant. The colonel seemed to be very hopeful. Though the alliance sentiment is very strong, he thinks with the united efforts of all his friends he will win the nomination.

The Convict Question.

In his bid for the Jefferson county delegation Mr. Kolb pledged himself distinctly to procure the removal of the convicts from Jefferson county where they are worked in the mines. If the legislature fails, then he stands pledged to abrogate the existing contracts, which the present law gives him the power to do without so much as giving a reason.

He does not tell us what he would do with the convicts after he abrogates the contracts. They now bring into the state treasury the sum of $100,000 per annum. If they were kept in idleness they would cost the State not less than a quarter of a million dollars annually. The problem is how to make them self-sustaining and remove the burden from the taxpayer. Mr. Kolb offers no solution.

At the last session of the legislature an act was passed authorizing the governor to appoint a commission, to be composed of the three inspectors, some citizens of high standing, with the governor as president of the commission, whose duty it shall be to formulate a plan for a change of the lease system into one working the convicts on state account, and of submitting this plan to the next legislature for its adoption, with reasons therefor. This commission will no doubt, act in due time, after giving the subject that careful consideration which its importance demands, and will formulate and present to the legislature a system which will meet the approval of the people of the state.—Register.

La Grippe Again.

During the epidemic of La Grippe last season Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, proved to be the best remedy. Reports from the many who used it confirm this statement. They were not only quickly relieved, but the disease left no bad after results. We ask you to give this remedy a trial and we guarantee that you will be satisfied with results, or the purchase price will be refunded. It has no equal in La Grippe, or any Throat, Chest or Lung Trouble. Trial bottles free. Regular sizes 50c. and $1.

LOCAL LACONICS.

Mrs. T. G. Holt is visiting friends in Montgomery.

Dr. A. E. Bivings is having his store painted.

Frost was reported in this section last Thursday morning.

Misses Bessie and Gertha Ponder left Saturday for Hogansville, Georgia.

Miss Delanie Duke visited her sister, Mrs. O. G. Logan, at Verbena, this week.

Mrs. O. A. Duke spent Monday in Montgomery with her daughter, Mrs. R. H. Croswell.

Miss Annie Lake Phillips has returned home after a pleasant visit in Montgomery.

Young men! Get married and buy your wedding outfits at ALEX RICE'S, Montgomery.

Mr. L. B. Wells has been on a visit to his son-in-law, Mr. A. J. McCraney, at Troy, Ala.

Business is picking up every day with Clanton merchants. They give good prices for cotton.

Mrs. T. Sharp and daughter, of Montgomery, are visiting our city, and are stopping at the Misses Duke's.

Mrs. Evans was called to Anniston, Monday night, by a telegram stating that her son, Glaucus, was very ill.

A casual glance at the advertising columns of a newspaper will tell who the men are that build up a town.—Exchange.

Short and stout men! We have a full line of suits to fit you; we are prepared especially for you.
ALEX RICE, Montgomery.

Several ladies have asked us to please call attention to the nuisance of the side-walks being blockaded by wagons.

Miss Armatine Smith returned to her home in Prattville Monday. She was accompanied by her sister, Mrs. A. J. Briggs.

Mothers! Remember we pay special attention to the durability of our boys' and children's clothing.
ALEX RICE, Montgomery.

Mr. W. H. Phillips says the grocery business is improving. He will handle fresh fish and oysters during the season.

The fourth quarterly meeting of Clanton circuit will be at Isabella next Saturday. Service at 11 o'clock. No service Sunday.

Mr. J. P. Allen says he is going to have the streets worked in front of his store if he has to make the lawyers work them, and he had one of them cleaning out a ditch Thursday.

Mothers! Remember we are the only house in Montgomery paying special attention to dress the little darlings.
ALEX RICE, Montgomery.

Messrs. Merritt, Phillips, Bivings, Briggs and Garner, are working zealously in behalf of the new school building, and we can count on seeing the building go up before a great while.

Long and slim men! To get a good fit you must come to us. We have suits with extra long waists, long shirts and long pants.
ALEX RICE, Montgomery.

We advertised for a cat last week. In two hours we owned more cats than we could manage, and before the day passed we were overwhelmed by several visitors bearing cats in their arms, that we could not find bed nor board for. And yet some say advertising does not pay.

Mothers! Does your boy want a new suit? If he does, don't forget we have the largest stock in Montgomery and sell at lowest prices.

The celebrated Hamilton-Brown Shoe Company's goods can be had at W. L. Sampey's store at reasonable prices. They are first-class shoes and wear well.

Mr. J. W. Prichett, who resides half a mile from this place, was instantly killed Tuesday morning by the north bound accommodation train. He was walking on a trestle and did not see or hear the train until it was almost upon him, and he did not have time to get off. The train struck him on his right side, breaking his arm. The engineer blew several times.

The Selma Mirror is enthusiastic over the future of Maplesville, its editor having recently paid a visit to that thriving burg, and no doubt planted some of his surplus dollars there. Here is what he thinks according to the last issue of his paper, and we hope his picture is not over drawn:

The coming town will soon be opened to purchasers, and large lots with broad streets and an abundance of room for all either in field or forest, will be offered for sale on easy terms. No land companies will be formed to freeze out small stock holders and block the path of progress, but a good sized town will be laid off by the joint owners of the soil, and the remainder divided into small farms for colonies of western people and European emigrants, some of whom are expected to arrive within sixty or ninety days.

STATE EXHIBIT.

Commissioner Lane Appeals to the Farmers and Manufacturers for Prompt Help in Getting it Up.

To the Farmers and Manufacturers of Alabama.

Under the law creating the office of commissioner of agriculture it becomes his duty to encourage agriculture, horticulture, manufacturing and kindred industries, and as the State Agricultural Society is the legitimate adjunct of this office and the most effective medium to reach these consummations, I have decided to make an effort to have a state exhibit at our State fair, though much handicapped by the limited time that I have to work in. But as it is a matter of state pride and interest I invoke the assistance of our people in this undertaking of publishing to the world Alabama's marvelous resources.

We will take as a great favor the sending of any and all products to us at our expense, care of State Fair, Birmingham.

Care will be taken of all exhibits entrusted to us, and when so requested will be returned at the expense of this office.

As the time is so limited it will be impossible for our agents to see all, therefore we earnestly request that all our enterprising citizens will contribute what they can towards making this a creditable display.

Sincerely hoping your kind cooperation in the matter, I am yours truly,

HECTOR D. LANE,
Commissioner of Agriculture.

"We do not approve of the action of the Associated Press in sending broad-cast over the country certain details regarding the birth of the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland, because it was not in good taste, but fully agree with the statement that Baby Cleveland is going to knock out of joint, the nose of one Baby McKee. The whole country is deeply interested in the future welfare of little Miss Cleveland, and as her beautiful mother is regarded by all true Americans and especially those of Democratic faith as the first lady in the land, her little daughter is sure to be awarded the position as second lady."—N. CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India Missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this recipe in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. Noyes, 820 Powers' Blk, Rochester, N. Y. apr16-y

ALLIANCE TALKS.

NEWS OF THE ORDER FROM ALL SECTIONS.

Items of Interest to Alliancemen Everywhere.

Hon. Jerry Simpson is credited with saying that "In thirty-eight states and territories [illegible] has 4,000,000 members."

***

In order to give the features of flexibility to the currency, the alliance offers its extra [illegible] being fully as good a basis as United States bonds.—The Signal.

The Farmers' Tribune (Macon, Tex.) says: Just about 90 per cent of the farming population and about fifty per cent of all other citizens (politicians and money lenders excepted) are with the Alliance in their efforts to obtain relief.

Otoe County Alliance (Dunbar, Neb.) says: We would warn Alliance men to be careful how they accept statements in the party press about Alliance matters. A sharp campaign is coming on and the old time papers will publish many false statements partly through ignorance, but mostly through falsehood.

The Alliance has control of the next legislature of Kentucky by a majority of two in the Senate and thirteen in the house. The politicians are very much surprised that this new factor in politics has demonstrated so much strength. Some of the congressmen of that State are very apprehensive about their future safety.—Alliance Herald.

The Independent Era (North Platte, Neb.) is for financial reform and more money: "What we want and must have is more money. Providence has favored us with a munificent yield of grain and vegetables, but there is not money enough in circulation to move the vast crop. Consequently we are confronted with prices far below what they ought to be to meet the needs of those countries which are suffering from the want of them. More money means better prices for our commodities and better pay for our producers."

The Progressive Farmer (Raleigh, N. C.,) has the following: Some of our anti-alliance exchanges continue to complain that the organization has been perverted from the original purpose. They say that "equal rights to all," and "for the mental, moral and financial good" of its members have both been discarded. We suppose this is because we are beginning to diversify crops, as they advised and began to raise politics. If the farmers don't get their fair share of the advantages of politics, how will they get "equal rights?" If good politics are conducive to our "mental, moral and financial good," then why is it that we are forbidden this luxury?

The Northwest Reform Journal (Portland, Oreg.) says: "We publish in this issue Governor Pennoyer's North American Review article by request of a reader in Josephine county. The governor has taken advanced ground, favoring 4 per cent government loans. He does not argue in favor of produce loans; neither does he pointedly condemn it. He does favor land loans; the farmers do not want 4 per cent loans 2 per cent is the highest, and even less is likely to be asked for soon. As soon as the subtreasury has been tested by actual operation we think land loans will be condemned. The sentiment that the home should be free free of rent, interest and taxes, is growing."

The Oregon Alliance-Herald (Princeton) has the following encouraging words: "We note with pleasure the advance move that is being made by the Alliance in Oregon. Just nine months ago to-day was the first sub-Alliance organized in Eastern Oregon. Since then a wonderful change has taken place; the farming and farming element of our State are not rash in their conclusions, but have given the matter profound attention. It has been to them a subject of much study and premeditation. The principles of reform have been carefully weighed and in them a remedy found where by the wealth producers can unite and break down those sectional lines which will be the means of destroying party power and the bloody shirt racket.

The Alliance in Michigan has prospered beyond the most sanguine expectations during the past year. It has increased in numbers and effectiveness, until now it may well be considered as one of the reliable and staunch State organizations of the Order. Under the intelligent and conservative guidance of its officers, no factions have arisen, no dissensions have occurred in the ranks, but to the contrary, a unity of action and continuity of purpose has directed all its efforts. It has taken care of itself and its growth and condition is the result of home effort. Michigan has never been accorded the aid which comes from large meetings, addressed by national officers or men of national reputation in the order, hence it may be considered as self-made in nearly all respects. The good work done in Michigan has had its effect in other states.—Economist.

The Alliance Herald (Montgomery, Ala.) says: "The farmers' cause is in better condition, with better premises and prospects than ever in the history of the movement. In every State it is growing in numbers and increasing in determination; and as the membership becomes educated in the condition of affairs, and perceives the great necessity for unity of purpose and concert of action, that determination to forego petty differences of opinion and unimportant variance of methods, and become a unit in purpose. A unit in object and a unit in action is more fully and thoroughly realized and readily accepted by all. "United we stand; divided we fall." Pool your issues. Get together. Pull together. The goal of success is in view and by a good pull, a strong pull and a pull all together the haven of safety will be reached. Stand firm, with your faith in God and determination to do your full part and all will be well."

A recent dispatch from Topeka, Kan., has been going the rounds of the press, as follows: Jerry Simpson says that the alliance vote among the farmers in Kansas is increasing, but slowly since last year. The principal gains have been in the cities and towns where the citizen's alliance has been hard at work this year. He estimates the increase at 20 per cent over last year. Speaking of the negroes in the south he said: "They are flocking to us in the south. I believe that this movement is the solution of the race problem. It divides the colored as well as the white vote of the South. If it does nothing else it will do that much good at least. The old fight between the blacks and whites will be broken; the blacks will take sides with each other in politics the same as the whites. That's what they ought to do. The lines are closer drawn in the south than here. Everything divides on the subtreasury scheme. It is either endorsed or opposed by every man in the south."

The Jacksboro (Tex.,) Sentinel says: "Everybody admits that this country needs at least $50 per capita in circulation, and the most reliable estimates show $9 to be the amount in circulation or that could be in circulation, leaving $41 per capita that we lack. Congressman Abbott discussing the situation at Garland the other day said: "The reasonable, sensible, practicable way of relief was to adopt the free coinage of silver, which would place in circulation annually about $85,000,000, or about $25,000,000 more than the present law would admit, even if the Secretary of the Treasury would allow the utmost limit under the present law," 65,000,000 people into $85,000,000 make about $1.30 per capita. He would have the circulation increased by free coinage at the rate of $1.30 per capita per year, and says that medicine will cure us. It would take just about thirty-one years, (the ordinary span of human life) to make up the $50 per capita if there was no increase in population. But the last census shows that the population increased for the last ten years 13,000,000, and at the same ratio of increase we would in thirty years have 124,000,000 people; $50 per capita for our present population, 63,000,000, would be $3,150,000,000, which, divided by 124,000,000, would give us at the end of thirty years about $25 per capita by Mr. Abbot's plan.

SUBSTITUTES FOR THE SUB-TREASURY PLAN.

The Alliance has always said: "If you don't like the sub-treasury plan gives us something better. We are not wedded to anything. What we want is relief, financial relief and we do not from what source it comes or what its principles, provided it is honest, 'constitutional,' no class legislation, and promises to be permanent in its beneficial effects."

SENATOR BUTLER'S SUBSTITUTE.—The press reports that Senator Butler offers as a substitute State banks of issue. If he means such banks as those that existed before the war, having the same or similar powers and privileges, his plan is open to these objections:

1. The plan is not honest. No individual or corporation has the right to live and grow rich on the interest of the money he or it owes. I mean just what I say—"on the interest of the money he or it owes." It is right that you collect interest on what is due you, but it is robbery to make your neighbor pay you interest on what you owe him. This is what the "State bank" of Senator Butler's does. The bank issues for every dollar of coin it holds three (more or less) "promises to pay" dollars. If the issue is three dollars in paper promises for one dollar in gold, of course two of these paper bills rest only upon "thin and insubstantial air." But when the people borrow these two notes from the bank—these two notes which are the mere "promises to pay" of the bank—the people pay interest to the bank, to the extent of two-thirds of its issue, and the bank is enabled to grow rich upon the interest on that money which it owes to, and has promised to pay the people. I leave out of view the interest the bank collects upon the money it owes to the depositors. The old "free banking system" is no better.

2. There is grave doubt as to its constitutionality. The trend of decisions, and of enlightened public sentiment, is certainly against it. The national government alone has the right to make money. The states have delegated the power to coin money to the general government. Can the state delegate to the citizens a power that is inhibited to it by the constitution?

3. It is class legislation of the worst character. It is legislation in favor of money capitalists. It compels the people in the first instance to lend the capitalist twice or three times the amount of his capital without interest, and then as a bonus pay him interest on two-thirds of it—a currency that ought to reach the hands of the people "without price."

4. No permanent relief will result to the people from such a course as Senator Butler suggests. It is a proposition to go back again into the mire from which we are just beginning to emerge. Apart from the curse of sin, the delegated power of one class to create money and exact interest for its use from all other classes has caused more misery and suffering to the human race than all other causes combined. It has created the rich to live in luxury and ease, but at the expense of the poor who must live in squalor and suffering.

One would think that no one with knowledge of the past, however bitter the present waters or burning the present sands, would propose a return to the bondage of Egypt. Look back one hundred years over our own history and that of the mother country and see the lurid panic fires that burned up the substance of the people. At every decade they gleam in the sombre light of history—1857, 1847, 1837, 1827, 1815-'17. The national banks, an improvement upon the old "free banking" system of Senator Butler, came in with the war in 1863 and postponed the crash until 1873. No one can deny that the banking system of our own and the mother country was the main cause of all these disastrous crises.

No; the substitute will not do. The people have gotten too far along in their study of political economy to return to an old relic of financial barbarism. "We the people" will make and issue our own money to ourselves without interest.

THE N. Y. TRIBUNE'S SUBSTITUTE.—It is no experiment. It is simple in its workings. It is free to all. No class legislation is necessary to carry it into effect and beyond doubt it is constitutional. The Tribune's plan is to "raise more corn," and it is conveyed to the people in these pleasant words: "With better weather the mortgages vanish, and also the idea that there must be a new party in order to raise more corn." In other words, bad weather creates the mortgages, and your relief lies not in the organization of any political party, but in raising "more corn." Yes, men of Kansas and Nebraska! You who burnt your corn, because it was cheaper than fuel, are told by the Tribune that bad weather made your mortgages; that better will cause them to vanish, that you need not seek through the ballot, through a new party to right your wrongs; that you do not need a government warehouse in which to store your corn until you can reap the profit, which goes to the speculator and the gambler, but that the way out of your trouble lies in raising "more corn"—and more grain for sale.

THE NEW YORK WORLD'S SUGGESTION.—This also is constitutional. It does not necessitate "a system of silos" to carry it into effect. It is free from the charge of "paternalism." The World, like Job's war horse with the battle, only "smells the battle afar off." True, it is open to the charge of "class legislation," because it will flourish best upon a certain isothermal line. Here it is. The World says: From Florida to Texas, let the Farmers' Alliance renounce the pawnbroking idea of subtreasury and find fortune in the culture of the fragrant bulb—the onion." Yes, farmers, you who helped with money to build the high dome of the Pulitzer building are told by the World, that has its home there, to give over your efforts to secure the sub-treasury plan and "find fortunes" in raising onions. It would seem it is time for the farmer and the laborers to take back those words "or something better," and demand the sub-treasury plan without amendment, pure and simple.—Econo mist.

PARNELL DEAD.

The Noted Irish Leader Taken off Suddenly.

A London cablegram says: Great Britain and Ireland were startled Wednesday morning by the utterly unlooked for announcement that Charles Stewart Parnell, the noted Irish leader, died suddenly Tuesday evening at his home in Brighton. It had been well known that Mr. Parnell has not enjoyed the best of health for years past, and it has been noticed and widely commented upon that since the O'Shea divorce developments became a matter of public notoriety, and since political trouble came upon him, that the great Irish member of parliament had grown thinner, and that he had perceptibly aged in appearance. But nobody expected to hear of his death, and no inkling as to his illness had reached the newspapers.

He died at his home, Walsingham Terrace, Brighton, at 11:30 o'clock. His death is said to have been indirectly due to a chill which he caught recently and which at first was not regarded as being of a serious nature. Mr. Parnell, however, grew worse, and a physician was called in, with the result that the patient was ordered to take his bed. This was on Friday last, and from that time up Mr. Parnell lost strength, and finally succumbed. The exact nature of the disease which caused the death of the Irish leader is not made known at present. From the day he took to his bed, however, the state of Mr. Parnell had been such as necessitated the constant attendance of two physicians, but in spite of their incessant and untiring efforts to prolong or save his life, Mr. Parnell gradually sank lower and lower until he expired in the arms of Mrs. Parnell, who is utterly prostrated by the shock experienced through her husband's death.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

Another account of Mr. Parnell's fatal sickness is as follows: Mr. Parnell arrived at his home at Brighton from Ireland Thursday, and complained of suffering from a chill. On the Friday following he was unable to leave his bed, and his regular physician was summoned. He seemed to have considered Mr. Parnell's illness to be of a serious nature, for he soon sent for another physician, with whom he had a long consultation over the sickness of the Irish leader. This consultation of physicians was resumed Sunday, when Mr. Parnell was found to be in great pain and apparently growing weaker every hour. His sickness was pronounced to be an attack of acute rheumatism, and every attention and care was paid to the sufferer. He was carefully and untiringly nursed by his wife, who hardly left his bedside from the moment her husband's illness was pronounced to be of a serious nature. Mr. Parnell, in spite of the care and attention which he received, did not rally from the rheumatism, and grew weaker and weaker. Several hours before his death, Mr. Parnell became unconscious, and so remained until he died, in intense agony. Owing to the suddenness of the Irish leader's illness, and to the belief of his wife and of the attending physicians that he would recover, no friends or relatives of his family, or of that of Mrs. Parnell, were present at Parnell's bedside when he died. Mrs. Parnell and the physicians were alone in attendance upon him when he died.

In London particularly the news of Parnell's death came down like a thunderbolt upon the clubs and in political circles. Nobody, so far as at first known, was even aware that he was indisposed, and consequently when it became known that Parnell was dead, the first idea formed was that he had committed suicide. As the day wore on, however, it leaked out from statements of his intimate friends that Mr. Parnell had complained to them recently of not feeling as well as usual, but it was not thought by anybody that there was anything dangerous in his condition.

PARNELL'S LAST SPEECH.

The last time Parnell appeared in public was at Creegs, in Ireland, September 27th, when he delivered a long speech upon the attitude and alleged inconsistencies of Dillon and O'Brien. Upon that occasion, Parnell stated that he was speaking in defiance of the orders of the doctors who were attending him, and who had expressely ordered him to keep to his room. He carried his left arm in a sling and explained to inquirers that he was suffering from rheumatism.

In Dublin, Parnell's supporters are in a state of consternation. A meeting of the friends of Parnell was hastily called as soon as news of his death became known, and it was decided that a meeting of all of Parnell's followers should be called at once to consider what steps to take in the face of the disastrous event for their party.

THEY WANT A MONOPOLY.

Sea Island Cotton Farmers to Organize a Trust.

A Charleston, S. C., dispatch says: A convention of planters of sea island cotton in South Carolina has been called for the purpose of organizing a combine against the sale of cotton seed. The object is to effect a combination by which the Georgia, Florida and Egyptian growers of long-staple cotton will be deprived of the use of Carolina seed. It is believed that the outside world is dependent upon the use of Carolina seed for the quality of their staple, and that if they can be prevented from obtaining this seed, the quality of their staple will deteriorate so rapidly that the sea island planters of South Carolina will practically control the fine cotton market of the world. Committees have been at work for some time preparing a plan for combination, and it is believed now that the combine will be effected at once.

Professor Oppenheim is a dainty, good looking young woman, with a fair complexion, very blond hair, a large mouth showing large white teeth, and she has a clear green eye. She wears a doctor's gown of black silk over her walking costume, and upon her fair hair rests the academic mortar board.

At her lectures she explains the indications which the head, the eyes, the nose, the mouth betray to her carefully trained mind. Subjects are invited to come upon the platform, and she reads from their heads and faces as from a printed chart just what sort of persons they are. She informs the persons beforehand that she will not bear harshly on any too disagreeable traits of which they may be so unlucky as to be the possessors.

One very good test of her powers in this respect is to have a person whom one knows intimately well, but whom Professor Oppenheim has never seen before in her life, subjected to her analytical scrutiny.—London Cor. New York World.

"German Syrup"

The majority of well-read physicians now believe that Consumption is a germ disease. In other words, instead of being in the constitution itself it is caused by innumerable small creatures living in the lungs having no business there and eating them away as caterpillars do the leaves of trees. The phlegm that is coughed up is those parts of the lungs which have been gnawed off and destroyed. These little bacilli, as the germs are called, are too small to be seen with the naked eye, but they are very much alive just the same, and enter the body in our food, in the air we breathe, and through the pores of the skin. Thence they get into the blood and finally arrive at the lungs where they fasten and increase with frightful rapidity. Then German Syrup comes in, loosens them, kills them, expells them, heals the places they leave, and so nourish and soothe that, in a short time consumptives become germ-proof and well.

This is true only of Dr. Pierce's medicines.

When quite young children often show a disposition to hold objects very close to their eyes, others have a slight tendency to squint, thus showing that there is an inequality in the eyes. If attended to in time this can be remedied by wearing specially prepared spectacles for a given time, but if neglected spectacles will be of no avail and nothing remains but a surgical operation. Parents cannot be too careful about this matter, as many a child has lost the sight of one eye on account of the ignorance and negligence of the parents.

When a child first enters school its eyes should be thoroughly tested by means of certain simple tests in the hands of the teacher, so that it can be ascertained beyond the possibility of a doubt whether the sight is defective or not and able to bear the necessary strain arising from close application to study. Nothing is of so much importance to a child as its eyesight. Little or no progress can be made at school unless the eyes are in a normal condition.—Philadelphia Star.

GENERAL TELEGRAPHIC AND CABLE CULLINGS

Of Brief Items of Interest From Various Sources.

Jonathan Steward, of Trenton, N. J., made an assignment Monday.

The Alabama state fair opened Tuesday at Birmingham and will continue two weeks.

Advices of Tuesday from Almeria, in Andalusia, Spain, report great floods in that vicinity.

Cable dispatches of Sunday say: The severity of the storm in the English channel is unprecedented.

The Socialist congress of Germany adjourned Wednesday. They will meet again in Berlin in 1893.

The province of Granada, Spain, was visited by a terrible storm Monday. Immense damage resulted.

A Washington dispatch of Monday says: Wilkinson Call will be the next United States senator from Florida.

John Hoey tendered his resignation as manager of the Adams Express Company Saturday, it was promptly accepted.

A dispatch of Monday from Bermuda announces that a severe cyclone storm, dangerous to shipping, is raging at Bermuda.

A four-story brick building, corner of Eighty-seventh and Third avenue, New York, was burned Wednesday night. Loss, $125,000.

A cablegram of Wednesday says: Influenza in a virulent form has broken out at Angolume and other places in the department of Charente, France.

Dispatches of Wednesday state that the influenza is raging in Galicia, Austria, the infection having been brought from Russia. Four thousand cases are reported from Lemberg.

A cablegram of Tuesday from Madrid, Spain, says: The workingmen of Valladolid have struck. Their demands are for an eight-hour day, and not for an advance in wages.

A cablegram of Monday from Dublin, Ireland, reports that William Redmond has been selected as the Parnellite candidate for the parliamentary seat for Cork, made vacant by the death of Parnell.

A London cablegram of Sunday says: It is officially announced that Right Hon. Arthur J. Belfour, member of parliament for East Manchester, and at present chief secretary for Ireland, has been appointed first lord of the treasury.

The United States supreme court, on Monday, advanced the hearing of the case of Boyd vs. Thayer, arising out of the contest over the Nebraska governorship, and assigned it for argument on the first Monday in December, after the cases already assigned for that day.

The town of Glendale, fifteen miles south of Pittsfield, Mass., received a severe blow Thursday evening when the Glendale woolen mills, the only industry in the place, were destroyed by fire. The fire was discovered at 9 o'clock and the building was in ashes two hours later.

In the chamber of deputies at Rio Janeiro, Brazil, Tuesday, the bill rejecting the issue of paper money was passed to its second reading by a vote of 90 against 12. Deputies also voted in favor of the abolition of the law rendering obligatory the payment of tariff dues in gold coin.

A dispatch of Tuesday morning from London to the maritime exchange at New York says that yellow fever is increasing at Santos. One hundred vessels which have not yet commenced discharging are ordered outside until their turn for discharge. Vessels arriving are not admitted into Santos harbor until berths are available.

A head-end collision of freight trains occurred at Round Bottom station, Pa., on the Pittsburg, McKeesport and Youghiogheny railroad early Thursday morning. Both trains were badly wrecked, and Engineer William Scott and Brakeman Frank Green were killed instantly. The rest of the crew escaped by jumping.

A London cablegram of Monday says: Dispatches from Holyhead state that 200 vessels, many of them much damaged, have sought refuge at that port from the storm. A gale has also been raging with unusual fierceness about Queenstown, where about thirty crafts, large and small, mostly fishing smacks and small coasters, have been driven ashore in that vicinity.

A Washington dispatch of Tuesday says: The secretary of the navy has directed the appointment of a court of inquiry in the case of the United States steamer Dispatch, in order to determine whether any or all of the officers of that vessel shall be tried by court martial for neglect of duty, resulting in its loss. The details of the court will be announced tomorrow.

A dispatch of Wednesday from Marshaltown, Ia., says: The black diphtheria is spreading at an alarming rate in the Norwegian settlement in Soldiers valley near Harrison, fourteen persons having died of the disease. One family of ten lost six members and but one other is expected to recover. The place has just been quarantined. A terrible state of affairs exists.

A cablegram of Sunday from Paris states that several eminent French lawyers have been consulted upon the matter of the release of the fund of the Irish parliamentary party now on deposit in that city. They agree that the problem is a knotty one, and believe that the first step must be the application to the court of chancery by the heirs of Parnell and those of Bigger, for Bigger was a trustee of the fund at the same time.

The warehouse of Bardwell, Robinson & Co., sash, door and blind manufacturers at Minneapolis, Minn., was burned Wednesday morning; loss about one hundred thousand dollars, insurance about half. The company recently secured an immense contract for furnishing sash, doors and blinds for the Columbian exposition, in Chicago, and most of this material, which had been finished ready for shipment, was stored in the upper floors of the warehouse, and is a total loss.

A St. Petersburg, Russia, cablegram of Tuesday says: In view of the possible complications with China in regard to Pamier and other territory which it is claimed has been invaded by Russia, the governor of Trans Baikalia in eastern Siberia, having lake Baikal on the northwest and the Chinese Mongolia on the south, has ordered the removal of all Jews residing within a hundred kilometers of the frontier. This action is taken, it is claimed, in order to keep the Jews from acting as spies for China.

A cablegram of Tuesday from Erfurt, Germany, says: Since the extremists have left the socialist congress and have renounced all connection with the socialist party, the programme before the congress has been rapidly adopted and without criticism. Tuesday the congress passed resolutions favoring the printing of socialist literature for the benefit of the young. Another dispatch reports that the seceders held a tumultuous meeting at Berlin and many members of the moderate party were expelled.

THEY WANT FREE DELIVERY.

Congress Will be Asked to Give the Farmers a Showing.

A New York dispatch of Monday says: An organized effort is under way among the farmers to secure from congress free mail delivery in country towns. The Farmers' Alliance, the Patrons of Husbandry and other orders are canvassing the matter. Letters are being written to the congressmen in favor of the project, and petitions to congress for free delivery are being circulated in many parts of the country. The farmers assert that the daily mail delivery at their door will add perceptibly to the money value of their farms, and will be worth still more because it will keep them in touch with the markets and outside world, and rob farm life of its isolation and monotony. The farmers are writing to the agricultural press that this convenience would enable them quite generally to take the daily papers, as well as to subscribe for a local papers more liberally. In the American Agriculturalist for November, Postmaster General Wanamaker states definitely for the first time that experiments by the postoffice department for free delivery in the farming districts show that the increase of revenue more than pays all increased expense. He believes that universal free delivery would, therefore, be self-sustaining.

WORK OF THE MAFIA.

A Prominent Italian Assassinated by Members of the Order.

A New Orleans dispatch of Sunday says: Gaetano Baregona, an Italian lugger owner, was assassinated Friday night. The affair bears all marks of the Mafia. There was a jolly game of cards at an Italian saloon, near the French market, a quarrel stampeded the players, and as the victim reached the door he was riddled with bullets. The police have arrested the proprietor of the place and several others, but there is no proof as to who did the shooting. It is a curious fact the Mafia is heard of exactly a year after Chief Hennessy's death.

He Was Short.

William T. Whitehouse, a well known broker, of Brooklyn, N. Y., shot himself Wednesday at the Clarendon hotel. He was short of the market and the prices went against him. He was on the floor of the consolidated exchange during the day, and when he saw how the market was going, he went straight to the hotel and killed himself.

THROUGH DIXIE.

NEWS OF THE SOUTH BRIEFLY PARAGRAPHED

Forming an Epitome of Daily Happenings Here and There.

The Mineral Fibre Company's plant at Salem, Va., burned Monday night. Lost $5,000.

The postmaster general has under consideration the establishment of free delivery service in Americus, Ga., and other points in the South.

The customs officers, at San Francisco, made a seizure of 175 cans of opium Tuesday on the steamer Lakine, which arrived Saturday from Seattle.

The Greenville, Tex., compress, valued at $100,000, was burned Wednesday. The entire compress and 800 bales of cotton were destroyed. The loss is $200,000.

The Chickasaw Messenger, at Jackson, Miss., owned and edited by Frank Burkett, State Alliance lecturer, burned Monday morning. Total loss. He says it was the work of an incendiary, and publishes a letter to that effect.

A dispatch from Childress, Tex., says: The new forty-two thousand dollar courthouse of the county was burned to the ground Thursday. The fire is supposed to be incendiary. All the county records of both Childress and Cottle counties are total losses and will entail untold trouble to replace them.

A Montgomery, Ala., dispatch says: Captain R. Dunham, the slayer of young Cunningham, walked from the jail Thursday afternoon a free man. The grand jury, which has been in session several days, refused to find a true bill, believing that Dunham acted in defense of the honor and the good name of his wife.

A Nashville, Tenn., dispatch of Monday says: The supreme council of the Knights of Wise Men, an insurance order for negroes, is said to be on its last legs. The grand treasurer, J. R. Walker, of Nashville, skipped some time ago, leaving his family and a large shortage in his accounts. His family believe him dead. The order has recently paid only a small part of its death claims.

A dispatch from Milan, Tenn., says: Two freight trains, running at full speed, ran into each other at Bardwell Hill, Tenn., on the Illinois Central, Thursday. A car of oil exploded, setting fire to the train. Three cars of merchandise were destroyed, two engines demolished, the track on both sides of the wreck burned for 500 feet, and the woods for a mile. The loss is estimated at $200,000. No lives lost.

A dispatch from Tuskaloosa, Ala., says that a contract was closed Tuesday between Captain F. M. Abbott, representing Pennsylvania capitalists, and the Tuskaloosa Coal, Iron and Land Company, whereby the former undertakes to build a railroad from deep water at Tuskaloosa northward to the coal fields. They also contract to build a coke plant at Tuskaloosa. The scheme is to bring coal to Tuskaloosa by rail and ship it down the Warrior river to Mobile.

A Louisville, Ky., dispatch of Thursday says: The trustees of Elizabethtown have sued the Chesapeake and Ohio and Southern Railroad Company and Newport News and Mississippi Valley Railroad Company for $2,000,000 damages caused by the removal of the company's shops from that town. The town in 1868 gave $73,000 toward the construction of the road upon the condition that the shops should be permanently located there. The shops were removed to Paducah about there years ago.

EPIDEMIC OF CHOLERA.

The Inhabitants of Amoy, China, Dying by the Hundreds.

A San Francisco dispatch of Thursday says: The steamship Oceanic brings late advices from Amoy, China, giving details of a terrible epidemic of cholera prevailing there. Hundreds of people have died, and many English and American missionaries have succumbed to the disease. Mrs. McGregor, wife of Dr. McGregor, of the Church of England mission, died of cholera, on the 24 instant, and was buried the same day. She was sick only six hours. Chinese are dying by the hundreds.

UNITED TYPOTHETÆ.

Meets in its Fifth Annual Session in Cincinnati.

The United Typothetæ of America, an organization composed of the proprietors of printing establishments, began its fifth annual session at Cincinnati Tuesday morning with over three hundred delegates present. The meetings were strictly private, as the transactions relate to matters of business merely interesting to the delegates, or of such a nature that promulgation would defeat its purpose.

MONTGOMERY, ALA.

HE HAD A GOOD MEAL,

But the Check Laid by the Plate Astonished Him.

Bill Arp's Breakfast Cost Him Over a Dollar, But He Evened Up By Going Without His Dinner.

It's just awful to get along without money. It looks like the older I grow the less money I have and the more it takes to get along and keep up with the wants of the family. An old friend told me the other day that St. Paul made a mistake, or else the translators did, for it was the lack of money that was the root of all evil and not the love of it; and he said also that the best bond that binds the family together was for the old man to have a good healthy bank account. A surplus that could be drawn upon when the children were in need. I don't admit the truth of either proposition, but I do say that money is a good thing to have in the family, and I wish that everybody had a surplus that was honestly earned. I would risk our preacher on that. I wish his salary was $2,000 instead of $1,000.

About this time of the year my wife, like a prudent woman, begins to mention incidentally along the wants of the family and how the beds need refurnishing, for the sheets are about worn out, and will be obliged to have some new blankets, and the girls must have some winter garments and the whole family will need underwear and socks and a decent suit of winter clothing. You look right shabby and it don't become you. At your time of life you ought to dress more like a gentleman. You have worn those pants until they are right slick and they have drawn up and are baggy at the knees. I was right ashamed of you last Sunday."

"I can't keep up with my expenses," said I. "I owe some money and they are dunning me pretty hard. I don't know how we will get along this winter unless something turns up. But I am hopeful and trusting in Providence, for He has never failed us yet." The next mail brought me letters from Arkansas, inviting me to visit Pine Bluff and a fair at Warren and offering me $30, and as Mrs. Arp perused them she said, "Well, William, that is all right. You say money is so tight here you had better accept the offer and go where it is loose, but you must take care of yourself. You know that you can't stand what you used to."

So in due time I took the train for Chattanooga, and it is really a pleasure, a luxury, to ride on Mr. Thomas' road. From there I took a sleeper for Memphis over the Memphis and Charleston railroad, and was agreeably surprised to find how much that road has been improved since I last traveled over it. We made the 300 miles in eleven hours, and that is fast enough for anybody. At Memphis I took the Little Rock train for Brinkley and Pine Bluff. We left the depot at 7 o'clock p. m., and soon stopped at the river to wait for the ferryboat. And we did wait, for the boat was bringing a circus across, and we never got off until 9 o'clock. It took us another hour to cross, for the river was very low, and they had to dodge the sandbars. And when the locomotive backed down to pull us up from the boat it carried up the first three cars very well; but when it backed down to take up the passenger cars and had pulled us up about half way an alarm was given that the headblock of the sleeper was pulling out, and just such a rumpus was never heard. "All hands to the brakes!" somebody cried, and the engine commenced backing, backing, backing, and before we knew it we were all on the boat again. But I tell you it was alarming, especially to the sleeper, for if that headblock had have pulled out that car would have never stopped until it was through the ferryboat and into the river.

Well, it took another hour to repair the headblock and make the connections secure, and we had about 11 o'clock we got off, and then such a road, such a road. It is just a sin for any state to allow such a track to be used. The cars actually jump off of every trestle. You can feel the jump and then sway sideways like an old lating engine and move along with the double wabbles. Strange to say, these trains hardly ever jump the track, and I can't explain it unless it is as a man said, the track is straight and the wheels have got used to the bumps and hollows. We were due at Pine Bluff at 1 o'clock, but never got there until daylight, and it was a long and mise able night. "Sorrow endureth for a night, but joy cometh in the morning," and so I went to bed thankful and retired and slept a few hours. The Truelock hotel is a good one, and I enjoyed it, and so when I was ready for breakfast I took my seat in a luxurious dining room and was presented with a gilt edged bill of fare, and I picked out a porterhouse steak and breakfast bacon and sausage, and steam toast, and eggs a la Truelock, and potatoes a la something else, and coffee, etc. Thinks I to myself, I'll take a liberal variety and eat what I like best. I never noticed the little figures away off on the margin. I thought I was in a hotel, I did. Well, I partook of the well-cooked viands, and the polite and attentive waiter stood by and fanned me like I was a prince. When I had finished he slid a slip of paper by my plate and I saw $1.25 marked on it in plain, large figures. Then I glanced at the gilt-edged card and saw the little figures adjacent to everything I had ordered, and I considered myself the injured person. I never said anything—not a word—but with lord Chesterfield's ghost to the chief captain's office and paid the bill like a gentleman. But I think the proprietor of the Truelock hotel ought to let the guests know in some way that he lodges you and that the other fellow feeds you. I knew there was one way to get even with him, and that was to do without dinner, which I did.

At Pine Bluff, capital of Jefferson county, I found the place for the first time that I have been out since the night carried me, but it is a fine, substantial city of 10,000 or 12,000 people, well built and solidly built up, and the streets paved with the splendid gravel that underlies the whole country. The people in that kind of soil and water are healthy. They own all the street car lines and it used to be worth a quarter of a million, and says he would give it all to be a white man. He is highly esteemed by the white people, and lends all his influence to keep peace between the races. This county sends three negroes to the legislature. Pine Bluff handles more cotton and does more business for its size than any city in the west; everybody seems to be prospering and their business increasing. I wanted to see Mr. Howell, one of eight brothers who were raised near Rome, and who are now running eight compresses at differ nt points and have made fortunes. His place of business was pointed out to me, but when I called for Mr. Howell a good natured gentleman said his name was Howell, but he was not the man I was looking for—"You wish to see the Georgia Howell, but I am better stock than he is: I am from South Carolina." Most everybody here is from Georgia, or South Carolina, or Alabama. The native born citizens are very scarce and very young.

Now if a man can stand the negroes, and face the conflict that may come, Pine Bluff is a good place for a young man to come and settle down to business, become thoughtful citizens told me that there could be no general prosperity until they got rid of the negro. Their rich lands would never bring a fair return until a white population cultivated them. It is all cotton and for miles along the railroads you see nothing but immense cotton fields and negro shanties. On these farms there ought to be raised cattle, and sheep, and hogs and fruit, and there ought to be little thriving villages with churches and schoolhouses; but there is nothing but miles of cotton and that is badly mixed with weeds and grass, for the negroes don't give it but one plowing. I have heard that Pine Bluff is sickly but I saw no signs of it among the people. I never stood up before a more healthy looking audience nor a more cultured one.

And now I am here in Warren, which is not far from the Louisiana line. It is just 100 miles from Pine Bluff and it took us just thirteen hours to make the trip on one of Jay Gould's roads. It took us seven hours to make thirty eight miles of it and that is the fastest and only train he has on it. But for good company, who were used to this style of rail cars, I should have been desperately mad. As it is I could see, with great satisfaction, Jay Gould that in that one mile made the fair shows that white folks run the machine, and are improving their stock and emulating each other in raising corn and oats and potatoes and hay and fruits of all kinds. The country is filled up with good, old-fashioned, substantial people, who still believe in a God and a Providence, and in virtue and temperance and a judgment to come.—BILL ARP, in Atlanta Constitution.

THE TEST SATISFACTORY.

Exhibition of Type Setting Machines at Chicago.

The private test of type setting machines held in Chicago, under the auspices of the committee of the American Newspaper Publisher's Association, closed Saturday night. The test was very satisfactory in many respects, and the report of the committee will give the newspaper publishers a definite idea as to the work which can be done by the various machines. For three hours during the forenoon the machines were worked by members of the typographical union, who had never before seen them, to show the capacity of beginners who are practical printers, and for three hours in the afternoon they were worked also by girls familiar with the Remington typewriter keyboard to ascertain what could be done upon the machines by those who are suddenly called upon to operate them, all of which proved highly satisfactory. The machines will be exhibited to newspaper publishers and the public, and the indications are that a large number of newspaper men from all parts of the United States will visit Chicago to see the machines and also to inspect the cold process of stereotyping, will be on exhibition also.

FLORIDA AT CHICAGO.

Arrangements Made for an Appropriate Exhibit at the Great Fair.

Florida's world's fair directory, thirteen in number, chosen at the recent convention at Orlando, met in Jacksonville Thursday for organization and conference. W. D. Chipley, of Pensacola was elected president and George W. Wilson, of Marion county, secretary. A working committee was also chosen and the state divided off into sections, apportioned to each director for organizing committees for receiving funds. A code of rules for the government of the directory was adopted and Florida's world's fair commissioners were made ex-officio members of the board. More important action of the directory was the adoption of plans submitted for the state building, and this will be an exact reproduction of old Fort Marion at St. Augustine, to be built of phosphate rock and cement. Moats will contain rice, sugar cane and cotton fields and the interior space, orange, pineapple, guava, lemon and cocoanut groves. It will cost from $40,000 to $60,000.

REFLECTIONS.

Mormons in Mexico.

The Mormons never fail to make "the desert blossom as the rose," and their efforts in this part of the Mexican Republic will be no exception. The altitude of the valley ranges from three thousand to six thousand feet above the sea level, with a climate devoid of extreme of heat and cold, while the scope of agricultural products seems unlimited. Vegetables do remarkably well and all the fruits of the temperate zone are produced in abundance, being unexcelled in the perfection of size and flavor. These products of field and orchard find a ready sale at remunerative prices in the neighboring mining camps, and with the completion of the North Mexican Pacific Railway from the United States into and through northwestern Mexico, the advantages of an unlimited market will be brought to their very door.—[Mexican Financier.

IT MAY BE SO.

"Oh, Harry," she whispered, "I love you so much, but really I'm too young to think of getting married right away."

"Of course you are, darling," he urged, "and that's why I'm so anxious to have it come off early. When you get older you will probably change your mind."—[Detroit Free Press.

DIVERSITY OF FASHION.

"Hello, Charley," I said, as I took the three-year-old boy on my knee. "Where's your mother?"

"Up stairs in her room."

"What is she doing?"

"Frizzing and kinking up her hair."

"And where's the girl?"

"Which one—Dinah?"

"Yes."

"Oh, she's up stairs in her room."

"Well, what is she doing?"

"Oh, she's trying to get the kinks and frizzes out of her hair."

And so we go.—[Philadelphia Press.

THE TROUT'S APPEAL.

Don't visit the commonplace Winnepesaukee,
Or the rivulet Onequinganakamantogog,
Nor climb to the summit of Moosilauke,
And look eastward toward the cloud Umbagog;
But come into Maine to the Welokennebacook,
Or to the saucy little river Emiquadagook,
Or still smaller stream of Chiequantanticook,
There visit me last on the great Annaquatticook.

A four-story brick building, corner of Eighty-seventh and Third avenue, New York, was burned Wednesday night. Loss, $125,000.

A cablegram of Wednesday says: Influenza in a virulent form has broken out at Angolume and other places in the department of Charente, France.

Dispatches of Wednesday state that the influenza is raging in Galicia, Austria, the infection having been brought from Russia. Four thousand cases are reported from Lemberg.

A cablegram of Tuesday from Madrid, Spain, says: The workingmen of Valladolid have struck. Their demands are for an eight-hour day, and not for an advance in wages.

A cablegram of Monday from Dublin, Ireland, reports that William Redmond has been selected as the Parnellite candidate for the parliamentary seat for Cork, made vacant by the death of Parnell.

A London cablegram of Sunday says: It is officially announced that Right Hon. Arthur J. Belfour, member of parliament for East Manchester, and at present chief secretary for Ireland, has been appointed first lord of the treasury.

The United States supreme court, on Monday, advanced the hearing of the case of Boyd vs. Thayer, arising out of the contest over the Nebraska governorship, and assigned it for argument on the first Monday in December, after the cases already assigned for that day.

The town of Glendale, fifteen miles south of Pittsfield, Mass., received a severe blow Thursday evening when the Glendale woolen mills, the only industry in the place, were destroyed by fire. The fire was discovered at 9 o'clock and the building was in ashes two hours later.

In the chamber of deputies at Rio Janeiro, Brazil, Tuesday, the bill regulating the issue of paper money was passed to its second reading by a vote of 91 against 13. Deputies also voted in favor of the abolition of the law rendering obligatory the payment of tariff dues in gold coin.

A dispatch of Tuesday morning from London to the maritime exchange at New York says that yellow fever is increasing at Santos. One hundred vessels which have not yet commenced discharging are detained outside until their turn for discharge. Vessels arriving are not admitted into Santos harbor until berths are available.

A head-end collision of freight trains occurred at Round Bottom station, Pa., on the Pittsburg, McKeesport and Youghogheny railroad early Thursday morning. Both trains were badly wrecked, Engineer William Scott and Brakeman Frank Green were killed instantly. The rest of the crew escaped by jumping.

A London cablegram of Monday says: Dispatches from Holyhead state that 200 vessels, many of them much damaged, have sought refuge at that port from the storm. A gale has also been raging with unusual fierceness about Queenstown. About thirty crafts, large and small, mostly fishing smacks and small coasters, have been driven ashore in that vicinity.

A Washington dispatch of Tuesday says: The secretary of the navy has directed the appointment of a court of inquiry in the case of the United States steamer Dispatch, in order to determine whether any or all of the officers of that vessel shall be tried by court martial for neglect of duty, resulting in its loss. The details of the court will be announced tomorrow.

A dispatch of Wednesday from Marshaltown, Ia., says: The black diphtheria is spreading at an alarming rate in the Norwegian settlement in Soldiers valley near Harrison, fourteen persons having died of the disease. One family of ten lost six members and but one other is expected to recover. The place has just been quarantined. A terrible state of affairs exists.

A cablegram of Sunday from Paris states that several eminent French lawyers have been consulted upon the matter of the release of the fund of the Irish parliamentary party now on deposit in that city. They agree that the problem is a knotty one, and believe that the first step must be the application to the court of chancery by the heirs of Parnell and those of Biggar, for Bigger was a trustee of the fund at the same time.

The warehouse of Bardwell, Robinson & Co., sash, door and blind manufacturers at Minneapolis, Minn., was burned Wednesday morning; loss about one hundred thousand dollars, insurance about half. The company recently secured an immense contract for furnishing sash, doors and blinds for the Columbian exposition, in Chicago, and most of this material, which had been finished ready for shipment, was stored in the upper floors of the warehouse, and is a total loss.

A St. Petersburg, Russia, cablegram of Tuesday says: In view of the possible complications with China in regard to Pamler and other territory which it is claimed has been invaded by Russia, the governor of Trans Baikalia in eastern Siberia, having lake Baikal on the northwest and the Chinese Mongolia on the south, has ordered the removal of all Jews residing within a hundred kilometers of the frontier. This action is taken, it is claimed, in order to keep the Jews from acting as spies for China.

A cablegram of Tuesday from Erfurt, Germany, says: Since the extremists have left the socialist congress and have renounced all connection with the socialist party, the programme before the congress has been rapidly adopted and without criticism. Tuesday the congress passed resolutions favoring the printing of socialist literature for the benefit of the young. Another dispatch reports that the seceders held a tumultuous meeting at Berlin and many members of the moderate party were expelled.

THEY WANT FREE DELIVERY.

Congress Will be Asked to Give the Farmers a Showing.

A New York dispatch of Monday says: An organized effort is under way among the farmers to secure from congress free mail delivery in country towns. The Farmers' Alliance, the Patrons of Husbandry and other orders are canvassing the matter. Letters are being written to the congressmen in favor of the project, and petitions to congress for free delivery are being circulated in many parts of the country. The farmers assert that the daily mail delivery at their door will add perceptibly to the money value of their farms, and will be worth still more because it will keep them in touch with the markets and outside world, and rob farm life of its isolation and monotony. The farmers are writing to the agricultural press that this convenience would enable them quite generally to take the daily papers, as well as to subscribe for a local papers more liberally. In the American Agriculturalist for November, Postmaster General Wanamaker states definitely for the first time that experiments by the postoffice department for free delivery in the farming districts show that the increase of revenue more than pays all increased expense. He believes that universal free delivery would, therefore, be self-sustaining.

WORK OF THE MAFIA.

A Prominent Italian Assassinated by Members of the Order.

A New Orleans dispatch of Sunday says: Gasteno Baregona, an Italian lugger owner, was assassinated Friday night. The affair bears all marks of the Mafia. There was a jolly game of cards at an Italian saloon, near the French market, a quarrel stampeded the players, and as the victim reached the door he was riddled with bullets. The police have arrested the proprietor of the place and several others, but there is no proof as to who did the shooting. It is a curious fact the Mafia is heard of exactly a year after Chief Hennessy's death.

He Was Short.

William T. Whitehouse, a well known broker, of Brooklyn, N. Y., shot himself Wednesday at the Clarendon hotel. He was short of the market and the prices went against him. He was on the floor of the consolidated exchange during the day, and when he saw how the market was going, he went straight to the hotel and killed himself.

THROUGH DIXIE.

NEWS OF THE SOUTH BRIEFLY PARAGRAPHED

Forming an Epitome of Daily Happenings Here and There.

The Mineral Fibre Company's plant at Salem, Va., burned Monday night. Lost $5,000.

The postmaster general has under consideration the establishment of free delivery service in Americus, Ga., and other points in the South.

The customs officers, at San Francisco, made a seizure of 175 cans of opium Tuesday on the steamer Lakine, which arrived Saturday from Seattle.

The Greenville, Tex., compress, valued at $100,000, was burned Wednesday. The entire compress and 800 bales of cotton were destroyed. The loss is $220,000.

The Chickasaw Messenger, at Jackson, Miss., owned and edited by Frank Burkett, State Alliance lecturer, burned Monday morning. Total loss. He says it was the work of an incendiary, and publishes a letter to that effect.

A dispatch from Childress, Tex., says: The new forty-two thousand dollar courthouse of the county was burned to the ground Thursday. The fire is supposed to be incendiary. All the county records of both Childress and Cottle counties are total losses and will entail untold trouble to replace them.

A Montgomery, Ala., dispatch says: Captain B. Dunham, the slayer of young Cunningham, walked from the jail Thursday afternoon a free man. The grand jury, which has been in session several days, refused to find a true bill, believing that Dunham acted in defense of the honor and the good name of his wife.

A Nashville, Tenn., dispatch of Monday says: The supreme council of the Knights of Wise Men, an insurance order for negroes, is said to be on its last legs. The grand treasurer, J. R. Walker, of Nashville, skipped some time ago, leaving his family and a large shortage in his accounts. His family believe him dead. The order has recently paid only a small part of its death claims.

A dispatch from Milan, Tenn., says: Two freight trains, running at full speed, ran into each other at Bardwell Hill, Tenn., on the Illinois Central, Thursday. A car of oil exploded, setting fire to the train. Three cars of merchandise were destroyed, two engines demolished, the track on both sides of the wreck burned for 500 feet, and the woods for a mile. The loss is estimated at $200,000. No lives lost.

A dispatch from Tuskaloosa, Ala., says that a contract was closed Tuesday between Captain F. M. Abbott, representing Pennsylvania capitalists, and the Tuskaloosa Coal, Iron and Land Company, whereby the former undertakes to build a railroad from deep water at Tuskaloosa northward to the coal fields. They also contract to build a coke plant at Tuskaloosa. The scheme is to bring coal to Tuskaloosa by rail and ship it down the Warrior river to Mobile.

A Louisville, Ky., dispatch of Thursday says: The trustees of Elizabethtown have sued the Chesapeake and Ohio and Southern Railroad Company and Newport News and Mississippi Valley Railroad Company for $20,000 damages caused by the removal of the company's shops from that town. The town in 1868 gave $73,000 toward the construction of the road upon the condition that the shops should be permanently located there. The shops were removed to Paducah about there years ago.

EPIDEMIC OF CHOLERA.

The Inhabitants of Amoy, China, Dying by the Hundreds.

A San Francisco dispatch of Thursday says: The steamship Oceanic brings late advices from Amoy, China, giving details of a terrible epidemic of cholera prevailing there. Hundreds of people have died, and many English and American missionaries have succumbed to the disease. Mrs. McGregor, wife of Dr. McGregor, of the Church of England mission, died of cholera, on the 2d instant, and was buried the same day. She was sick only six hours. Chinese are dying by the hundreds.

HE HAD A GOOD MEAL,

But the Check Laid by the Plate Astonished Him.

Bill Arp's Breakfast Cost Him Over a Dollar, But He Evened Up By Going Without His Dinner.

It's just awful to get along without money. It looks like the older I grow the less money I have and the more it takes to get along and keep up with the wants of the family. An old friend told me the other day that St. Paul made a mistake, or else the translators did, for it was the lack of money that was the root of all evil and not the love of it; and he said also that the best band that binds the family together was for the old man to have a good healthy bank account. A surplus that could be drawn upon when the children were in need. I don't admit the truth of either proposition, but I do say that money is a good thing to have in the family, and I wish that everybody had a surplus that was honestly earned. I would risk our preacher on that. I wish his salary was $2,000 instead of $1,000.

About this time of the year my wife, like a prudent woman, begins to mention incidentally along the wants of the family and how the beds need refurnishing, for the sheets are about worn out, and will be obliged to have some new blankets, and the girls must have some winter garments and the whole family will need underskirts and socks and a decent suit of winter clothing. You look right shabby and it don't become you. At your time of life you ought to dress more like a gentleman. You have worn those pants until they are right slick and they have drawn up and are baggy at the knees. I was right ashamed of you last Sunday."

"I can't keep up with my expenses," said I, "I owe some money and they are dunning me pretty hard. I don't know how we will get along this winter unless something turns up. But I am hopeful and trusting in Providence, for He has never failed us yet." The next mail brought me letters from Arkansas, inviting me to visit Pine Bluff and a fair at Warren and offering me $30, and as Mrs. Arp perused them she said, "Well, William, that is all right. You say money is so tight here you had better accept the offer and go where it is loose, but you must take care of yourself. You know that you can't stand what you used to."

So in due time I took the train for Chattanooga, and it is really a pleasure, a luxury, to ride on Mr. Thomas' road. From there I took a sleeper for Memphis over the Memphis and Charleston railroad, and was agreeably surprised to find how much that road has been improved since I last traveled over it. We made the 300 miles in eleven hours, and that is fast enough for anybody. At Memphis I took the Little Rock train for Brinkley and Pine Bluff. We left the depot at 7 o'clock p. m., and soon stopped at the river to wait for the ferryboat. And we did wait, for the boat was bringing a circus across, and we never got off until 9 o'clock. It took us another hour to cross, for the river was very low, and they had to dodge the sandbars. And when the locomotive backed down to pull us up from the boat it carried up the first three cars very well; but when it backed down to take up the passenger cars and had pulled us up about half way an alarm was given that the headblock of the sleeper was pulling out, and just such a running was never heard. "All hands to the brakes!" somebody cried, and the engine commenced backing, backing, backing, and before we knew it we were all on the boat again. But I tell you it was alarming, especially to the sleeper, for if that headblock had have pulled out that car would have never stopped until it run through the ferryboat and into the river.

Well, it took another hour to repair the headblock and make the connections secure, and at last, about 11 o'clock, we got off, and then such a road, such a road. It is just a sin for any state to allow such a track to be used. The cars actually jump off of every trestle. You can feel the jump and that sway sideways like an ocelating engine and move along with the double wabbles. Strange to say, these trains hardly ever jump the track, and I can't explain it unless it is as a man said, the track is straight and the wheels have got used to the bumps and hollows. We were due at Pine Bluff at 1 o'clock, but never got there until daylight, and it was a longer and more able night. "Sorrow endureth for a night, but joy cometh in the morning," and so I went to bed thankful and refreshed and slept a few hours. The Truelock hotel is a good one, and I enjoyed it, and so when I was ready for breakfast I took my seat in a luxurious dining room and was presented with a gilt edged bill of fare, and I picked out a porterhouse steak and breakfast bacon and sausage, and hot am toast, and eggs a la Truelock, and potatoes a la something else, and coffee, etc. Thinks I to myself, I'll take a liberal variety and eat what I like best. I never noticed the little figures away off on the margin. I thought I was in a hotel, I did. Well, I partook of the well-cooked viands, and the polite and attentive waiter stood by and fanned me like I was a prince. When I had finished he laid a slip of paper by my plate and I saw $1.25 marked on it in plain, large figures. Then I glanced at the gilt-edged card and saw the little figures scattered to everything I had ordered, and I considered myself the injured person. I never said anything—not a word—but with hard money counted out to the captain's office and paid for the meal like a gentleman. But I still thought the landlord ought to let the guests know in some way that he lodges you and that the other feller feeds you. I believe there was one way to get even, and that was to go without dinner, which I did.

I first had thought I'd have the plate but the head has been cut down and the price cut in, but it is a big dollar and a quarter day, as I left the table with all my usual appetite and vitality and the appetite grew and the expense increased and hence this. Strange to say, I never felt better in my life, and the next day I was on the train for Warren, which is not far from the Louisiana line. It is just 100 miles from Pine Bluff and it took us just thirteen hours to make the trip on one of Jay Gould's roads. It took us seven hours to make thirty eight miles of it and that is the fastest and only train he has on it. But for good company, who were used to this style of rail cars, I should have been desperately mad. As it is I could see, with great satisfaction, Jay Gould tied in that car and made the fair shows that white folks run the machine, and are improving their stock and emulating each other in raising corn and oats and potatoes and hay and fruits of all kinds. The country is filled up with good, old-fashioned, substantial people, who still believe in a God and a Providence, and a judgment to come.—BILL ARP, in Atlanta Constitution.

THE TEST SATISFACTORY.

Exhibition of Type Setting Machines at Chicago.

The private test of type setting machines held in Chicago, under the auspices of the committee of the American Newspaper Publisher's Association, closed Saturday night. The test was very satisfactory in many respects, and the report of the committee will give the newspaper publishers a definite idea as to the work which can be done by the various machines. For three hours during the forenoon the machines were worked by members of the typographical union, who had never before seen them, to show the capacity of beginners who are practical printers, and for three hours in the afternoon they were worked also by girls familiar with the Remington typewriter keyboard to ascertain what could be done upon the machines by those who are suddenly called upon to operate them, all of which proved highly satisfactory. The machines will be exhibited to newspaper publishers and the public, and the indications are that a large number of newspaper men from all parts of the United States will visit Chicago to see the machines and also to inspect the cold process of stereotyping, will be on exhibition also.

FLORIDA AT CHICAGO.

Arrangements Made for an Appropriate Exhibit at the Great Fair.

Florida's world's fair directory, thirteen in number, chosen at the recent convention at Orlando, met in Jacksonville Thursday for organization and conference. W. D. Chipley, of Pensacola was elected president and George W. Wilson, of Marion county, secretary. A working committee was also chosen and the state divided off into sections, apportioned to each director for organizing committees for receiving funds. A code of rules for the government of the directory was adopted and Florida's world's fair commissioners were made ex-officio members of the board. More important action of the directory was the adoption of plans submitted for the state building, and this will be an exact reproduction of old Fort Marion at St. Augustine, to be built of phosphate rock and sculptus. Mosts will contain rice, sugar cane and cotton fields and the interior space orange, pineapple, guava, banana and perennial grasses. It will cost from $20,000 to $30,000.

Mormons in Mexico.

The Mormons never fail to make "the desert blossom as the rose," and their efforts in this part of the Mexican Republic will be no exception. The altitude of the valley ranges from three thousand to six thousand feet above the sea level, with a climate devoid of extreme of heat and cold, while the scope of agricultural products seems unlimited. Vegetables do remarkably well and all the fruits of the temperate zone are produced in abundance, being unexcelled in the perfection of size and flavor. These products of field and orchard find a ready sale at remunerative prices in the neighboring mining camps, and with the completion of the North Mexican Pacific Railway from the United States into and through northwestern Mexico, the advantages of an unlimited market will be brought to their very door.—[Mexican Financier.

"And where's the girl?"

"Which one—Dinah?"

"Yes."

"Oh, she's up stairs in her room."

"Well, what is she doing?"

"Oh, she's trying to get the kinks and frizzes out of her hair."

Mrs. O. B. Blue, wife of Rev. O. B. Blue, Presiding Elder of this district, died last Thursday at her son's home in Montgomery.

The Greenville Advocate has just closed its twenty-fifth year, and Col. J. B. Stanley, the present proprietor, has been with it all the while.

Marion Military Institute, under the able management of Col. J. T. Murfee has had another fine opening. The number of students is 112 and is constantly increasing.

Col. B. Dunham was discharged from the county jail in Montgomery Thursday. The grand jury failed to return an indictment to the city court against Mr. Dunham for killing James R. Cunningham in that city.

Doubt is expressed of the efficiency of the recent experiment in curing sick in the London hospitals by liberal doses of music. Undoubtedly much of the so called music of the present day is calculated to make a sick man take up his bed and walk.—Montgomery Journal.

Greensboro Watchman: Some enterprising newspaper has suggested that the Democrats of Alabama can't do better than to elect and retain each individual member of the Supreme Court. And the brother is about right. We would like it better if the Supreme Judges were appointed for life—or, in other words hold their positions during good behavior. Under the elective system there is great danger of incompetent men being placed in these exalted stations.

In many parts of this country many farmers are, this month, getting one dollar a bushel for wheat. Whether they will sell at this price or wait for the advance predicted, is for themselves to determine. It is a chance which they must assume. There are many reasons for believing that wheat will sell beyond one dollar before the first of next January. There is no reason that it will go below a dollar before that time. If we were a producer we would hold our wheat, unless we badly needed the money.

The people you hear kicking about their county paper, nine times out of ten are not subscribers, and if they are, we will wager our hat they have never paid one cent toward running it in their lives. They say, "If I can not dictate how it shall be run, I will take my name off the list. What good does it do on the list? It is some trouble and expense to send a paper for months and years and receive nothing. If you want a good paper pay for it, you ought not to kick at what a man makes you a present of.—Fort Payne Journal.

The pecuniary advantages resulting from well constructed, permanent roads, are not only part of the reasons which should stimulate every community to proceed without delay in the work of constructing good roads. Good roads have been ranked among the first of civilizing influences, as they not only make it possible but pleasant for farmers to attend church, visit neighbors and friends in the town and send their children to attend good schools. Many objections against the farmer's occupation could not be urged in a section with good roads where the usual isolated condition would not be felt by an enterprising and worthy class otherwise unfavorably impressed

The influences that control trade and commerce are undoubtedly favorable to a period of great prosperity. The magnificent yield of cereals assures a large and profitable traffic for the railroads. It means increased prosperity to the farmers. It will enable them to buy relatively greater quantities of manufactured products of all sorts than they have bought for years. Most important of all, our cereal surplus, which Europe must have, will bring our gold exports of last spring back again. Our farmers are now selling to Europe nearly $1,000,000 worth of cereals every day. Our exports of wheat and flour last week were 5,441,168 bushels.

Speculators in the city of New York city have more money than they know what to do with, and it is accumulating at such a rapid rate as to be alarming to capitalists. The head of a leading financial house on Broadway is quoted as saying that:

"During the past few days we have been compelled to do some pretty lively work in the way of drumming up customers to borrow from us our surplus cash. Any person who can give good security need have no difficulty in obtaining loans at a moderate rate of interest. The principal demand for capital at present comes from the South."

Mida's Criterion says: "Do you know," said a well known ex-Confederate officer, "that the Confederate government was the only government in the world that really enforced prohibition? During the war the government prohibited the manufacture of liquor in Virginia. It was there that the army was, and the same prohibition extended to the other southern states. This law was made because the government wanted all the grain to feed the people. The further result was that the Confederate army was the soberest the world ever had. The little liquor that could be had was only obtained upon the prescription of a surgeon."

Since reading the foregoing we are no longer surprised that so many of the "Mountain Dew" boys were among the deserters.

The Great Iron State.

Alabama is unquestionably the leading state in the production of pig-iron and stands next to Michigan in the output of iron ore. Michigan possesses unusual facilities for shipping the ore by water to a large scope of country, and hence her output of ore runs up to 5,856,000 tons whereas Alabama which stands second on the list as an ore producer has an output of 1,570,310 tons. Pensylvania comes next with 1,560,230 tons. New York gives out only 1,247,000 tons. Speaking of the recent census reports on this subject the Atlanta Journal says:

It leaves uncontradicted the previous report that Alabama was ahead of all the other states in the production of pig iron. Michigan enjoys exceptional advantages for shipping iron ore cheaply to the manufacturing centres of the Middle and Eastern states, by its possession of lake and canal navigation. Shipment from Alabama being more costly, pig iron instead of iron ore is exported.

But the fact, noticed by us the other day, that Alabama pig iron is sold in Toronto, Canada, and is the cheapest iron obtained there, affords conclusive proof that it can be made cheaper in Alabama than in Michigan, as the latter state is very near to Canada and Alabama is far distant. Perhaps this is due in part to the scarcity or high cost of materials for smelting in Michigan. But whatever may be the cause, this bulletin shows the growth of a great and important industry in several Southern states, and especially in Alabama, and encourages the belief that this section will soon be the chief iron-producing portion of the country.

A Slave In Golden Chains.

Chicago Post.

I wish that every man and woman who is convinced that money is the most desirable of all possessions could know a poor creature whom I see almost every day. She is the wife of a man reputed to be worth ten millions. Whether this figure is or is not correct I have no means of knowing, but I am certain that like the young man in the Scriptures, he has great possessions. There is nothing that money can secure that this woman may not possess, and yet I scarcely know of any being whose life is more despicably poverty stricken. She is no longer young, and age and its constantly nearing goal—death—is full of terrors for her. In such high value does she hold the worthless, ragged remnant of her life that she will not ride in a carriage lest it be endangered. As the world, venal as it is supposed to be, refused to pay continual homage to her one desirable possession, money, she finds no pleasure in the society of her kind. Failing to understand that such power as she possesses is but a trust, she has abused it with a prodigality that has resulted in placing her, as it were, in a desert of unloved loneliness. Morning, noon and night she sits in the effortless desolation with which wealth has environed her. The milk of human kindness if it ever existed, was long since eliminated from her nature, and effort for others does not enter into her calculations. The gratification of appetite is her one activity, and the monotony of each is varied by the ordering, at some swell hotel or restaurant, of an elaborate meal, including iced champaigne, and the eating of it alone. I will admit that this is a somewhat extreme case, still it is a faithful demonstration of the fact that happiness is a condition which is not purchasable.

A gentleman from Columbus, Ga., was in the city yesterday and in answer to an inquiry from the Gazette in regard to crops, remarked that, in his neighborhood the yield was very fine. To illustrate, he stated that Mr. Sam Whatley, one of his neighbors had just gathered corn from a fifty acre field, and that the yield was so great that it filled every available crib on Mr. Whatley's place, and he having no place to put the surplus, is contemplating "tearing down his barns to build greater." To make an estimate of the yield, Mr. Whatley measured carefully the corn gathered from one acre, and the result was sixty five and one-third bushels.—Tuskaloosa Gazette.

In one of the New York penitentiaries 800 convicts are making 13,000 shirts each day or 81,000 a week. Their labor costs the contractors 40 cents a day for each convict, or, in other words, he gets these shirts made for 2½ cents apiece. It is high time the labor organizations call a halt in the employment of convict labor.

Cotton Below the Cost of Production.

To the Southern Farmer.

Pardon us for addressing you. Our apology is our profound solicitude for your welfare. Not only the merchants are interested in your success, but every class of people, from the banker to the fruit dealer; must confess that the success and prosperity of our country depends on its agricultural prosperity.

When our fields yield their increase, everything has a basis of life and success. In reality, vocations do not conflict; each depends upon the other; and the farmer should occupy his proper place—king of the financial world. He should be the most independent man in the world. But can we look at the mortgage on the farms, and the condition of the farmer, without asking: What is the matter with our farmers?

Many of our farmers are unable to meet their debts. They have hoped against hope. No one with any decree of truth can say this has been brought about by lack of energy. No class of people work harder, use as much economy and have less.

The farmer's economy often amounts to a sacrifice, that he may keep his head above water. Their children in many instances are kept from the public schools in order to help lift the "Nightmare" of debt. Yet, for all this toiling, planning, economizing, what can the farmers show in return? What is the trouble? Something is radically wrong. Can we find a remedy? Amid all the clouds can we see a "silver lining?" Is there no hope for better days for the Southern farmer? Can the desert place be made to rejoice? We think there is a remedy. We desire to emphasize what we regard as the CAUSE which has brought about such a condition.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Methodist Church, will serve fresh oysters at the store house next Friday night. Everybody invited

GRADY MONUMENT

FORMALLY UNVEILED AT ATLANTA, WEDNESDAY.

Fully Thirty Thousand People Witness the Imposing Ceremony.

The monument to Henry W. Grady was unveiled at Atlanta, Wednesday, with appropriate ceremonies. It was an event in Atlanta's history. The scene at the monument as the covering fell, revealing for the first time to public view the features of the loved Grady, was certainly one to be remembered. Such a crowd has been seldom seen in any city. It was itself a wonderful tribute to the memory of the man to whom the statue was raised. Then the procession was perfect in every detail, and the exercises were excellent. No such pageant was ever seen in Atlanta. That is the verdict of the multitude that saw it. The crowd was estimated at from thirty to fifty thousand people.

There may have been larger processions in Atlanta, but never in the history of the city was there a more notable one. All trades, all professions and all classes of citizens were represented in the pageant. The military companies and civic societies formed a part of that procession.

THE PROCESSION AS FORMED.

The procession was made up in the following order: A squad of mounted officers rode in front, and after them came carriages in which were the exposition directors. Following them came the Fourth Battalion, under command of Colonel W. L. Calhoun; the Grady Cadets, Zouaves, Gate City Guards and Atlanta Rifles, under their respective captains. This completed the first division. The second division was made up of Knights of Pythias. The third division composed the Fourth Artillery band, the confederate veterans, the mayor and city council, the Q. M. Mitchell post G. A. R. The fourth division was composed of the different railway organizations. The fifth was made up of representatives of the press—newspaper men, printers and newsboys. The newsboys wore nice badges, and were excellently drilled, presenting a fine appearance. Over one hundred and fifty employes of the Constitution headed this division, each wearing a handsome badge. Many of them were the co-workers of Mr. Grady. This completed the procession on foot.

Behind them was the sixth division. First came the Governor's Horse Guards, commanded by Captain John A. Miller. Next the governor's staff. Following them was the fire department. They continued with the procession to Alabama street, when an alarm of fire was rung in and they broke ranks. Next came the carriages containing Governor Hill, the family of Mr. Grady and the Grady monument committee.

In the first carriage were Governor David B. Hill, Charles S. Northen, president of the committee on arrangements; Governor W. J. Northen, Mr. Clark Howell.

Second carriage—General Henry W. Slocum, Colonel Fulton Colville, Senator Dan Voorhees, of Indiana, Mr. J. J. Falvey.

Third carriage—Mr. John A. McCall, Mr. Thad Hammond, General E. P. Earle, Mr. William P. Hill.

The following several carriages contained the different members of the monument committee and their guests, General Austin Lathrop, Colonel J. S. McEwen, Dr. H. S. Pearce, Dr. J. W. Lee, Mayor Hemphill, Hon. Fleming duBignon, Hon. Pat Walsh, John Temple Graves, judges of the supreme court.

The S. T. A. was represented by a delegation in carriages.

ALONG THE LINE.

The long procession of six divisions, composed of civic and military organizations and distinguished citizens and guests, presented an imposing spectacle as it moved along the line of march from the Capitol on the way to the statue. Nearly every organization floated handsome banners and wore beautiful badges. From the beginning to the end of the line of march the sidewalks were crowded with cheering people, they overflowed into the streets and made the windows black and hid the housetops from view. From the capitol to Whitehall street the crowd was thick on both sidewalks, and on the latter street crowded out onto the procession in places. A noticeable feature was the number of ladies present, and every big dry goods house contained its bouquet of fair faces in every window. Down Alabama and along Loyd to Decatur, up Pryor to Peachtree the scenes were the same; but it was only when the parade reached Marietta street that the great interest the public took in the unveiling of the statue could be fully judged.

From the artesian well to far beyond where the veiled monument stood, in the middle of Marietta street, opposite the postoffice, the people were packed and crowded until progress was almost an impossibility. Every window was crowded, every projection was taken advantage of. The balcony of DeGive's opera house was packed with ladies, and the old capitol looked like a bee hive. The postoffice presented perhaps the most crowded appearance. Every slate shingle upon the roof seemed to have its human occupant. With a reckless disregard of danger they looked down on the crowds beneath them from their vantage point, and never seemed to think that a single incautious movement would precipitate them a hundred feet to the pavement. Every telephone and telegraph pole was garlanded with men and boys and the trees likewise served as seats. It was a scene that showed how much Atlanta thought of him who had passed away, and its equal will probably never be seen again.

AT THE MONUMENT.

The procession reached the monument at half-past 12 o'clock. The entire street from above the monument down to Peachtree was a crowding mass of people. From the platform it was a sea of faces, and moved in waves. There were so many people crowded on the broad street that it was difficult for the police corps to make a channel for the procession to pass through. As the carriage containing Governor Hill with Governor Northen, Mr. Howell and Mr. Charles Northen, and drawn by four beautiful gray horses, drew up to the platform, a mighty cheer went up from the multitude. Then came the carriage containing the other distinguished guests of the occasion. As they filed upon the platform and took seats the Marion band played "Dixie," and another mighty cheer went up—a cheer that shook the very base of the monument itself. Governor Hill looked out upon the crowd in amazement. He could not feel other than honored by this great mass of people. On the immediate speaker's stand was the governor and his party, including the chief governors of the Wabash, Senator Voorhees, of Indiana. The first [illegible] reached Peyton Randolph, Hon. Clark Howell, Hon. Pat Walsh, Dr. Hall, Mr. Fulton Colville, Mr. Will Hill and other members of the committee and of the governor's party.

Among the people who occupied seats on the stand in addition to the immediate family of Mr. Grady, were the speakers, the lawyer and the city councils, the city officials, the Constitution editorial staff, the exposition directors.

Dr. J. W. Lee opened the proceedings with an eloquent and touching prayer.

Then Mr. Fulton Colville eloquently told of the history of the monument. Mr. Colville said:

Mr. President and Gentlemen: On the 23d day of December, 1889, Mr. Grady died On the following day a large number of his friends met in his old room in the Constitution office and decided to erect a monument to his memory. A committee of fifteen was chosen to collect the funds and build the monument. We issued an appeal to the people of his beloved city and state and to the people of the nation asking for contributions. In thirty days we closed the subscription list. We had collected $20,000. The sum came largely from his own city that loved him as he loved her—as Niobe loved her children. It came from every county and almost every village in Georgia. It came not only from every state of the south, but from almost every state in the union, from Massachusetts to California. It came from all classes; it came from all sexes. It came, in all amounts, from $1,000 to 10 cents, sent by a small newsboy from Texas, and 5 cents wrapped in a loving note perfumed by the touch of a little girl from South Carolina.

Why should the whole people of this mighty nation so generously contribute to the perpetuation of the name and memory of Henry Grady in everlasting bronze? He never held public office; he was not endeared to the people from honored age or public trust. His life was yet in the dawn; manhood's morning had not reached noon, and the shadows were still slanting toward the west. It proclaimed the fact that the people of this united country recognized him as the patriot of this age! The first since Lincoln—since Washington. We hear it constantly repeated from partisan sources that the south is rebellious, and the scribbling pharisees declare the south barren of talent and genius, yet in the beloved borders of this rebel and barren land was bred and born three of these greatest patriots this country has ever produced—George Washington, Abraham Lincoln, Henry Grady!

It was the spirit of the south, that carved with the sword, the path way of the pen, and made America the stronghold of the Anglo Saxon race.

Washington made our country. Lincoln sacrificed his life in maintaining it, and Grady triumphantly standing on Plymouth Rock was with loving words again knitting the states of this union into a holy compact of mutual esteem and affection, when the cruel arrow of death pierced his loving heart and stilled his magic tongue.

"His eloquence was the electric current upon which the positive and negative poles of public sentiment were rushing into a warm embrace and he died 'literally loving a nation into peace.'"

THE UNVEILING.

President Northen, of the monument association, then announced that the statue would be unveiled by Miss Gussie Grady, the only daughter of Georgia's beloved son, in honor of whose memory the monument was erected. Miss Grady pulled the blue ribbon which loosened the white cloth enveloping the statue. The covering fell and the monument complete appeared in full view before the great assemblage. Hats were raised and a great cheer went up from the thousands who love and honor the memory of the great Georgian.

GOV. HILL SPEAKS.

Hon. Clark Howell then introduced the orator of the day, Governor Hill, of New York. When Governor Hill arose the crown cheered enthusiastically. The Governor's speech was a grand eulogium and fitting tribute to the South's noble son.

At the conclusion of Governor Hill's speech he was heartily cheered and many people pressed forward to congratulate him. He and the gentlemen with him were presented to Mrs. Grady and the other members of the family, and the exercises were at an end. Thus closed a memorable day for the city of Atlanta and the state of Georgia. The universal verdict on the monument is that it is an excellent likeness.

METHODIST STATISTICS

As Presented by the Ecumenical Conference.

Through Mr. McLaren the committee on Methodist statistics made a report to the ecumenical council, in recent session in Washington D.C., which in substance, stated that the returns had been obtained from all the churches represented in the conference and tabulated, first geographically, and second ecclesiastically. The term "Adherents" was included in every case, ministers and members as well as families connected with congregations. In some cases estimates were made, but in no case do they exceed figures given in the government census, and in some cases they are below. While no official statistics were adopted by the London conference the figures show that since that in the conference there has been an increase of 30 per cent in the Methodist believers. Some of the details of the report were read by the Rev. Dr. Morley as follows:

The eastern section:

Europe—Ministers, 4,481; members, 915,334; adherents, 4,209,601.

Asia—Ministers, 533; members, 24,334; adherents, 114,968.

Africa—Ministers, 294; members, 71,147; adherents, 2-3,376.

Australasia and Polynesia—Ministers, 736; members, 98,140; adherents, 488,103.

Eastern Section—Ministers, 6,094; members, 1,113,905; adherents, 5,096,128.

Western Section—Ministers, 36,801; members, 3,390,194; adherents, 20,291,975.

Grand Totals—Ministers 43,695; members, 4,494,899; adherents, 25,379,104.

The report which was, as explained, not quite complete, was criticised by several members; Dr. Turner, of England, holding that it would, if adopted, vitiate the returns in England.

Fatal Explosion.

A dispatch from Pottsville, Pa., says: A mountain engine on the Philadelphia and Reading railroad was drawing a long train of empty cars up a grade a short distance below Gate, Monday, when the boiler exploded, wrecking everything in a radius of several hundred yards. Three trainmen were killed outright and another fatally injured. No cause is known; the engine being just out of the shop.

ALLIANCE TALKS.

NEWS OF THE ORDER FROM ALL SECTIONS.

Items of Interest on Alliancemen Everywhere.

No Alliancemen can afford to sit still. There is an important work for all. Let every one strive to carry the torch of liberty to the darkened hearthstone of his neighbor, that he may see the chains of bondage that the plutocracy are forging for his limbs. "Educate and agitate" are the watchwords of the hour.

The North Carolina State Alliance, at its recent meeting, unanimously adopted the following:

Resolved, That it is the sense of the State Alliance in session assembled, that every man standing for office in the gift of this body, to-wit: President, Secretary, Lecturer, delegates and alternates to the National Council declare or define their position on the Ocala platform; and further, that we will not support any man or set of men for these positions who does not stand, unconditionally and undeservedly, upon said platform in its entirety.

***

"There is nothing in the Alliance movement at which any honest man or organization need be alarmed. It does not propose to make war upon any legitimate interest. "Equal justice to all and special privileges to none" is its motto. The character of its membership would be sufficient guarantee of the rectitude of its intentions, in the absence of a positive declaration of its objects. It is composed of as honest, hard-working people as the sun shines on. No people can possibly be interested in good government more than the farmers. None feel the effects of an unwise policy more quickly. And they cannot afford to fight their friends."—Webster's Weekly.

At a recent meeting of Line Creek Alliance, Etowah county, Ala., the following resolutions were passed: "Resolved, That whereas Colonel Milliner, of Birmingham; Colonel W. H. Benson, of Gausden, and Senator Norwood, of Georgia, manifested much interest in behalf of the Farmers' Alliance, by suggesting their respective plans for financial relief as demanded by the alliance, be it therefore Resolved, That, while this alliance does not fully endorse their suggestions as a substitute for the plans formulated and endorsed by our national organization, at Ocala, Fla., we tender to them our high appreciation of their efforts to aid us in solving the great financial problems now agitating the public mind."

FOUR MILLION STRONG.

In every quarter of every section, at stated periods, the farmers meet behind closed doors. Why? To battle out the evil genius of originated capital which heretofore concentrated its forces and thwarted every effort of the people. In the cities of our country more than one million organized laborers go regularly to their secret councils. Their only inspiration is a hope for a better future. Who will insist that the American people are not confronted with threatening condition? The people realize this condition, and each week, behind closed doors, at least two million free men meet to deplore the situation and study means of relief for the suffering masses. The people are thinking seriously and independently. American individuality has never before been so ably asserted by the masses. The people are moving on in progression, leaving behind the party politicians of old, staid ways to groan in desolation. The united voices of millions proclaim a grievance. Their earnestness defies a world of scorn. Give them a serious consideration; judge justly of their cause, and act honorably on your conclusions.—Southern Alliance Farmer.

WHISKEY VS. SUB-TREASURY.

The report of the Commissioner shows that on June 30, 1889, there were 4,576 registered distilleries, and 4,349 were in operation. The amount of grain used was 20,990,024 bushels, and the number of gallons of spirits produced was 87,887,456. The annual expense of taking care of this branch of internal revenue service was fully $2,600,000. The average amount of spirits warehoused for the past three years is about 66,000,000 held for over-due taxes, making in the whole about 78,500,000 gallons upon which taxes have not been paid. The amount of this tax would be $66,150,000. The above facts are given simply to show what our government has done and is doing for a class of its citizens, and by reference to inquire why it should not extend similar privileges. Only in a much less complicated form, to the agricultural classes of the country! The sub-treasury plan asks far less of the government than is now granted to the distillers. As it is, the deposit of spirits can remain in the warehouse for three years, during which time the government cares for it at a cost of $2,600,000 per year, or $7,800,000 for the legal term. That is, the government really advances in salaries, etc., $7,800,000 before a legal demand could be made for the tax. The distiller has nothing to pay for the government employes, he only pays 90 cents per gallon. When spirits are put in the warehouse a bond is given for the payment of the tax, and certified copy of the whole transaction is given the distiller. This copy of the deposit is good collateral security at any bank, and today fully $70,000,000 of credit currency is obtained upon this class of securities, and why not? The bond assures the payment of the tax, and the government is the custodian of the property. The ageing of the liquor pays the interest, also when it is sold the dealer pays the tax. In this manner the distillers obtain the use of this vast amount of money absolutely free. Is it unfair to ask that the farmer may have equal privileges with the distiller? Is not the farmer worthy of as much consideration from the government? Why cannot the farmers be permitted to take his grain to government warehouses for care and keeping? The distiller is allowed to do so after the grain has been transformed into spirits. The banks have no credit with the government of over $200,000,000 that returns them a profit. The distilleries a credit of $70,000,000 that cost them nothing. Why cannot the farmer have a credit that he is willing to pay for? The sub-treasury plan contemplates the same line of legislative, only much less complicated and far more satisfactory. The same statutory laws that govern the warehousing of spirits, with but few amendments, would apply to the sub-treasury system. The innovation upon law and custom would cut no figure. It violates no organic law and establishes no evil precedents. There are 4,349 registered distillery warehouses, which if more than double the number of sub-treasuries that would be required to carry out the [illegible]

Fatal Explosion.

A dispatch from Pottsville, Pa., says: A mountain engine on the Philadelphia and Reading railroad was drawing a long train of empty cars up a grade a short distance below Gate, Monday, when the boiler exploded, wrecking everything in a radius of several hundred yards. Three trainmen were killed outright and another fatally injured. No cause is known; the engine being just out of the shop.

FLORIDA'S SENATORIAL WAR.

The Secretary of State and Governor Fleming at Loggerheads.

A Tallahassee, Fla., dispatch of Monday says: On Friday last John L. Crawford, secretary of state, attached his signature and the great seal of the state of Florida to the copy of the proceedings of the joint session of the legislature from April 21st to May 26th, inclusive, certifying to the correctness of the same. This shows, of course, the proceedings of May 26th, upon which date Wilkinson Call was declared duly elected United States senator. This is the only instrument bearing the signature of Crawford and the seal of the state. He declined absolutely to affix them to the governor's certificate of Davidson's appointment. Some days ago Governor Fleming instructed Attorney-General Lamar to institute in the supreme court proceedings for issuance of a mandamus compelling Crawford to sign and seal this appointment of Davidson. Monday morning Lamar filled with the governor his official reply to the governor's instructions, in which he declined to institute such proceedings, giving his reasons therefor in detail. The attorney general holds that there is nothing in the constitution or statutes of that state or of the United States warranting such proceedings. He has from the first been of the opinion that Call was legally elected and would be seated. Call already has in his possession this certified copy of joint sessions of the legislature, and Senator Pasco will present it to the United States senate on the opening day of the session.

A PROGRAMME ARRANGED

For the National Alliance Meeting at Indianapolis.

An Indianapolis dispatch says: The State Farmers' alliance met in secret session Thursday, with eighty-one delegates present. The following programme for the meeting of the National alliance was adopted:

On the first day, Tuesday, November 17th, the address of welcome will be delivered at Tomlinson hall by Mayor Sullivan and President Force, of the State alliance, and the response will be by J. F. Tillman, national secretary, and J. F. Willetts, treasurer of the alliance. The afternoon will be devoted to an executive session, and in the evening President L. L. Polk will deliver his address.

On Wednesday addresses will be made by the president of the Mutual Beneficial Association, National Lecturer J. F. Willetts, and the afternoon the executive session will be continued.

In the evening C. W. Macune and others will speak.

Thursday morning Jerry Simpson and Alonzo Wardell, and in the evening John P. Stelle and Mrs. Anna L. Driggs.

Friday in the forenoon, addresses will be made by I. H. Turner and B. H. Oliver, and in the evening by L. F. Livingston and H. L. Loucks.

Saturday J. H. McDowell and Senator Peffer will speak, and at night T. V. Powderly and Ben Terrell.

Monday evening Ignatius Donnelly will address the council, and on Tuesday, the last day, William Erwin, Mrs. Lease, R. M. Humphrey and J. W. Weaver will speak.

THE REPORT DISCREDITED

That Uncle Sam's Squadron Behaved Badly in Chilean Waters.

Dispatches received at London, Monday, from Valparaiso say that evidence from neutral sources confirms the statement made that the United States squadron in Chilean waters, both in words and in deeds, displayed enmity towards the congressional navy during the recent civil war in Chile.

A Washington telegram says: The report from London that the United States naval squadron in Chilean waters displayed enmity to the congressional navy during the recent war in that country, is wholly discredited at the navy department. One of the officers of the highest rank said he had positive information that while Admiral Brown, who commanded the squadron, was compelled to pursue a neutral course during the struggle, his personal sympathies and convictions were altogether with the congressionalists.

A MONSTER PETITION

To be Sent to the Czar in Regard to the Siberian Famine.

A New York dispatch says: A petition signed by over one hundred thousand American citizens will be presented to the czar of Russia at the international peace convention, which meets in Rome, Italy, next month. It is in regard to the present famine in Siberia. The petition will be presented by William O. McDowell, of Newark, N. J., president of the Humane Freedom League, President McDowell and Rev. Edward Hale, D. D., of Boston, were appointed as delegates to the convention in Rome. All contributions received will be invested in this country, in wheat, rye, corn and other food supplies. These supplies will be shipped to the sufferers by special vessels. President McDowell will sail for Europe on the 28th instant. All contributions may be forwarded to Colonel Ethan Allen, No. 115 Broadway, New York.

THE GOVERNOR RESIGNS.

Oklahoma's Official Head Steps Down and Out.

A dispatch of Monday from Marion, Ind., says: Governor George W. Steele, Oklahoma, who arrived here Saturday, took after the location of Dr. Gatling's great factory, admitted that he had resigned the governorship on the 3d of this month, but had not yet been relieved. He likes Oklahoma, and has great hopes for its future, but his business interests demand his attention. It is suspected, however, that his resignation means the commissionership of pensions, should Commissioner Raum also resign, as is dictated.

England and China Trouble.

A London cablegram of Monday says: It is stated on semi-official authority that important negotiations are in progress between England and China, relative to the Russian aggression in Central Asia and that an understanding is in course of discussion which will pledge England and China, for mutual protection against Russia.

The City of Mexico has voted $100,000 to attend the exposition in a body.

More than 15,000,000 feet of lumber will be used in the construction of the huge building for manufactures and liberal arts.

New South Wales, Australia, has decided to participate in the exposition, and has appointed a commission of twelve to collect exhibits.

Charles Garrett, of Hot Springs, Ark., will exhibit at the fair his extensive collection of mineralogical specimens, including the famous Hot Springs diamonds.

The Agricultural and Art association and the Stock Breeders' association of Toronto have voted to urge the officials and government of Ontario to take measures to have the province properly represented at the exposition.

A convention of representatives of the militia of the different states of the Union will be held in Chicago October 20 to discuss and take action upon the question of a proper military display during the dedicatory ceremonies of the week of October 12, 1892. The delegates, one from each state, have been appointed by their respective governors upon invitation of the exposition committee on ceremonies. A full attendance is assured.

When Columbus was made a prisoner in San Domingo the governor who arrested him feared there might be an attempt at a rescue. So he trained a big gun on the entrance of the citadel, or castle, in which Columbus was confined. That cannon has lain in the same place ever since until now, when Mr. Ober, a World's fair representative, recovered it, and with the permission of the governor of San Domingo, brought it to the United States. It has been shipped to Chief of Construction Burnham in order that he may use it in some way in ornamenting the exposition grounds.

An Oddity in Painting.

The provincial cities of France are just now being entertained by a remarkable artist, one who displays wonderful skill in her own peculiar style of painting. With plates of various colored sand before her, she takes the sand in her right hand and causes it to fall in beautiful designs upon a table. A bunch of grapes is deftly pictured with violet sand, a leaf with green sand and relief and shadows with sand of the colors to suit. When this has been admired by those artistically inclined, it is brushed away and is soon replaced by a bouquet of roses or some other object, all done with great dexterity and delicacy. Even the finest lines are drawn with streams of sand, all as distinct as though drawn with an artist's brush.—St. Louis Republic.

Cleared up—all the troubles and ailments that make woman's life a burden to her. She's relieved, cured, and restored with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Periodical pains, weak back, bearing-down sensations, nervous prostration, all "female complaints" are cured by it. It improves digestion, enriches the blood, drives aches and pains, brings refreshing sleep, and restores health and strength.

It's a powerful general, as well as uterine, tonic and nervine, imparting vigor and strength to the entire system. Contains no alcohol to intoxicate; no syrup or sugar to derange digestion; a legitimate medicine, not a beverage.

If you're a tired, nervous, or suffering woman, then the "Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine that's guaranteed, in every case, to bring you help. If it doesn't give you satisfaction, you have your money back.

From Father To Son.

Scrofula is a blood poison which descends from parent to child. It is a taint which must be eradicated from the system before a cure can be made. Swift's Specific, S. S. S, drives out the virus through the pores of the skin and thus relieves the blood of the poison.

AFFLICTED FROM CHILDHOOD.

Mrs. N. Ritchey, of Mackey, Ind., says: "Justice compels me to say that S. S. S. has worked little short of a miracle in my case, in curing me of aggravated Scrofula, which afflicted me from childhood. It attacked my throat and nose, and threatened my lungs. My throat was so sore that I was compelled to subsist on liquid food. When I began S. S. S. I was in a wretched condition but commenced to improve at once, and am now entirely well."

"German Syrup"

A Throat and Lung Specialty.

Those who have not used Boschee's German Syrup for some severe and chronic trouble of the Throat and Lungs can hardly appreciate what a truly wonderful medicine it is. The delicious sensations of healing, easing, clearing, strength-gathering and recovering are unknown joys. For German Syrup we do not ask easy cases. Sugar and water may smooth a throat or stop a tickling—for a while. This is as far as the ordinary cough medicine goes. Boschee's German Syrup is a discovery, a great Throat and Lung Specialty. Where for years there have been sensitiveness, pain, coughing, spitting, hemorrhage, voice failure, weakness, slipping down hill, where doctors and medicine and advice have been swallowed and followed to the gulf of despair, where there is the sickening conviction that all is over and the end is inevitable, there we place German Syrup. It cures. You are a live man yet if you take it.

PALMER'S MEANNESS.

Gorp's Opinion the Grand Army's Commander,

Who Stoops to Little Things Instead of Berring Himself with the Dignity of His Position.

It is a pitiful spectacle when a great man belittles himself. I don't know that General Gorp is a great man, but he is in a notable position, and must have been a good fighting reputation, or he wouldent have been put at the head of the Grand Army of the Republic. Since he has exhibited his lack of brains, I have tried to spot him but can't. John McCauley Palmer was a major general, became governer of Illinois; but this fellow his name John Palmer. Maybe he is a little man or his son shrunk up. Of course he is a politician, or he never would have issued such a big bulletin about such a little thing as that old confederate flag. A big hearted, broad minded soldier would have smiled and said: "Oh, well, that doesn't amount to anything. Let the boys get out their flags and air them once in a while if they wish to. They don't mean any harm by it. We can't force them to smother their love." We have had reunions at Chattanooga and other places down south, and the boys in blue and the boys in gray came together and wore their old uniforms. When Hull's statue was unveiled at Savannah General Longstreet rode in the procession and had on his old confederate uniform. I don't suppose anybody doubts his loyalty to the union. The south has built monuments to her confederate dead, and have pensioned their widows and the one armed, one legged, blind veterans, and it is all right. There is reason in it. These demonstrations come from loyal, patriotic hearts, and are born of valor and suffering. We can't forget it, and we ought not to wish to, in any way to bind a nation together is by kindness, and not with force, or threats, or hate. They are a great people down south, a brave people—and this nation will need their help sooner or later. Let them hang out an old tattered, bullet-torn flag once in a while. Every hole in it is a comfort to us, and to them, too. We are all one now, and if the rest want to brag a little once in a while let them do it. That's all they have got left—the poor privilege of bragging, and that ought to be accorded to a vanquished foe."

A noble hearted man would have talked that way and the world would have endorsed it, but this small, malicious creature is always looking for an insult and he wants to keep it before the people. He is afraid that it will right him, and so over and anon he dips his inkstand and issues a bulletin—a big one, office, I reckon. He and he's sort of fool ows who raised such a racket when Governor Leland wanted to give back our flags. We were never engaged in a more righteous war than we were that day in honoring Henry Grady, and it was all because of our love for peace—blessed peace between north and south. But for those two words that electrified the nation, there would have been no monument, no statue, no procession, no flags. Grady's son was a soldier, and the son was proud of it, and said so in New York and in Boston, and he could not have been unfitting if the father had followed had been placed by the side of the son.

The heart never hunts for an insult. It is the nature of some selfish, sordid, envious creatures to be continually on the lookout for something to hawk at—sometimes construe maliciously. Those are the ones who have what the law calls malice aforethought, and they can get up more devilment in a community than all the other kinds together. Some northern papers sent me one containing a copy of the above ed by the Rev. Father Pichorit protesting of the confederate monument at Jackson, Miss. They call it "outrageous blasphemy." It is not blasphemy for nothing irreverent to God or sacred in it; but he is the most unreconstructed [illegible] have read after in a long time. It is one of some of the prayers we used to hear at the beginning of the war when leaders thought that providence was on our side and we were just obliged to whip the north. Father Pichorit and General Gordon ought to be put on a committee of three to make up a treaty of peace between the north and the south. Wouldent the fire fly if he got on the preacher, though, for he is a good man and if he could'ent convert the north in his way he would another.

Some northern papers gives a list of the national cemeteries. There are sixty-three, and the largest is at Vicksburg, with 16,030 graves. The number in all is said probably seventy-five thousand private burying grounds. It costs the government 60 cents a year for each soldier, this makes about two hundred dollars a year, and the south pays for it, and has been paying it for thirty years. Not a dollar of it is expended on the graves of our dead; and yet our conservative people talk about friendship—and President Harrison in his speech that "We are now a united people, all have equal rights and privileges," what a burlesque on equality.

I express our indignation to dwell on this national neglect of the confederate dead. I reckon maybe General Palmer will fix up their graves and put up a stone or two to commemorate their deaths if it was treason.

Mr. Editor, will you please publish the soldiers I send you so that the ex-soldiers friends may know whose and where they are. I have received some letters from them, and wanting to know about such a soldier is on the list. A man writes me he does not know where his brother, but that he was recently in Charlottesville. I found his name on the list and the second one a dollar, and a call was made for Fredericksburg and the contributions came from the states that had seen service. The largest amount came from a northern man. He sent the first dollar for Fredericksburg, and the first money for Charlottesville, and doubled it this time. A Mr. Atlanta, who is a native of South Carolina and gave for his native state and one for the state. Just the money comes slowly—it will come only six up to date. It will come enough—I think it will. Now here is the list. Every one of those soldiers was a man and a brother, and was dear to somebody at home. Those good, kind ladies of Virginia have done what they could, but now it is time that we mark the graves of our own Georgia patriots. Let us do it.—BILL ARP, in Atlanta Constitution.

TRADE REVIEW

As Reported by Dun & Co. for the Past Week.

Business failures occurring throughout the country for the week ended November 20 th, as reported to R. G. Dun & Co., number for the United States 252 and for Canada thirty-three, or a total of 285, compared with 291 last week and 266 the week previous. For the corresponding week last year the figures were 274.

Much has happened of late to depress business and shake confidence, and yet confidence is not shaken, and the volume of business is still close to the greatest ever attained. The bank failure at Boston caused scarcely a ripple of excitement. The failure of speculative banks at Berlin has been industriously used to depress stocks during the past week, but the average price of shares is higher than a week ago. This country begins to realize that with only supplies of grain to keep the millions in Europe from starvation, besides meats, cotton and oil, which other countries must have, the United States is in a stronger position than any other nation, and need not quake at every European alarm. Prices are settling downward, with enormous production, but the fact that such production continues shows that low prices are not ruinous.

At Pittsburg the iron market is weaker. The glassworks are all in operation, and coal miners have resumed. At Savannah and Charleston trade is somewhat depressed, apparently by the very low price of cotton, and money is rather tight. At Jacksonville business is very brisk, but at Richmond dry weather prevents the marketing of tobacco. Manufacturers are active. The most stubborn iron market ever known gives a surprise to many, for in spite of the unprecedented production the prospect of some accumulation of stocks does not disturb stroag makers, who reckon that it may be well for the country to lay in and hold much larger stocks than heretofore, so that sudden and violent fluctuations may not be so readily produced.

Large sales of rails at the west are reported, 175,000 tons in two weeks, but the markets for other finished products are not materially altered.

A BETTER TONE.

The alarm about the money market has passed, and no disturbance is apprehended this year. Industries are, on the whole, well employed, and it is especially noteworthy this week that there is a better tone in the branches of trade which have been most embarrassed.

GRAIN RECEIPTS.

Receipts of wheat at western centers continue at the rate of more than a million bushels daily, and exports are also large, but the price has declined 2¼ cents on sales of 28,000,000 bushels.

Cotton receipts continue to exceed last year's, notwithstanding the reported shortness of the crops, and, while the exports for the crop year thus far are but slightly less than a year ago, the stocks at the principal ports are 1,200,000 bales, against 600,000 last year at the same date. There was a decline to 6.06 cents, but the price recovered on Liverpool buying to 6.12, the sales here being 800,000 bales for the week.

TO HELP THE MINERS

In Their Fight Against the Convict Laws of Tennessee.

A Nashville dispatch says: The Central Labor Union, composed of delegates from every branch of organized labor met Saturday for the purpose of naming delegates to attend the meeting of miners at Newcomb to consider the troubles growing out of the competition with convict labor in East Tennessee. Three delegates were selected and the following resolutions adopted:

Resolved, by the Central Labor Union of Nashville, That we heartily sympathize with the miners in their present labor troubles and with all others who come in competition with convict labor, and will use all of our influence to secure an abrogation or modification of the lease system at the next meeting of the state legislature.

Resolved, That while we sympathize with the miners of East Tennessee, and will do all in our power to assist them when in trouble, we feel that no permanent good can result in lawlessness or in defiance of the law, either to the miners or to organized labor, but will naturally result in a loss of respect and sympathy for our cause. Therefore, we believe that the best interests of all is to demand that a conservative course be pursued, and all interested agree to abide by the law as it exists, until we can secure legislative action.

THROUGH DIXIE.

NEWS OF THE SOUTH BRIEFLY PARAGRAPHED

Forming an Epitome of Daily Happenings Here and There.

The Tennessee state board of pension examiners adjourned Thursday, after allowing three pensions at $300, two at $120, and eighty-six at $100 per annum. The total allowance to date amounts to $41,000.

The exchanges of Memphis, Tenn., held a meeting Wednesday and passed a resolution requesting the county court to appropriate $20,000 toward a fund for the proper representation of the state of Tennessee at the world's fair.

The Savannah, Florida and Western railway and other roads have put on a through sleeper from Cincinnati to Tampa, Fla., via Thomasville, and new trains were put on known as the Louisville and Nashville limited, which carry the sleeper. The train goes to Florida from Thomasville, Ga., over the Monticello branch.

The First National bank of Wilmington, N. C. suspended Wednesday. The following notice was posted on the door: "In consequence of the stringency in financial affairs and the inability to meet further demands, the directors of this bank have decided in the interest of all concerned to suspend business until further notice." The capital stock is $250,000. The last published statement shows a deposit of $405,000. An employe of the bank who is familiar with its affairs has just expressed his opinion that the depositors would suffer no loss.

The census bulletin of North Carolina by counties and minor civil divisions show the population in 1890 was 1,617,947, an increase during the decade of 218,197, or 15.59 per cent. Of ninety-six counties, twelve show a decrease. Twenty-three cities and towns show a population of 20,000 or more. The largest numerical increase in urban population, as well as the largest percentage of increase, is found in Asheville. Concord, Henderson, Winston, Durham, Reidsville, Statesville, Oxford and Salem all show more than 100 per cent increase. In only one town is a decrease shown, and that is very slight.

THE CONGO RAILWAY.

Over Two Thousand Men Employed in this Important Enterprise.

A cablegram of Monday from Brussels says: On July 31st last, 1,719 workmen were engaged upon the Congo railroad. A little later 500 new laborers arrived, and the actual number employed on September 15 h was 2,220. These workmen, who are largely Zanzibari, Krumen and Haussa, are under the charge of 200 white men, including fifteen civil engineers, nine superintendents of grading, seventeen boss carpenters, ten keepers of machinery and supplies, twenty-one blacksmiths, three machinists, three boss stonecutters, nineteen masons, a number of physicians, and other heads of departments. The track has been laid from Matadi to the Mapoza Valley, and some distance up the valley toward the Palaballa highlands, and this point once attained, the railroad will encounter few other engineering difficulties all the way to Stanley pool. Three locomotives are now on the track, and all the material is transported by steam. Foundations have been laid for a large bridge across the Mapoza river. The work is making the most favorable progress. The health of Europeans is excellent.

A DISHONORED CHECK

Causes a Bank to Lose $5,000 in a Damage Suit.

An Augusta, Ga., dispatch says: J. M. Berry got a verdict for $5,000 damages against the National Park bank in the city court Tuesday. Mr. Berry sued the bank for refusing to honor his check for $2,258 issued to J. F. Frank, of Okawville, Ill., when he had $8,000 deposited in that bank, which greatly injured his credit and caused him to suffer mortification is being compelled to make a satisfactory explanation to his creditors. The bank subsequently admitted the error on the part of the clerk in not having passed the deposited money to Berry's credit.

COVERED THE MESSENGER

With Their Revolvers and Secured Over Two Thousand Dollars.

A dispatch from Missoula, Mont., says: Friday afternoon two masked men entered a Northern Pacific express car on the Missoula and Clearwater railroad, and at the points of their guns made Express Messenger Cone open the safe and give up all the money in custody, $2,500. This robbery occurred near the Montana and Idaho state line.

COST OF LIVING IN MEXICO.

It is Very High, but Money is Made Easily.

I asked a young American dentist in San Luis Potosi, a city of 100,000 people in the north central part of Mexico—a rich farming country—what it costs to live in Mexico.

The young dentist lives very nicely. Like all of his kind in Mexico, he is making money and he is saving enough to make him rich within the next ten or fifteen years. Said he:

"I keep a close account of my expenses and as I figure it it costs me just about $117 a month. My living costs me for table expenses $2 a day, or $60 a month. I pay $25 a month for my house and I have three servants, who average $4 a month apiece. Here every respectable fellow has to have a cook, man and a chambermaid. In addition to the wages of the servants I have to give them so much a day for food. Each of them expects six cents every morning for tortillas or corn-cakes, which constitute the bread of the common people. Then every week I have to give six cents extra to them for soap. This is the custom and they want the money and not the soap. I once bought twenty-five pounds of soap and tried to dole it out to them, but they wouldn't take it. Washing and ironing are never done in the house in Mexico. There are public washerwomen, who pound and rub the clothes to pieces after wetting them with cold water, which they get from public tanks or ditches. They wear out the clothes in one-third the time that they would be destroyed by Chinamen and I pay them $5 a month for doing it. My butter costs me seventy-five cents a pound, my milk seventeen cents a day, and I pay about six cents a day on the average for charcoal.

"An ordinary hand-me-down suit costs from $20 to $30. Underclothing is very expensive. Calico costs 18 cents a yard. A very ordinary silk necktie sells for $2. Linen cuffs are 50 cents a pair and collars three for $1. My wife's dresses count up, I can tell you, and a man has got to make a good lot of money in Mexico in order to live as well as he does at home."

"I suppose you make it," said he.

"Yes, I do," was the reply, "and any American dentist who will come here and stay can do likewise. I made $5,000 the first year, and I have done considerably better right along since that time. I can charge bigger prices. I got from $100 to $150 for a full set of teeth on rubber. Whenever I administer gas I charge $10 for pulling a tooth, and when a number are pulled I charge $10 for the first tooth and $5 for all succeeding ones. For jerking out a tooth without gas I charge $2. Fillings range from $5 upward, and gold fillings cost from $15 up into the hundreds, according to the size of the cavity and the size of the bank account of the man who has his teeth filled. I always get $500 for making a set of teeth on gold, and all other business is done in proportionate rates."

There are about 700 Americans living in Mexico City. Some of them are very wealthy. A few own houses, and quite a number have rented establishments. Thomas Braniff, who was born on Staten Island, is said to have an income of over $100,000 a year. He is President of the Mexican railway which runs to Vera Cruz, and he has a big plantation, cotton factories, and is one of the leading owners of the Bank of London and Mexico, which is the biggest bank in the country. He is building a house which will cost $100,000 on the Paseo, a fashionable drive of Mexico City. He is the richest American in Mexico. Gen. John B. Frisbie is another rich American. He owns some gold mines near Toluca, and he has one of the most comfortable homes in the capital. He tells me that living is high in Mexico and that his expenses there are about as big as they would be in Washington.—[New York World.

Relic of the Alabama.

Away down in the west of England, in the little seaport town of Bridgewater, in Somersetshire, a Herald correspondent came this week upon an interesting relic of American history in the carved nameboard of the Confederate cruiser Alabama. It is carefully nailed to the wall in the passageway of the house of a local builder. The nameboard was picked up floating in the English Channel about a fortnight after the Alabama was destroyed by the Kearsarge off the French coast, and was found by the father of the present possessor while engaged in deep sea fishing. The name was clear and distinct and carved in letters about three inches deep. On examining the wood it was discovered to be of mahogany. A screw nail of gunmetal was found in the nameboard when it was picked up, and this nail was still in the board when it was found by the present owner.

NOT MOURNING FOR HIM.

A Retired Army Officer Who Sees No Call to Lament the Buffalo.

The disappearance of the buffalo has been the fruitful occasion of much unreasonable sentiment. Men who never saw a buffalo except in a menagerie are especially given to lamentation. An Eastern paper recently gave up a column or more to one of the mourners, probably a woman, who sorrowed with much satisfaction because of the disappearance of large game from the face of the earth. The sad fate of the hippopotamus, the rhinoceros and other useful quadrupeds is often bemoaned, but the American bison comes in for the largest amount of sympathy. Those who enjoyed the personal acquaintance of great numbers of buffalo are not numbered among the eulogists.

A retired army officer, who in his day saw much service on what was called "the plains," said the other day: "I am tolerably familiar with the buffalo and feel justified in saying that one might with equal sense lament the disappearance of the bobtail car. When I first struck the plains those animals bounded and abounded in countless numbers. I remember that once when marching down the Republican valley for miles we passed a herd of the enormous bovines moving up the same valley. They traveled about three miles an hour and we about four, and yet, though going in opposite directions, we were over six hours in passing the herd, which almost filled the valley. Any one who feels that he is a born mathematician can figure out how long that herd was. Compute it for yourself. The herd averaged, I would think, about 300 yards in width. Quite a large aggregation of tough beef, wasn't it?

"Hunting the buffalo was never sport; a plainsman never did it except for food and hides. Occasionally some English tourist or all-around Nimrod would come out West, armed with a complete arsenal of rifles and shot guns of the most cumbersome make and elaborate finish. He would proceed to butcher a few stupid bulls, have the hides carefully dressed, and, I presume, exhibit them with appropriate blood-curdling yarns in the halls of his ancestors.

"I think that, with the exception of a few sentimentalists and naturalists, few see any reason to regret that the buffalo no longer cumbers the earth. He required about three times the acreage that an American steer does for subsistence, his meat was tough and flavorless, his robe not half as good as a Minnesota blanket and five times as heavy, and his habits were inconsistent with a settled country. No, we might as sensibly lament the loss of the trees that once stood where now are fields of corn and wheat. The buffalo served his purpose, fulfilled his destiny and has simply, like other things of the earth, passed away in the Lord's good time."—[Kansas City Times.

A SURPLUS OF CENTS.

The Sub-Treasury at New York Overloaded with Pennies.

A New York dispatch of Saturday says: The officials of the subtreasury in Wall street are struggling with a plethora of bronze cents. Stored away in different parts of the big vaults are 18,400,000 of them. As 1,000 cents weigh seven pounds the weight of woe that is oppressing the officials amount to 72,800 pounds, or more than thirty-six tons. The accumulation is credited to the cent-in-the-slot machines. There is also in the subtreasury $65,000 in nickels, presumably contributions from the nickel-in-the-slot machines.

This was done as a necessary step before the marriage of the young couple, which took place in the presence of the Austrian court and and ministers and a large assembly of distinguished people.

BOAT-RACING IN THE NAVY.

Men-of-War's Men Engaged in Spirited Contests.

One of the first things a man-o'-war's man has to learn is to handle an oar, and he is not long in the service before he finds out that to pull in a boat of one kind or another forms a very large share of his duties when his ship is lying in port anywhere. Setting aside the regular boat drills, there are frequent trips to be made, either to the shore on various errands, or from one ship to another, should his vessel form part of a squadron at the time, and the music of the bugle calling away this or that boat is heard at frequent intervals during the day. At one time the market-boat, with stewards and cooks as passengers; then the mail-boat, with trim marine orderly and his big square leather mail-bag. At another time the huge launches filled with liberty men, or the cutter with officers going ashore for one purpose or another, or the captain's gig bound for an official visit to the flagship, keep their various crews busy enough in all conscience; and this frequent practice, under all conditions of wind and weather that a boat can live in, soon makes Jack as much at home in barge, cutter or gig as a landsman on a street car. To see a boat's crew when called away scramble out on the long boom swung out from the ship's side, and swarm down the hanging rope-ladder, and drop into the boat bobbing up and down on the choppy waves, is a sight one never tires of. The oars are out in a jiffy, and the boat brought alongside the gangway almost before you can say Jack Robinson; and then, its freight duly embarked, its crew, "with a long pull, and a strong pull, and a pull all together," buckle down to work with long rhythmical swing of the oars that sends the craft along like a thing of life.

One would think that the amount of downright hard work Jack goes through in this way would cause him to seek any other means of occupying his leisure than to get into a boat again and pull away harder than ever for the fun of the thing; but he is a keen sportsman, and hardly anything affords him greater pleasure than a spirited contest for supremacy between rival boats' crews.

Boat-racing is encouraged in our navy, and, as far as I know, this has been the case ever since an American fleet of war vessels existed, and our sailors have conquered again and again in friendly bouts with their mates of other nations. British tars more than once, Frenchmen, and others have tossed their oars in salute to winning Yankee crews, and a favorite yarn spun on the fo'c's'le—ay, and in cabin and wardroom, as well—is that which tells of the laurels won by a boat's crew of a solitary Yankee frigate, some two or three score years ago, over the men of the whole French fleet, under the very eyes of the Empress.—[Harper's Weekly.

BANK BADLY BUSTED

As Only $24 Were Left Out of $140,000 Deposited.

A dispatch of Monday from Milford, Mich., says: State Bank Examiner Sherwood closed the Milford State bank September 16th and reported that the bank had failed. "Failed" is a mild word to use in reference to this institution. The bank was established sixteen years ago as a national bank. The principal promoters were the Wilhelm brothers and relatives, with a fine line of directors. One was ex-Governor J. W. Beal, of Flint. The Wilhelms were young men who were known as "hustlers," and they went into all sorts of speculation. They and their relatives owned the controlling stock. The bank had deposits as high as $140,000. The morning after the bank examiners had taken charge there were only $24 in cash in the bank. The assets showed $142,709 and the liabilities $102,000, but it is hard to see how the assets can be made to yield over $15,000. Worthless loans, crazy Kansas boom real estate, patent rights, speculations and poor personal paper represent the balance.

TRADE REVIEW

As Reported by Dun & Co. for the Past Week.

Business failures occurring throughout the country for the week ended November 19 h, as reported to R. G. Dun & Co., number for the United States 352 and for Canada thirty-three, or a total of 285, compared with 291 last week and 266 the week previous. For the corresponding week last year the figures were 274.

Much has happened of late to depress business and shake confidence, and yet confidence is not shaken, and the volume of business is still close to the greatest ever attained. The bank failure at Boston caused scarcely a ripple of excitement. The failure of speculative banks at Berlin has been industriously used to depress stocks during the past week, but the average price of shares is higher than a week ago. This country begins to realize that with only supplies of grain to keep the millions in Europe from starvation, besides meats, cotton and oil, which other countries must have, the United States is in a stronger position than any other nation, and need not quake at every European alarm. Prices are settling downward, with enormous production, but the fact that such production continues shows that low prices are not ruinous.

At Pittsburg the iron market is weaker. The glassworks are all in operation, and coal miners have resumed. At Savannah and Charleston trade is somewhat depressed, apparently by the very low price of cotton, and money is rather tight. At Jacksonville business is very brisk, but at Richmond dry weather prevents the marketing of tobacco. Manufacturers are active. The most stubborn iron market ever known gives a surprise to many, for in spite of the unprecedented production the prospect of some accumulation of stocks does not disturb strong makers, who reckon that it may be well for the country to lay in and hold much larger stocks than heretofore, so that sudden and violent fluctuations may not be so readily produced.

Large sales of rails at the west are reported, 175,000 tons in two weeks, but the markets for other finished products are not materially altered.

A BETTER TONE.

The alarm about the money market has passed, and no disturbance is apprehended this year. Industries are, on the whole, well employed, and it is especially noteworthy this week that there is a better tone in the branches of trade which have been most embarrassed.

GRAIN RECEIPTS.

Receipts of wheat at western centers continue at the rate of more than a million bushels daily, and exports are also large, but the price has declined 2¼ cents on sales of 38,000,000 bushels.

Cotton receipts continue to exceed last year's, notwithstanding the reported shortness of the crops, and, while the exports for the crop year thus far are but slightly less than a year ago, the stocks at the principal ports are 1,200,000 bales, against 600,000 last year at the same date. There was a decline to 8.06 cents, but the price recovered on Liverpool buying to 8.12, the sales here being 600,000 bales for the week.

TO HELP THE MINERS

In Their Fight Against the Convict Laws of Tennessee.

A Nashville dispatch says: The Central Labor Union, composed of delegates from every branch of organized labor met Saturday for the purpose of naming delegates to attend the meeting of miners at Newcomb to consider the troubles growing out of the competition with convict labor in East Tennessee. Three delegates were selected and the following resolutions adopted:

Resolved, by the Central Labor Union of Nashville, That we heartily sympathize with the miners in their present labor troubles and with all others who come in competition with convict labor, and will use all of our influence to secure an abrogation or modification of the lease system at the next meeting of the state legislature.

Resolved, That while we sympathize with the miners of East Tennessee, and will do all in our power to assist them when in trouble, we feel that no permanent good can result in lawlessness or in defiance of the law, either to the miners or to organized labor, but will naturally result in a loss of respect and sympathy for our cause. Therefore, we believe that the best interests of all is to demand that a conservative course be pursued, and all interested agree to abide by the law as it exists, until we can secure legislative action.

NEWS OF THE SOUTH BRIEFLY PARAGRAPHED

Forming an Epitome of Daily Happenings Here and There.

The Tennessee state board of pension examiners adjourned Thursday, after allowing three pensions at $300, two at $120, and eighty-six at $100 per annum. The total allowance to date amounts to $41,000.

The exchanges of Memphis, Tenn., held a meeting Wednesday and passed a resolution requesting the county court to appropriate $20,000 toward a fund for the proper representation of the state of Tennessee at the world's fair.

The Savannah, Florida and Western railway and other roads have put on a through sleeper from Cincinnati to Tampa, Fla., via Thomasville, and new trains were put on known as the Louisville and Nashville limited, which carry the sleeper. The train goes to Florida from Thomasville, Ga., over the Monticello branch.

The First National bank of Wilmington, N. C. suspended Wednesday. The following notice was posted on the door: "In consequence of the stringency in financial affairs and the inability to meet further demands, the directors of this bank have decided in the interest of all concerned to suspend business until further notice." The capital stock is $350,000. The last published statement shows a deposit of $405,000. An employe of the bank who is familiar with its affairs has just expressed his opinion that the depositors would suffer no loss.

The census bulletin of North Carolina by counties and minor civil divisions show the population in 1890 was 1,617,947, an increase during the decade of 318,197, or 15.59 per cent. Of ninety-six counties, twelve show a decrease. Twenty-three cities and towns show a population of 20,000 or more. The largest numerical increase in urban population, as well as the largest percentage of increase, is found in Asheville. Concord, Henderson, Winston, Durham, Reidsville, Statesville, Oxford and Salem all show more than 100 per cent increase. In only one town is a decrease shown, and that is very slight.

THE CONGO RAILWAY.

Over Two Thousand Men Employed in this Important Enterprise.

A cablegram of Monday from Brussels says: On July 31st last, 1,719 workmen were engaged upon the Congo railroad. A little later 500 new laborers arrived, and the actual number employed on September 15 h was 2,320. These workmen, who are largely Zanzibari, Krumen and Haussa, are under the charge of 200 white men, including fifteen civil engineers, nine superintendents of grading, seventeen boss carpenters, ten keepers of machinery and supplies, twenty-one blacksmiths, three machinists, three boss stonecutters, nineteen masons, a number of physicians, and other heads of departments. The track has been laid from Matadi to the Mapoza Valley, and some distance up the valley toward the Palaballa highlands, and this point once attained, the railroad will encounter few other engineering difficulties all the way to Stanley pool. Three locomotives are now on the track, and all the material is transported by steam. Foundations have been laid for a large bridge across the Mapoza river. The work is making the most favorable progress. The health of Europeans is excellent.

A DISHONORED CHECK

Causes a Bank to Lose $5,000 in a Damage Suit.

At Augusta, Ga., dispatch says: J. M. Berry got a verdict for $5,000 damages against the National Park bank in the city court Tuesday. Mr. Berry sued the bank for refusing to honor his check for $2,258 issued to J. F. Frank, of Okawville, Ill., when he had $3,000 deposited in that bank, which greatly injured his credit and caused him to suffer mortification in being compelled to make a satisfactory explanation to his creditors. The bank subsequently admitted the error on the part of the clerk in not having passed the deposited money to Berry's credit.

COVERED THE MESSENGER

With Their Revolvers and Secured Over Two Thousand Dollars.

A dispatch from Missoula, Mont., says: Friday afternoon two masked men entered a Northern Pacific express car on the Missoula and Ocean D'Alene railroad, and at the points of their guns made Express Messenger Gage open the safe and give up all the money in consideration $2,000. COST OF LIVING IN MEXICO.

It is Very High, but Money is Made Easily.

I asked a young American dentist in San Luis Potosi, a city of 100,000 people in the north central part of Mexico—a rich farming country—what it costs to live in Mexico.

The young dentist lives very nicely. Like all of his kind in Mexico, he is making money and he is saving enough to make him rich within the next ten or fifteen years. Said he:

"I keep a close account of my expenses and as I figure it it costs me just about $117 a month. My living costs me for table expenses $3 a day, or $60 a month. I pay $25 a month for my house and I have three servants, who average $4 a month apiece. Here every respectable fellow has to have a cook, man and a chambermaid. In addition to the wages of the servants I have to give them so much a day for food. Each of them expects six cents every morning for tortillas or corn-cakes, which constitute the bread of the common people. Then every week I have to give six cents extra to them for soap. This is the custom and they want the money and not the soap. I once bought twenty-five pounds of soap and tried to do it out to them, but they wouldn't take it. Washing and ironing are never done in the house in Mexico. There are public washerwomen, who pound and rub the clothes to pieces after wetting them with cold water, which they get from public tanks or ditches. They wear out the clothes in one-third the time that they would be destroyed by Chinamen and I pay them $5 a month for doing it. My butter costs me seventy-five cents a pound, my milk seventeen cents a day, and I pay about six cents a day on the average for charcoal.

"An ordinary hand-me-down suit costs from $20 to $30. Underclothing is very expensive. Calico costs 18 cents a yard. A very ordinary silk necktie sells for $2. Linen cuffs are 50 cents a pair and collars three for $1. My wife's dresses count up, I can tell you, and a man has got to make a good lot of money in Mexico in order to live as well as he does at home."

"I suppose you make it," said he.

"Yes, I do," was the reply, "and any American dentist who will come here and stay can do likewise. I made $5,000 the first year, and I have done considerably better right along since that time. I can charge bigger prices. I got from $100 to $150 for a full set of teeth on rubber. Whenever I administer gas I charge $10 for pulling a tooth, and when a number are pulled I charge $10 for the first tooth and $5 for all succeeding ones. For jerking out a tooth without gas I charge $2. Fillings range from $5 upward, and gold fillings cost from $15 up into the hundreds, according to the size of the cavity and the size of the bank account of the man who has his teeth filled. I always get $500 for making a set of teeth on gold, and all other business is done in proportionate rates."

There are about 700 Americans living in Mexico City. Some of them are very wealthy. A few own houses, and quite a number have rented establishments. Thomas Braniff, who was born on Staten Island, is said to have an income of over $100,000 a year. He is President of the Mexican railway which runs to Vera Cruz, and he has a big plantation, cotton factories, and is one of the leading owners of the Bank of London and Mexico, which is the biggest bank in the country. He is building a house which will cost $100,000 on the Paseo, a fashionable drive of Mexico City. He is the richest American in Mexico. Gen. John B. Frisbie is another rich American. He owns some gold mines near Toluca, and he has one of the most comfortable homes in the capital. He tells me that living is high in Mexico and that his expenses there are about as big as they would be in Washington.—[New York World.

Relic of the Alabama.

Away down in the west of England, in the little seaport town of Bridgewater, in Somersetshire, a Herald correspondent came this week upon an interesting relic of American history in the carved nameboard of the Confederate cruiser Alabama. It is carefully nailed to the wall in the passageway of the house of a local builder. The nameboard was picked up floating in the English Channel about a fortnight after the Alabama was destroyed by the Kearsarge off the French coast, and was found by the father of the present possessor while engaged in deep sea fishing. The name was clear and distinct and carved in letters about three inches deep. On examining the spot it was discovered to be of rough deal. If genuine and of undoubted [illegible] it would be worth [illegible]

NOT MOURNING FOR HIM.

A Retired Army Officer Who Sees No Call to Lament the Buffalo.

The disappearance of the buffalo has been the fruitful occasion of much unreasonable sentiment. Men who never saw a buffalo except in a menagerie are especially given to lamentation. An Eastern paper recently gave up a column or more to one of the mourners, probably a woman, who sorrowed with much satisfaction because of the disappearance of large game from the face of the earth. The sad fate of the hippopotamus, the rhinoceros and other useful quadrupeds is often bemoaned, but the American bison comes in for the largest amount of sympathy. Those who enjoyed the personal acquaintance of great numbers of buffalo are not numbered among the eulogists.

A retired army officer, who in his day saw much service on what was called "the plains," said the other day: "I am tolerably familiar with the buffalo and feel justified in saying that one might with equal sense lament the disappearance of the bobtail car. When I first struck the plains those animals bounded and abounded in countless numbers. I remember that once when marching down the Republican valley for miles we passed a herd of the enormous bovines moving up the same valley. They traveled about three miles an hour and we about four, and yet, though going in opposite directions, we were over six hours in passing the herd, which almost filled the valley. Any one who feels that he is a born mathematician can figure out how long that herd was. Compute it for yourself. The herd averaged, I would think, about 300 yards in width. Quite a large aggregation of tough beef, wasn't it?

"Hunting the buffalo was never sport; a plainsman never did it except for food and hides. Occasionally some English tourist or all-around Nimrod would come out West, armed with a complete arsenal of rifles and shot guns of the most cumbersome make and elaborate finish. He would proceed to butcher a few stupid bulls, have the hides carefully dressed, and, I presume, exhibit them with appropriate blood-curdling yarns in the halls of his ancestors.

"I think that, with the exception of a few sentimentalists and naturalists, few see any reason to regret that the buffalo no longer cumbers the earth. He required about three times the acreage that an American steer does for subsistence, his meat was tough and flavorless, his robe not half as good as a Minnesota blanket and five times as heavy, and his habits were inconsistent with a settled country. No, we might as sensibly lament the loss of the trees that once stood where now are fields of corn and wheat. The buffalo served his purpose, fulfilled his destiny and has simply, like other things of the earth, passed away in the Lord's good time."—[Kansas City Times.

A SURPLUS OF CENTS.

The Sub-Treasury at New York Overloaded with Pennies.

A New York dispatch of Saturday says: The officials of the subtreasury in Wall street are struggling with a plethora of bronze cents. Stored away in different parts of the big vaults are 16,400,000 of them. As 1,000 cents weigh seven pounds the weight of woe that is oppressing the officials amount to 72,800 pounds, or more than thirty-six tons. The accumulation is credited to the cent-in-the-slot machines. There is also in the subtreasury $65,000 in nickels, presumably contributions from the nickel-in-the-slot machines.

A Vienna, Austria, dispatch says: At Hofburg, Sunday, an imposing and highly important ceremony was performed when Archduchess Louise, of Tuscany, and Prince Frederick Augustus, of Saxony, renounced their title and rights to the Austrian throne. This was done as a necessary step before the marriage of the young couple, which took place in the presence of the Austrian court and and ministers and a large assembly of distinguished people.

BOAT-RACING IN THE NAVY.

Men-of-War's Men Engaged in Spirited Contests.

One of the first things a man-o'-war's man has to learn is to handle an oar, and he is not long in the service before he finds out that to pull in a boat of one kind or another forms a very large share of his duties when his ship is lying in port anywhere. Setting aside the regular boat drills, there are frequent trips to be made, either to the shore on various errands, or from one ship to another, should his vessel form part of a squadron at the time, and the music of the bugle calling away this or that boat is heard at frequent intervals during the day. At one time the market-boat, with stewards and cooks as passengers; then the mail-boat, with trim marine orderly and his big square leather mail-bag. At another time the huge launches filled with liberty men, or the cutter with officers going ashore for one purpose or another, or the captain's gig bound for an official visit to the flagship, keep their various crews busy enough in all conscience; and this frequent practice, under all conditions of wind and weather that a boat can live in, soon makes Jack as much at home in barge, cutter or gig as a landsman on a street car. To see a boat's crew when called away scramble out on the long boom swung out from the ship's side, and swarm down the hanging rope-ladder, and drop into the boat bobbing up and down on the choppy waves, is a sight one never tires of. The oars are out in a jiffy, and the boat brought alongside the gangway almost before you can say Jack Robinson; and then, its freight duly embarked, its crew, "with a long pull, and a strong pull, and a pull all together," buckle down to work with long rhythmical swing of the oars that sends the craft along like a thing of life.

One would think that the amount of downright hard work Jack goes through in this way would cause him to seek any other means of occupying his leisure than to get into a boat again and pull away harder than ever for the fun of the thing; but he is a keen sportsman, and hardly anything affords him greater pleasure than a spirited contest for supremacy between rival boats' crews.

Boat-racing is encouraged in our navy, and, as far as I know, this has been the case ever since an American fleet of war vessels existed, and our sailors have conquered again and again in friendly bouts with their mates of other nations. British tars more than once, Frenchmen, and others have tossed their oars in salute to winning Yankee crews, and a favorite yarn spun on the fo'c's'le—ay, and in cabin and wardroom as well—is that which tells of the laurels won by a boat's crew of a solitary Yankee frigate, some two or three score years ago, over the men of the whole French fleet, under the very eyes of the Empress.—[Harper's Weekly.

BANK BADLY BUSTED

As Only $24 Were Left Out of $140,000 Deposited.

A dispatch of Monday from Milford, Mich., says: State Bank Examiner Sherwood closed the Milford State bank September 16th and reported that the bank had failed. "Failed" is a mild word to use in reference to this institution. The bank was established sixteen years ago as a national bank. The principal promoters were the Wilhelm brothers and relatives, with a fine line of directors. One was ex-Governor J. W. Beal, of Flint. The Wilhelms were young men who were known as "hustlers," and they went into all sorts of speculations. They and their relatives owned the controlling stock. The bank had deposits as high as $140,000. The morning after the bank examiners had taken charge there were only $24 in cash in the bank. The assets showed $145,709 and the liabilities $139,000, but it is hard to see how the assets can be made to yield over $15,000. Worthless loans, crazy Kansas boom real estate, patent rights, speculations and poor personal paper represent the balance.

Congress meets next Monday. Crisp, of Georgia, and Mills, of Texas, are the leading candidates for speaker of the House.

The News says that there are sixty-eight candidates for county commissioner in Jefferson county. A friend at our elbow suggests that when these candidates visit Blue Creek they should at least keep themselves in a kissable humor.—Tuskaloosa Gazette.

The VIEW has received notice from Bill Stevens, the high muck-a-muck of the Republican camp in the fourth district, that the mass meeting of Republicans advertised to take place at Calera on the 15th inst., will not be held. No reason given. Another meeting may possibly be called later.

At Montgomery a bill of discovery was filed in the Chancery Court Saturday by Eliza Brown vs. Moses Brothers for a discovery of the assets of Moses Brothers not embraced in the assignment, and numerous interrogations as to what disposition was made of the money by Moses Brothers, placed in their bank by their depositors.

It is the fad now for every woman to have an avocation whether she considers herself under moral or financial compulsion so to do or not. The turning of an honest penny is no shame now-a-days even to the daughters of millionnaires, and now few indeed are the pretty creatures in this day and time without a private source for pin-money.

How to Make a Live Town.

The following recipe for making a live town is taken from an exchange, which speaks advisedly:

"Grit, push, snap, vim, energy, churches, schools, academies, morality, enterprise, harmony, cordiality, cheap property, advertising, healthy location, talk about it, help to improve it, patronize its merchants, faith exhibited by good works, honest competition in business, help all public enterprises, elect good men to office, speak well of its public-spirited citizens, and be one of them yourself. Remember that every dollar invested in permanent local improvement is that much on interest. Always cheer on the men that go in for improvements. By following this recipe you are sure to have a live town."

The Only Way Out.

At the recent National W. C. T. U. Convention, Frances Willard sketched vividly the evil condition of our politics, and said:

President Andrew D. White says: "Without the slightest exaggeration, and with very few exceptions, the city governments of the United States are the very worse in Christendom— the most expensive, the most inefficient, and the most corrupt."

I do not see any way out for this country, which cannot very well go back on its position as to manhood suffrage, except to improve the quality of voting by admitting its intelligent women, and barring out the ignorant women, thus putting a premium upon knowledge and character as conditions of the voter. It is my opinion that if matters go on as they have done for the next ten or twenty years, the best manhood of the land will come to the women, imploring them to accept the franchise and deliver the country. Last year half a million foreigners, of the baser sort, immigrated hither. We cannot indefinitely stand such a strain as that, and in no way can we bring the American element into our governmental life except by introducing the women. Such a test as I intimate would bar out the ignorant colored women and foreigners, and place the balance of power in the hands of the abler class, mentally and morally, among the women of the republic. This would be done in no spirit of unfriendliness toward the debarred, but only to give them the highest possible motive for improving their minds—namely, the promise of participation in the government,—and in order that, when improved, we may have a decent government for their participation and development.

A Region of Great Resources.

In accordance with my promise I will attempt to give you some facts in regard to our mineral wealth and other advantages of this section:

I will begin with Mr. R. L. Woolley's fine farm. This place is situated 2½ miles north of this point, and is within ¼ of a mile of the northern line of the county. On this farm is situated a splendid vein of gold bearing quartz, which when tested has been found to contain about 60 per cent. of pure gold. This magnificent deposit only needs capital and labor to develop it into a grand success. Capitol seeking investment can find no safer place to locate than right here. In a few months, at farthest, a line of railroad will be completed running within ¼ of a mile of this gold vein, and successful mining operations could be carried on with very small expense. In addition to the above there are immense quantities of fine brown iron ore, through the centre of which this new line will run. Taken all together this farm of Mr. Woolley, offers inducements that no capitalist can afford to ignore.

Leaving Mr. Woolley's farm, we come next to J. M. Garner's place. Here is another large deposit of brown ore, reaching on to Mr. J. B. Moore's farm. This ore is of the finest quality and is situated in the finest agricultural section of the county. These lands are highly productive and are well watered and timbered with the finest yellow pine in the State. When the proposed road is built, it will tap the magnificent forests, and such an era of prosperity as will be inaugurated has never been witnessed in this section of the State. Immense fortunes are here needing only the magic touch of capital and development, to make them an assured fact.

We now pass from the above farms to Mr. Joab Reynolds and G. G. West. On the Reynolds' place is one of the most superb natural lakes in the State. This lake is about 300 yards wide and has an average depth of 500 feet. Here could be built the finest summer and winter resort in the South, and with the proper encouragement Uncle Jack would make it a success that every citizen in the State would be proud of.

The West farm possesses many advantages and is owned by a clever, genial gentleman.

Our next point to stop is the Edding's farm. Here we find all the advantages spoken of above, except the lake and in addition, the proprietor Mr. Ezekiel Eddings has in his possession one of the most superb diamonds it has ever been the good fortune of the writer to see. It is a rare jewel and one that its owner guards jealously. Several attempts have been made by different parties to secure this beautiful gem, but so far the attempts have proven fruitless. This jewel cannot be bought, begged or stolen.

With a climate unsurpassed, pure free stone water in abundance, unlimited mineral and timber wealth, as fine agricultural section in many respects as any in the Union, scenery as lovely as any in the South, society unsurpassed, schools, churches, and all other advantages that make a prosperous and happy people, how can we help developing? Time will verify my assertion, that within the next five years this section will grow beyond the most sanguine expectation.

Next week I will notice other points.

Educational Mistakes.

From Daily News.

The whole system of education in this country, including the advice of the parent as well as the fourth of July oration of the winged patriot, who is not worth the powder and lead it would take to kill him, tends to inordinate ambition vain expectation, disappointment and failure. The country needs useful men and women, well taught in lessons of patience, contentment, industry and love of country. The country is given year after year an army of useless men and women, full of foolish aspiration, silly ambition, impatience discontent and the love of themselves. They are equipped by their parents and teachers and sent forth to shoot at the moon. They fail and become a burden to themselves and to others.

Camping Here in Their Native State.

A curious caravan rested in Randolph street yesterday morning. There were three wagons, two covered, and all drawn by steers; diminutive specimens they were, and two to each wagon. The covers to the wagons were weather beaten, and this with other evidences of a long journey prompted inquiry, when it was learned that the caravan had rested in Eufaula after a journey all the way overland from Texas.

With the humble outfit were Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, a grown son and daughter and two or three smaller children. They were returning to their old home in Early county, Ga., after an absence in Texas of nineteen years.

They started from Polk county where they lived in Eastern Texas, on the fourth of May, crossing the Red River at Alexandria, La., and the Mississippi at Natchez.

They were detained in Louisiana three months on account of sickness, which gives three months of actual travel, and as they averaged 12 miles a day, Mr. Taylor said, in reaching Eufaula they had covered about 1,140 miles. They passed to the south of Mobile, came through Greenville, and thence to Troy and Eufaula. After feeding and resting here yesterday morning the journey was resumed, and their beloved Georgia soil reached again after a long, and to them, dreary absence, for Mr. Taylor said that Eastern Texas was the poorest spot on the earth.

Anyhow, if you live in Georgia or Alabama, it is a mighty good thing to stay. Have you ever noticed that?—Times and News.

ADVICE TO YOUNG MEN.

ADAPTED FROM NOAH PORTER.

Young men you are the architects of your own fortune, rely upon your own strength of body and soul. Take for your star self reliance, faith, honesty and industry. Inscribe on your banner: Luck is a fool, pluck is a hero. Don't take too much advice. Keep at your helm and steer your own ship, and remember that the great art of commanding is to take a fair share of the work. Don't practice too much humanity. Think well of yourself, strike out, assume your own position. Put potatoes in your cart over a rough road and all the small ones go the bottom. Rise above the envious and jealous; fire above the mark you intend to hit; energy, invincible determination with a right motive are the levers that move the world. Don't drink, don't chew, don't smoke, don't deceive, don't marry until you can support a wife, be in earnest, be self-reliant, be generous, be civil, read the papers, advertise your business in the CHILTON VIEW, make money and do good with it, love your God and fellowmen, love truth and virtue, love your country and obey its laws. If this advice be implicitly followed by the young men of the country the millenium is at hand.

Foolish Advertisers.

"No," he answered, "he didn't want no goods—he had plenty of goods already. What he wanted was customers. 'Twas easy enough to buy goods, but the up hill business was to sell them. His house was packed full of goods now."

"Well to be candid with you," said the traveling man, "it does look a little dull around here. What is the matter with you? Your neighbor over the way seems to be doing a thriving business."

"My neighbor! That's what everybody says. He is a big humbug—he's the biggest humbug in the country. He baits the people with big advertisements; keeps two columns in the paper all the time; changes it twice a month; always something new; big bargains, low prices, special indooements—slush—nonesense! And the people flock over there like a lot of fools. He is the biggest humbug in the country—his goods ain't no better nor cheaper than mine."

"Do you mean to say that you don't advertise in the paper at all?"

Advertise? Do you think that I am going to spend my life working for a lot of newspaper men and printers? No, sir; I'll set down and put my foot first."

And he set down and petted it.—Ex.

The Equitable Life Assurance Society

OF THE UNITED STATES.

In selecting a company in which to insure, why not take the best instead of being persuaded by the eloquence of representatives of weaker companies? For what is less advantageous? It is the company, not the agent, with which the assured must deal after the policy is once taken. It is the company, not the agent that pays the dividends and meets claims when they mature. It is nothing more to assure in the best and strongest company than any other established on a sound business basis; therefore, we again ask, WHY NOT TAKE THE BEST?

Hendricks and Marshall, the Franklin county burglars, who were captured at Verbena last summer, were tried Monday for burglaries committed in this county. They were convicted and will go to the penitentiary, each for twenty years. As Marshall came out of the courthouse door after his sentence he met one of the witnesses in his case, Mr. Henderson, of Mountain Creek, and assaulted him, but was pulled away by the sheriff before any harm was done. When the prisoners reached the jail, Mr. F. A. Gulledge, undertook to examine Hendricks for any peculiar marks by which to identify him in the event of escape from the penitentiary. As he went towards Hendricks the latter gave him a hard blow and a vigorous kick and a lot of vile cursing, and threatened if he ever got out of the penitentiary to kill him. Further examination was not made. The prisoner being desperate didn't seem to want anything better than for some one to shoot or enable him so that he could not work.

Miss Fannie Griffin Home From the National Convention.

Miss Fannie Griffin has returned from Boston where she has been attending the National W. C. T. U. Convention. She had a most delightful time and has many interesting things to tell. Among other honors paid her, she was invited to speak at Harvard where 1,700 young men revel in intellectual opportunities. And at Wellesley where young women have spread daily before them the highest training to wonderful womanhood.

Miss Griffin is full of admiration for the culture and æsthetic environment of the average Bostonian, but this "moral obliquity on the equality of the races" is just a bit of incongruity that made her thoughtful. She reports Boston a "woman's paradise," and that there are 20,000 more women there than men. She said that this W. C. T. U. Convention was the most successful of all the seventeen that preceded it. Dense crowds stood for hours about the doors waiting for admission. Many hundreds of seats were paid for last April. Scholarly men like Joseph Cook, and Edward Everett Hale gave their presence and approval. She is convinced that no organization on earth ever possessed the power that this has, with science and religion as the basis of its structure. JENNIE GERALD.

Grand Jury Report.

STATE OF ALABAMA, CHILTON CO.
Circuit Court, Fall Term.

We the Grand Jury, of Chilton County, beg leave to submit this our final report. We have discharged all the duties imposed upon us in the best manner that our time would admit, and we have given the books and papers of the county officers a thorough investigation and find them all neatly and correctly kept, with the exception of the books of the county treasurer. We find that his books are not kept in the manner that they should be, and while the amount of cash he has on hand shows his honest intentions, we recommend that the county treasurer be more careful in the keeping of his books.

We have examined the jail of the county and find the prisoners reasonably well cared for, but we recommend that the Sheriff make a greater effort to have same kept clean and that steps be taken to render the odor of same more pleasant.

In our investigation of the poor house, we find that its inmates are comfortably situated, unless it be for the want of bedding, and we recommend that the Commissioners' Court investigate the matter and that they be well cared for.

We have examined the courthouse and we find it uncomfortable dilapidated and unsafe for the records of the county, and we feel that the people of Chilton county are amply able to erect a new one and make the interest of the people more safe, and recommend that the same be built.

We especially recommend that the people of the town of Clanton work the streets of same and if they fail we recommend that some legal steps be taken to put the town under the general road law. We recommend that the Justices of the peace be more prompt in making their report to the Grand Jury, and that the next Grand Jury look after those who have failed to report at this time.

We have dilligently inquired into the crimes of the county and have investigated sixty-eight cases out of which number we have returned twenty-three true bills.

And now having finished our labors and thanking your Honor for your very able and lucid charge, and extending our sincere sympathy to our able solicitor, Mr. Fitzpatrick, in the sickness of his family, and on account of which he has been absent, and appreciating the services of his assistant, MR. O. P. Bentley, we asked to be now discharged.

Very respectfully submitted,

CONSUMPTION CURED.
An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India Missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this recipe in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. Noyes, 820 Powers' Blk, Rochester, N. Y. apr16-y

Why Not.

Any man complains in a universal, yet how many quit the occupation? Each time day after day toiling in a Pike-harrow. The man who worked by and month, get on a few acres of poorest, trying to make a goodness enough to support himself and family, when common sense and his past experience tell him it won't do it, is one of them. The man who works year after year in a shop at $20 a month, when his family expenses are $25, is another. My friend, you cannot trundle a seven-and-a-half foot saddle girth around an eight-cot horse—you cannot bring the ends together and keep them there without killing the animal. If your income is not large enough to keep you and your family, or if you want to save money and can't do it on your present salary, write to R. F. Johnson & Co., Richmond, Va., and they will show you how to add $40 or $50 a month to it; or if you can give them all of your time they will put you in a position to establish a paying business of your own where you can make from $100 to $200 per month. Don't wait to turn it over in your mind a few days. "Procrastination is the thief of time," and many a golden opportunity slips from our grasp forever through the want of promptness. Write them at once.

Deaf for a Year

Hearing Restored and Catarrh Cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Rochester, N. Y., July 27, 1891.

"Three years ago, as a result of catarrh, I lost my hearing entirely and was deaf for more than a year. I tried various things to cure it, and had several physicians, but no improvement was apparent. I could Distinguish No Sound.

I was intending putting myself under the care of a specialist when some one suggested that possibly Hood's Sarsaparilla would do me some good. I began taking it without expecting much help. To my surprise and great joy I found when I had taken three bottles that my hearing was returning. I kept on taking

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Till I had taken three more, when I stopped. It is now over a year, and I am troubled but very little with the catarrh. I consider this a very remarkable cure." HANNAH HICKS, 89 Carter St.

"August Flower"

Perhaps you do not believe these statements concerning Green's August Flower. Well, we can't make you. We can't force conviction into your head or medicine into your throat. We don't want to. The money is yours, and the misery is yours; and until you are willing to believe, and spend the one for the relief of the other, they will stay so. John H. Foster, 1122 Brown Street, Philadelphia, says: "My wife is a little Scotch woman, thirty years of age and of a naturally delicate disposition. For five or six years past she has been suffering from Dyspepsia. She became so bad at last that she could not sit down to a meal but she had to vomit it as soon as she had eaten it. Two bottles of your August Flower have cured her, after many doctors failed. She can now eat anything, and enjoy it; and as for Dyspepsia, she does not know that she ever had it."

ALLIANCE TALKS

NEWS OF THE ORDER AND ITS MEMBERS.

Reform Press Comment and Items of Interest to Alliancemen Everywhere.

At a recent meeting of the Illinois State Alliance, the Illinois Alliance, published at Springfield, was consolidated with the Monitor, of St. Louis.

One sub-Alliance in Alabama has disbanded because the "Alliance demands are wrong." Sixteen hundred HAVE NOT disbanded because they are right.

There is a few so-called members of the Alliance in North Carolina, says the Progressive Farmer, who bitterly oppose the Alliance platform. But for every one of these is several hundred who are as true as steel.

***

The Business Agent is a new paper just started by the North Carolina State Alliance Business Agency. It will be devoted to the publication of matter directly concerning the agency, and will adhere to the Ocala platform in all its editorial utterances.

The Farmers' Light (Harlem, Ga.) says: The subsidized press and moss-back politicians want to know why the Alliance does not talk more farming and less politics. The reason is very apparent. What is the use of talking farming when it costs ten cents to raise cotton, and "the power of money to oppress" takes it from them at seven cents.

The Alliance Gazette (Hutchinson, Kan.) believes it firmly, as witness: "We uncompromisingly adhere to the opinion that a man or a woman who works twelve hours a day for six days in the week is entitled to a good living—not a bare sustenance, but a good living. Not only the necessaries of life, but its luxuries as well. When such is not the case something is wrong, and the people should know no rest till the wrong is righted.

The following resolutions were adopted by the State Alliance of Washington at its recent organization. Thus another State has fallen into line under the national banner of the order:

Resolved, That the State Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union of Washington do most heartily indorse the Ocala demands in full.

Resolved, That we adopt the ritual and secret work adopted by the National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union of America.

The Caucasian (Clinton, N. C.) says: "When the farmers and other wealth-producers began to complain of the low and falling prices of the products of their labor and to suspect that it was due to a contracted currency, the money power through its subsidized papers began and has since been repeating the statement that the law of supply and demand alone controlled prices. The time was when the farmer would swallow this, but now he is thinking for himself and knows that the law of supply and demand regulates prices only when the volume of money in circulation is controlled by the same law."

The Order in Colorado is doing well, especially when the somewhat scattered condition of the people is considered. Farming is not conducted in this state as in many others, which makes organization much more difficult. In spite of this the Alliance has steadily increased in members and grown in favor. Its state officers have been efficient and have received excellent support from the reform papers, of which there are a number in the state. There is hardly a state in the Union that could receive any more benefit from the final triumph of Alliance principles than Colorado.

The Cotton Plant (Orangeburg, S. C.) says: "Why should not the farmer take a hand in politics? Stop and think about this and then ask who it is that would keep him out of politics? In nine cases out of ten it is the class of people who hitherto have been most active in politics and who have enjoyed a monopoly of the business so long that they begin to look upon it as their special property. Be easy, gentlemen, and if you can't be easy, be as easy as you can—the farmer is in politics, and he is in it to stay. All the little, spiteful flings and patronizing advice you give only confirms him in his determination to stay.

The Alliance in North Carolina is, as every one knows who reads Alliance literature, doing splendidly. No comment will do full justice to the operations and methods of the Order in that State. The brethren not only know what "the fight is about," but are able and anxious to make it. Since its first organization, the Order in North Carolina has prospered. It has never met with a repulse, and has continually increased in numbers and importance. From the beginning it has been exceedingly fortunate in the selection of its officers, who have nobly stood for the prosperity of the Order. The State organ, The Progressive Farmer, (President Polk's paper), has done gallant service in the cause of reform. There are many county papers also throughout the State that are able exponents of Alliance principles, and are aiding in the great work. Taken as a whole the Alliance of the State stands at the front an example of pluck, consistency and success that is worthy of emulation by all the other States.—Economist.

In discussing the constitutionality of the sub-treasury plan an opposition paper makes use of the following extraordinary legal statement:

First, we regard it as unconstitutional, because the constitution nowhere authorizes such a thing. Now just here it is proper to state that some have insisted that we should point out that part of the constitution that the scheme comes in conflict with. We beg to remind such, that a thing doesn't require to be forbidden by the Federal constitution in order to be unconstitutional; it is only required that it can not be found in the constitution.

Commenting on this the National Economist says: If this be true nine-tenths of the laws on the statute books are void. Are rivers and harbors mentioned in the constitution? Are subsidies to railroads and steamships found? Does it say anything about the Nicaragua Canal, pensions to civilians, national expositions, national banks, the purchase of silver, irrigation, geological survey, or expeditions to the north pole? Where in this record instrument is found mention of the force-bill, the demonetization of silver, warehousing whisky, loaning money to railroads and [illegible]? The fact is nearly all legislation is at the present time based upon what is not found in the constitution, but its implied powers. Heavy tax the trusts.

Of Brief Items of Interest From Various Sources.

A committee of the Federation of Labor had an interview with President Harrison Tuesday.

The Grand Ducal theatre at Oldenburg, Germany was destroyed by fire Wednesday.

George Youngclaus, 1714 Fifty-first street, Chicago, was arrested Wednesday for selling restaurants horseflesh as beef.

The comptroller of currency has authorized the Manufacturers' National bank, of Harrimon, Tenn., to begin business with a capital of $50,000.

The archbishop of Aix, France, charged with writing an insulting letter to the minister of public worship, has been found guilty and fined 6,000 francs.

An Indianapolis dispatch says: On Tuesday, Lieutenant Governor Ira J. Chase took the oath as successor to the late Governor Hovey as chief executive of Indiana.

Two dupes of "green goods" swindlers were intercepted in Newark, N. J., Wednesday night. They gave their names as James R. Smith, of Polk county, Florida, and William R. Collins, of Fort Meade, Fla.

A dispatch of Thursday from Rio Janeiro says that several states have deposed their governments since the abdication of Marshal Da Fonseca. At Bahia, the deposition of the governor occasioned a light conflict. Marshal Da Fonseca retires to Pauqueta island, in the bay of Rio Janeiro.

The body of William J. Florence, the actor was temporarily laid to rest Monday in the vault at Greenwood cemetery, in New York. The body will remain there until the arrival from Europe of the widow of the actor, when it will be conveyed to its final resting place in the family plat.

Kansas City, Mo., was startled Thursday evening by the announcement of the bold kidnapping of the two-year-old son of David T. Beals, president of the Union National bank, and a millionaire well known throughout the west. The abduction is believed to have been done by a servant girl.

A cablegram of Monday from Calcutta, India, says: Discouraging crop reports are received from the presidency of Madras. The cotton crop in districts of Bellary, Kurnool and Cuddapah, in that presidency, has proved an almost total failure, while in several other districts the grain crops are withering.

A dispatch of Thursday from Cheyenne, Wyo., says: Frank Melbourne, rainmaker, denies any connection with the Goodland, Kan., Rain Company, which he says is unwarrentedly using his name. After demonstrating that he has a practical invention, Melbourne says he will endeavor to sell it to the government.

A blinding snow storm, lasting six hours, followed by a drizzling rain, prevailed at St. Paul, Minn., Thursday. Special dispatches from other parts of the state, Wisconsin and the Dakotas, indicate that the storm was a very severe one. There is now about a foot of snow upon the ground in portions of Minnesota and wheeling on the railroads is very heavy.

Exports of specie at the port of New York during the week ended Nov. 21st amounted to $745,076, of which $129,-800 was gold and $615,776 silver. All the gold and $1,337 of the silver went to South America and $614,429 of the silver went to Europe. Imports of specie during the week amounted to $1,126,654, of which $946,898 was gold and $179,756 in silver.

A New York dispatch says: Representatives of the coal roads met shortly after noon Tuesday and decided to restrict the production of coal for December to 3,350,000 tons. No formal claim for increased percentage was made by the Reading company, but it is generally believed that some arrangement has been made by which the Reading will be given an increased allotment.

A New York dispatch says: The advisory board, consisting of Grover Cleveland, chairman; Thomas F. Bayard, Edward J. Phelps, George C. Williams and George S. Coe, to whom was referred the report of the Olcott committee, after a two day's session, on Wednesday, rendered an opinion recommending the acceptance of the agreement framed by the Olcott committee and representatives of Virginia for the settlement of Virginia's state debt.

A London cablegram says: The centenary of the birth of Thomas Wiltshire Summersum, who fought in the American war of 1812, was celebrated at Brightling Sea Thursday by a banquet. The veteran sang the national anthem in fine style, and in a hearty speech he said he hoped to carry himself like a man to the last day of his life. After the banquet forty octogenarians and seventy-seven septuagenarians, headed by Summersum, marched in procession through the town.

A DENIAL

Of Some of the Reports of the Indianapolis Meeting.

A Nashville dispatch states that President McDowell, of the State Alliance, L. K. Taylor, editor of The Toiler, and Ben Terrell, of Texas, arrived there Monday morning from Indianapolis. President McDowell denies that the third party movement was endorsed. He says: "The third party, or people's party, was not mentioned in the meeting at all. I talked with some of the western and northern delegates, and they fully agree with me that our order cannot take action endorsing any party. The opinion was unanimous that the Alliance must remain a non-partisan body."

"Then, how did these reports get out?" was asked.

"Well, sir," replied the president, "I understand that McAllister, of Mississippi, was there to give out to the newspaper men just such lies as our enemies wanted to put in our mouths. Neither McAllister, Hall nor Yeamans was in the meeting, nor were they seen about the hall. Hall was not in the city."

FIFTEEN RAILROADS

Have Secured an Entrance to the Grounds of the World's Fair.

A Chicago dispatch says: The Baltimore and Ohio railroad is the prime mover in the scheme to secure an entrance at the south end of Jackson park to the world's fair, for all lines running south from the Union, Van Buren street and Polk street stations as well as those from the Illinois Central station. Under the terms of arrangement, fifteen great railroads will have direct entrance to the world's fair grounds, including the Illinois Central, Michigan Central, Baltimore and Ohio, Big Four, Chicago and Grand Trunk, Wabash, Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe, Chicago and Eastern Illinois, Chicago and Erie, Lake Shore, Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago, Pan Handle, Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, Chicago and Alton and Rock Island. The exposition management will assume all obligations for a lease of the grounds over which the tracks pass.

Reducing Mortgages.

A Topeka, Kan., dispatch of Monday says: Official report of mortgages recorded and released in 52 of the counties of Kansas shows that a reduction of $207,497 in mortgage indebtedness was made during October. For the same month last reductions of farm mortgage indebtedness in counties and record Kansas was $1,300,000. The values of [illegible] property is [illegible]

THE BANKERS ARE MAD.

Charleston's Money Handlers Will Make an Appeal to the Courts.

The solicitors of all the banks of Charleston held a meeting Friday which lasted several hours. The proceedings were secret, but it is said that steps will be taken to make a fight on the line of the Newberry bank case recently decided by Judge Hudson. It is also said that the comptroller general has written a red-hot letter to the county auditor, in which attention has been called to section 289 and 240 of the statutes, which provide imprisonment for persons refusing to make true returns or for making false returns.

A GENUINE BLIZZARD.

In the Mountains of Tennessee—Sad Fate of Immigrants.

A rumor reached Knoxville, Tenn., Tuesday of a snow storm in the Chilhowee mountains south of the city. A wagon train of immigrants, westward bound, were caught in the blizzard. The train consisted of six wagons and thirty-three people. When the storm began all went into camp except a farmer named George Akers, who with his family went on up the mountain. It is supposed they lost their way and rolled into the river or ravine, and were frozen to death.

The Lovell Safety.

A NEW BICYCLE WHICH THE PUBLIC LIKES.

While thousands within the last decade have enjoyed the sport of cycling, the fact is nevertheless obvious that many thousands more have been deterred from enjoying it in consequence of the high prices demanded for a really good wheel.

It remained for the John P. Lovell Arms Company of Boston to change this state of affairs. It was last year that the public first became aware that there was a new low-priced safety bicycle on the market, a wheel strictly high grade, and equal in every particular to any manufactured in America or Europe. As previous to this all manufacturers had charged a very large price for a first-class wheel, the John P. Lovell Arms Company is therefore the first house that has ever offered the public such a wheel at a price that does not place it beyond the reach of the average person's purse. The company that manufactures this wheel (the Lovell Diamond Safety) is one of the oldest of all the manufacturing and mercantile houses in New England, having been established in 1840.

Besides being now one of the leading bicycle firms in the United States, the John P. Lovell Arms Company is and has been for years a well-known manufacturer and dealer in fire-arms and sporting goods of every description. On June 18 of last year, the firm celebrated its half-century anniversary. The founder of this enterprising house, Mr. John P. Lovell, although over 70 years of age, is still an important and active member of this world-famed house.

The devil was running the ... the slave trade might go on, and the ... money be paid for the cargoes, but slavery was a sin against heaven. They brothered the men who brought them, but damned the men who bought them. But Brazil was their market after 1840. Maryland and Virginia ceased to buy. The south had enough. The natural increase supplied her plantations and a reaction of public sentiment set in. The example of Jefferson and Randolph in freeing their slaves was followed by hundreds. The colonization society shipped thousands of manumitted slaves to Liberia but they did not go willingly and they perished soon after they got there. It was a cruel exile into the jaws of death. My father, as executor of Major Waters' will, sent thirty-seven to Savannah, from whence the colonization society took them to Liberia in 1849. They were well provided with clothing and given $10 a piece in gold. Thirty of them died within two years and the other seven escaped by strategy and came back to Georgia to live in slavery with their old master's children. In 1850 free negroes were common all over Virginia. In 1861 we found at Winchester, while camping there, more freemen than slaves. The Old Dominion was flecked with them and the sentiment was fast working southward, and but for the threats and bulldozing of the abolition party, southern slavery would have passed from us by gradual emancipation as advocated by Henry Clay and Berrien and Joseph Henry Lumpkin. The truth is that the blood of the million who fell in the war is upon the abolition party and its followers—the higher law-saints who broke the compact and were the first to set aside the constitution and the laws and the decisions of the higher courts in the government. The fanatical, malicious and "mean spirited scoundrels," as Hawthorne calls them, are up there yet exercising themselves in their peculiar religion, which is to abuse the south and preach temperance and ship rum to Africa. We are reviving no animosities against the northern soldiers who fought to preserve the union, for they had patriotic motives and followed the lead of General Grant, who owned slaves in Missouri and lived off of their hire up to 1863. He has been sainted. Fortune or fate cast him on that side. The dice fell that way. His battle cry was the "union," but New England denounced the union as a league with hell and a covenant with the devil, and the battle cry was "Free the negroes and turn them loose to kill, and to burn and destroy." What a disappointment awaited their malicious desires and expectations—not a colored hand was raised, not a firebrand was lighted, but faithful, loving and true most of them stood by their old masters, and their wives and their children until freedom was forced upon them. Verily, as General Jackson says, a monument should be erected to the loyalty of the slaves.

And now, Mr. Editor, I think I will feel better, sometimes the pent up feelings must be ventilated, indignation must explode, or it will fester and corrode in our vitals and blood poison our better nature. Yes, I think I will feel better for a good while. I will cultivate peace and harmony with all who love it. There are some signs up north that are comforting. A northern man who fought on the other side sends money to mark a soldier's grave, and an Illinois man writes me that General John M. Palmer is not even a member of the Grand Army of the Republic. Nobody seems to know the John Palmer who raised all that rumpus about the flag. A northern lady writes a nice letter about her father, who was killed at Chickamauga in 1863. He fell within the confederate lines, and his sword and watch were taken. He was colonel of the Thirty-eighth regiment Illinois Infantry, and his name was David Harvie Gilmer, of Pittsfield, Ill. This lady would rejoice to find that sword, and if any confederate veteran has it or knows of it please inform me.

And now it is in order for the north to act the gentleman and apologise and shake hands and say no more about flags or rebellion or treason. We are ready to forgive everybody except some.—BILL ARP, in Atlanta Constitution.

THE SENATE.

A Number of Bills Introduced and Referred.

Among the bills introduced in the senate Monday and referred were the following: For the monument to General U. S. Grant in the city of Washington; a bill amending the Chinese exclusion act so as to require Chinese removed from the United States to be sent to China, instead of the country from whence they came. It is provided further that the burden shall be on any Chinese laborer or person who shall claim the right to remain in the United States to establish such right; to repeal all laws discriminating against the circulation of state banks; to prohibit absolutely the coming of Chinese into the United States, whether they are Chinese subjects or otherwise. Mr Aldrich moved an amendment to the rule regulating admission to the floor of the senate. The amendment was adopted. The principal change is as to clerks to committee and clerks to senators. they are admitted when "in actual discharge of their official duties," and it is provided that clerks to senators "must be regularly appointed and be borne on the rolls of the secretary of the senate as such." The senate then went into executive session, when some nominations were referred to committees, and, then, at 1:30 o'clock the senate adjourned till Tuesday.

A REVEREND FORGER.

He Gets in His Work on Worthless Checks.

A Nashville dispatch of Tuesday says: George R. Lindner, Ph. D., M. D., and minister of Christ church, is a fugitive from justice. Saturday last Rev. Lindner gave worthless checks to different firms in Nashville to the amount of about $600. He also obtain three diamond rings from a jeweler on pretense of allowing a young lady to make a selection. He has been heard from in New Orleans. It was thought he was making his way to Mexico.

ALLIANCE TALKS.

NEWS OF THE ORDER AND ITS MEMBERS

Reform Press Comment and Items of Interest to Alliancemen Everywhere.

The Louisiana State Alliance has expelled nine members of the legislature because they voted for the Lottery. Hurrah for Louisiana!

Some of the papers continue to refer to the "Alliance split." These papers had better look for leaks and "splits" in other directions. The Alliance split is not their property, even if there had been a split.

***

Legislation in the interest of the farmers cannot be class legislation. They constitute a majority of the population and whatever shall be done for the majority cannot be for a class. A class must be the minority, in the sense in which class legislation is used.—Alliance Herald.

The Nashville Toiler is right when it says: "It is only a matter of time when the great mass, the rank and file of American citizens, will rise and in one voice demand the disarming of plutocracy. The tide of reform has set in and it may be temporarily diverted, but permanently impeded, never."

THE GREAT DIFFERENCE.

Plain Talk gets off the following about the difference in interest under the present system, and what it would be in certain cases if the Sub-Treasury was in operation:

The Sub-Treasury plan may be "impractical;" but suppose, for instance, that the farmers of Union county were only compelled to pay 2 per cent. on the $50,000 they borrowed during the thirty days between October 14th and November 14th. The interest on $50,000 for one year at 2 per cent would equal $1,000. The probability is that under the present plan this money costs them an average of 12 per cent. The interest on $50,000 at 12 per cent for one year is $6,000; and the difference between the subtreasury plan and the present plan is the difference between $1,000 and $6,000. In other words the farmer would save $5,000 a year by the adoption of the subtreasury and land loan plan. Would this not be a very practical method of increasing the prosperity of the farmer?

WHAT A PREACHER SAYS.

We clip the following from the New York Herald of recent date. It is interesting reading, coming as it does from a noted divine:

The Rev. Thomas Dixon had something to say for the Farmer's Alliance in his remarks preceeding his sermon in Association Hall. He said that it was by no means sure that the recent election had proved a death blow to the Alliance—"this nameless hobgoblin with hayseed in its hair." "The simple truth is," he said, "that all this talk about the death of the Farmer's Alliance and Industrial Union is cheap partisan twaddle. Its life was not involved in the fight. It was not seriously affected by these elections because it is primarily a moral, not a political movement. The movement is in its last analysis a religious movement and finds its basis on the religious natures of the millions of under masses who compose its rank and file. Not a single one of the problems that gave birth to this movement has been met as yet. They have not even been given a hearing. They have been hooted out of court by the hired assassins of thought in the older parties who fight not for principle but for office. In spite of good crops, gambling in the bread of a starving world still holds its carnival of hell on the floor of your exchanges. Conservatives may hoot and pooh! and bah! but the movement is one of the restless power. You had as well try to sweep back the sea with a goose's tail feather as to try to stop it with the pen of ridicule. You had as well try to dam Niagara with an anathema."

THEY VIOLATE THE BANKING LAW.

The Plain Talk, of South Dakota, has the following article in regard to the national banking business:

The national banking law was passed for the purpose of furnishing means through which the people could be supplied with currency. The banks were intended to be banks of issue merely. The officers are forbidden by law to use the money in speculation. They can only loan it out, and the loans cannot be made on real estate or chattels, for this would afford a means by which the currency might go out of the active channels of business on long time loans. The bank currency was intended for short discounts, and with a view of keeping money actively in circulation the banking law requires that the bankers shall take only personal security on loans of money. But this the banks do not do. They do not loan money, as banks, if that can be avoided. Go into any national bank to borrow money and in nine cases out of ten the note you give will not be drawn in favor of the bank, but to some of the officers of the bank; and by this device a chattel mortgage will be taken and you will pay 12 per cent interest or more for your "accommodation," instead of the straight ten per cent permitted by the national bank act. In this manner the law is evaded and purpose defeated. But when the cheap demagogues who contend that "national banks don't pay," begin to produce figures to prove their assertions, they invariably pretend that the banks only get 10 per cent. for their money. But the fact is that there is not a bank in South Dakota that makes a practice of making discounts at straight 10 per cent., and there is not one note in ten drawn in the name of the bank. The national banks are constant and willful law violators, and the record of the national bank failures ought to be a warning to all sensible men that these institutions are very unsafe as places of deposit.

HOLD YOUR COTTON.

During the late session of the Supreme Council of the National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union the following resolution was offered, and unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That a committee consisting of one delegate from each cotton State be appointed to take under consideration and if possible formulate some plan by which the world's greatest producers of the South's greatest staple, cotton, may be able to some extent at least to regulate the quantity, consumption and marketing time and price of said crop.

By motion the committee was made a standing one to make a final report at the next annual meeting.

Several resolutions relative to acreage, marketing, etc., were introduced by L. F. Livingston, of Georgia; N. F. Rogers, of Florida, and others. The committee made a partial report by offering as a substitute the following resolutions:

Whereas, The cotton growers of the South are greatly oppressed because of the depressed price of the raw material, caused, in a measure, from combines and speculations in futures, but mainly from an unjust, oppressive and discriminating financial system and a high protective tariff on manufactured cotton materials; and whereas, it is now alleged by speculators and combines that overproduction is the prime cause of depression in prices, when in fact we have reason to know that the cause is not overproduction, but underconsumption caused by inability to buy, resulting from advanced prices of manufactured articles of cotton and other causes as stated above; and whereas, it has been recommended by members of the Farmers' Alliance in several States in the cotton belt that the acreage be decreased one-third by the growers, and knowing, as we do, that the price of the raw material cannot be affected by the loyal Alliancemen alone of the many thousand growers decreasing their acreage, while, in fact, the effort to thus reduce the quantity would actuate thousands of growers to increase their acreage in cotton; therefore, as one of the remedies to secure an advanced price in raw cotton material by cheapening the manufactured products, and thereby increase the ability of the masses to consume; be it

Resolved, That the National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union, representing the best interests of the producers and consumers of America alike, do respectfully ask that Congress entirely relieve manufactured articles of cotton from any tariff duty whatever, and place the same on the free list of American products.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be certified to the speaker of the house of representatives and president of the senate of the fifty-second congress of America, duly attested by the president and secretary of the National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union under seal of supreme council.

Marion Butler, chairman, North Carolina; W. D. G. Gibbs, Mississippi; H. D. Greer, Tennessee; S. M. Adams, Alabama; R. F. Rogers, Florida; L. P. Featherston, Arkansas; T. A. Clayton, Louisiana; Harry Tracy, Texas; D. P. Duncan, South Carolina; G. M Lorden, Missouri; L. F. Livingston, Georgia.

A further report of the committee is as follows:

Resolved, That, being in possession of facts that are thoroughly reliable which warrant us in a belief that a false estimate has been purposely made of the present crop of cotton, we feel safe in guaranteeing better prices if cotton can be held for sixty days.

THE FIFTY-SECOND CONGRESS AT WORK.

Daily Routine of Both Houses Briefly Outlined.

THE HOUSE.

WEDNESDAY.—In his opening prayer Wednesday morning, the chaplain invoked Divine protection on the members of the house against the assaults of the insiduous disease, influenza, now pervading the land. The speaker announced the appointment of the committee on rules as follows: Speaker (Chairman), McMillin, Catchings, Reed and Burrows. Burrows, of Michigan, presented the report of the board of visitors to the military academy. Referred. Oates, of Alabama, off red a resolution providing for the appointment of a standing committee on the order of business, to consist of fifteen members of which the speaker shall be ex-officio chairman which shall have jurisdiction of order in which that business shall be considered as having due regard to fairness and equity among several committees and to the transaction of public business. Referred to the committee on rules. Bartine, of Nevada, who has been absent on account of illness, appeared at the bar of the house and took the oath of office. Taylor, of Tennessee, rising, said that it was his mournful duty to announce the death of his friend and colleague, Hon. Leonidas C. Houk, who died suddenly from accidental poisoning at his home in Knoxville, in May last. Mr. Houk, after serving gallantly in the war, and after having held various state offices, had been elected to the 46th congress and to each successive congress since. He had a hold on his people far beyond that of any other man or combination of men. Had he lived he could have been returned to congress as long as he might have desired to remain in public service. He died poor in this world's goods, but rich in friendship and love for his countrymen. The house then, as a mark of respect to the memory of the deceased, adjourned until Saturday.

THE SENATE.

Among the bills introduced in the senate Monday and referred were the following: For the monument to General U. S. Grant in the city of Washington; a bill amending the Chinese exclusion act so as to require Chinese removed from the United States to be sent to China, instead of the country from whence they came. It is provided further that the burden shall be on any Chinese laborer or person who shall claim the right to remain in the United States to establish such right; to repeal all laws discriminating against the circulation of state banks; to prohibit absolutely the coming of Chinese into the United States, whether they are Chinese subjects or otherwise. Mr Aldrich moved an amendment to the rule regulating admission to the floor of the senate. The amendment was adopted. The principal change is as to clerks to committee and clerks to senators. they are admitted when "in actual discharge of their official duties," and it is provided that clerks to senators "must be regularly appointed and be borne on the rolls of the secretary of the senate as such." The senate then went into executive session, when some nominations were referred to committees, and, then, at 1:30 o'clock the senate adjourned till Tuesday.

WEDNESDAY—The president sent to the senate the following nominations: To be United States circuit judges, as provided by section 1, chapter 517, U. S. statutes at large, William L. Putnam, of Main, for first judicial circuit; Nathaniel Shipman, Connecticut, for second; George M. Dallas, Pennsylvania, third; Nathan Goff, West Virginia, fourth; Wm. H. Taft, Ohio, sixth; Wm. A. Woods, Indiana, seventh; Warren Truitt, Oregon, U. S. district judge for the district of Alaska. Memorials were presented and referred against the opening of the world's fair on Sunday, favoring women's suffrage, promoting efficiency in the life saving service, and for the election of United States senators by the people. A number of bills were introduced. Stewart gave notice that he would on Monday address the senate on that portion of the president's message relative to the coinage of silver. The senate at 12:40 proceeded with the executive business and at 1:15 adjourned till Thursday.

They were ...The devil was running the ma... the slave trade might go on, and the money be paid for the cargoes, but slavery was a sin against heaven. They brothered the men who brought them, but damned the men who bought them. But Brazil was their market after 1840. Maryland and Virginia ceased to buy. The south had enough. The natural increase supplied her plantations and a reaction of public sentiment set in. The example of Jefferson and Randolph in freeing their slaves was followed by hundreds. The colonization society shipped thousands of manumitted slaves to Liberia but they did not go willingly and they perished soon after they got there. It was a cruel exile into the jaws of death. My father, as executor of Major Waters' will, sent thirty-seven to Savannah, from whence the colonization society took them to Liberia in 1859. They were well provided with clothing and given $1 0 a piece in gold. Thirty of them died within two years and the other seven escaped by strategy and came back to Georgia to live in slavery with their old master's children. In 1860 free negroes were common all over Virginia. In 1861 we found at Winchester, while camping there, more freemen than slaves. The Old Dominion was flecked with them and the sentiment was fast working southward, and but for the threats and bulldozing of the abolition party, southern slavery would have passed from us by gradual emancipation as advocated by Henry Clay and Berrien and Joseph Henry Lumpkin. The truth is that the blood of the million who fell in the war is upon the abolition party and its followers—the higher law-saints who broke the compact and were the first to set aside the constitution and the laws and the decisions of the higher courts in the government. The fanatical, malicious and 'mean spirited scoundrels," as Hawthorne calls them, are up there yet exercising themselves in their peculiar religion, which is to abuse the south and preach temperance and ship rum to Africa. We are reviving no animosities against the northern soldiers who fought to preserve the union, for they had patriotic motives and followed the lead of General Grant, who owned slaves in Missouri and lived off of their hire up to 1863. He has been painted. Fortune or fate cast him on that side. The dice fell that way. His battle cry was the "union," but New England denounced the union as a league with hell and a covenant with the devil, and the battle cry was 'Free the negroes and turn them loose to kill, and to burn and destroy." What a disappointment awaited their malicious desires and expectations—not a colored hand was raised, not a firebrand was lighted, but faithful, loving and true most of them stood by their old masters, and their wives and their children until freedom was forced upon them. Verily, as General Jackson says, a monument should be erected to their loyalty the world round.

And now, Mr. Editor, I think I will feel better, sometimes the pent up feelings must be ventilated, indignation must explode, or it will fester and corrode in our vitals and blood poison our better nature. Yes, I think I will feel better for a good while. I will cultivate peace and harmony with all who love it. There are some signs up north that are comforting. A northern man who fought on the other side sends money to mark a soldier's grave, and an Illinois man writes me that General John M. Palmer is not even a member of the Grand Army of the Republic. Nobody seems to know the John Palmer who raised all that rumpus about the flag. A northern lady writes a nice letter about her father, who was killed at Chickamauga in 1863. He fell within the confederate lines, and his sword and watch were taken. He was colonel of the Thirty-eighth regiment Illinois Infantry, and his name was David Hervie Gilmer, of Pittsfield, Ill. This lady would rejoice to find that sword, and if any confederate veteran has it or knows of it please inform me.

And now it is in order for the north to act the gentleman and apologize and shake hands and say no more about flags or rebellion or treason. We are ready to forgive everybody except some.—BILL ARP, in Atlanta Constitution.

THE SENATE.

A Number of Bills Introduced and Referred.

Among the bills introduced in the senate Monday and referred were the following: For the monument to General U. S. Grant in the city of Washington; a bill amending the Chinese exclusion act so as to require Chinese removed from the United States to be sent to China, instead of the country from whence they came. It is provided further that the burden shall be on any Chinese laborer or person who shall claim the right to remain in the United States to establish such right; to repeal all laws discriminating against the circulation of state banks; to prohibit absolutely the coming of Chinese into the United States, whether they are Chinese subjects or otherwise. Mr Aldrich moved an amendment to the rule regulating admission to the floor of the senate. The amendment was adopted. The principal change is as to clerks to committee and clerks to senators. they are admitted when "in actual discharge of their official duties," and it is provided that clerks to senators "must be regularly appointed and be borne on the rolls of the secretary of the senate as such." The senate then went into executive session, when some nominations were referred to committees, and, then, at 1:20 o'clock the senate adjourned till Tuesday.

A REVEREND FORGER.

He Gets in His Work on Worthless Checks.

A Nashville dispatch of Tuesday says: George R. Lindner, Ph. D., M. D., and minister of Christ church, is a fugitive from justice. Saturday last Rev. Lindner gave worthless checks to different firms in Nashville to the amount of about $600. He also obtain three diamond rings from a jeweler on pretense of allowing a young lady to make a selection. He has been heard from in New Orleans. It was thought he was making his way to Mexico.

The Nashville Toiler is right when it says: "It is only a matter of time when the great mass, the rank and file of American citizens, will rise and in one voice demand the disarming of plutocracy. The tide of reform has set in and it may be temporarily diverted, but permanently impeded, never."

THE GREAT DIFFERENCE.

Plain Talk gets off the following about the difference in interest under the present system, and what it would be in certain cases if the Sub-Treasury was in operation:

The Sub-Treasury plan may be "impractical;" but suppose, for instance, that the farmers of Union county were only compelled to pay 2 per cent. on the $50,000 they borrowed during the thirty days between October 14th and November 14th. The interest on $50,000 for one year at 2 per cent would equal $1,000. The probability is that under the present plan this money costs them an average of 12 per cent. The interest on $50,000 at 12 per cent for one year is $6,000; and the difference between the subtreasury plan and the present plan is the difference between $1,000 and $6,000. In other words the farmer would save $5,000 a year by the adoption of the subtreasury and land loan plan. Would this not be a very practical method of increasing the prosperity of the farmer?

WHAT A PREACHER SAYS.

We clip the following from the New York Herald of recent date. It is interesting reading, coming as it does from a noted divine:

The Rev. Thomas Dixon had something to say for the Farmer's Alliance in his remarks preceeding his sermon in Association Hall. He said that it was by no means sure that the recent election had proved a death blow to the Alliance—"this nameless hobgoblin with hayseed in its hair." "The simple truth is," he said, "that all this talk about the death of the Farmer's Alliance and Industrial Union is cheap partisan twaddle. Its life was not involved in the fight. It was not seriously affected by these elections because it is primarily a moral, not a political movement. The movement is in its last analysis a religious movement and finds its basis on the religious natures of the millions of under masses who compose its rank and file. Not a single one of the problems that gave birth to this movement has been met as yet. They have not even been given a hearing. They have been hooted out of court by the hired assassins of thought in the older parties who fight not for principle but for office. In spite of good crops, gambling in the bread of a starving world still holds its carnival of hell on the floor of your exchanges. Conservatives may hoot and pooh! and bah! but the movement is one of the restless power. You had as well try to sweep back the sea with a goose's tail feather as to try to stop it with the pen of ridicule. You had as well try to dam Niagara with an anathema."

THEY VIOLATE THE BANKING LAW.

The Plain Talk, of South Dakota, has the following article in regard to the national banking business:

The national banking law was passed for the purpose of furnishing means through which the people would be supplied with currency. The banks were intended to be banks of issue merely. The officers are forbidden by law to use the money in speculation. They can only loan it out, and the loans cannot be made on real estate or chattels, for this would afford a means by which the currency might go out of the active channels of circulation long time loans. The bank currency was intended for short discounts, and while a few of these

...ing money actively in circulation the banking law requires that the bankers shall take only personal security on loans of money. But this the banks do not do. They do not loan money, as banks, if that can be avoided. Go into any national bank to borrow money and in nine cases out of ten the note you give will not be drawn in favor of the bank, but to some of the officers of the bank; and by this device a chattel mortgage will be taken and you will pay 12 per cent interest or more for your "accommodation," instead of the straight ten per cent permitted by the national bank act. In this manner the law is evaded and purpose defeated. But when the cheap demagogues who contend that "national banks don't pay," begin to produce figures to prove their assertions, they invariably pretend that the banks only get 10 per cent. for their money. But the fact is that there is not a bank in South Dakota that makes a practice of making discounts at straight 10 per cent., and there is not one note in ten drawn in the name of the bank. The national banks are constant and willful law violators, and the record of the national bank failures ought to be a warning to all sensible men that these institutions are very unsafe as places of deposit.

HOLD YOUR COTTON.

During the late session of the Supreme Council of the National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union the following resolution was offered, and unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That a committee consisting of one delegate from each cotton State be appointed to take under consideration and if possible formulate some plan by which the world's greatest producers of the South's greatest staple, cotton, may be able to some extent at least to regulate the quantity, consumption and marketing time and price of said crop.

By motion the committee was made a standing one to make a final report at the next annual meeting.

Several resolutions relative to acreage, marketing, etc., were introduced by L. F. Livingston, of Georgia; N. F. Rogers, of Florida, and others. The committee made a partial report by offering as a substitute the following resolutions:

Whereas, The cotton growers of the South are greatly oppressed because of the depressed price of the raw material, caused, in a measure, from combines and speculations in futures, but mainly from an unjust, oppressive and discriminating financial system and a high protective tariff on manufactured cotton materials; and whereas, it is now alleged by speculators and combines that overproduction is the prime cause of depression in prices, when in fact we have reason to know that the cause is not overproduction, but underconsumption caused by inability to buy, resulting from advanced prices of manufactured articles of cotton and other causes as stated above; and whereas, it has been recommended by members of the Farmers' Alliance in several States in the cotton belt that the acreage be decreased one-third by the growers, and knowing, as we do, that the price of the raw material cannot be affected by the loyal Alliancemen alone of the many thousand growers decreasing their acreage, while, in fact, the effort to thus reduce the quantity would actuate thousands of growers to increase their acreage in cotton; therefore, as one of the remedies to secure an advanced price in raw cotton material by cheapening the manufactured products, and thereby increase the ability of the masses to consume; be it

Resolved, That the National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union, representing the best interests of the producers and consumers of America alike, do respectfully ask that Congress entirely relieve manufactured articles of cotton from any tariff duty whatever, and place the same on the free list of American products.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be certified to the speaker of the house of representatives and president of the senate of the fifty-second congress of America, duly attested by the president and secretary of the National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union under seal of supreme council.

Marion Butler, chairman, North Carolina; W. D. G. Gibbs, Mississippi; H. D. Greer, Tennessee; S. M. Adams, Alabama; R. F. Rogers, Florida; L. F. Featherston, Arkansas; T. A. Clayton, Louisiana; Harry Tracy, Texas; D. P. Duncan, South Carolina; G. M Lorden, Missouri; L. F. Livingston, Georgia.

A further report of the committee is as follows:

Resolved, That, being in possession of facts that are thoroughly reliable which warrant us in a belief that a false estimate has been purposely made of the present crop of cotton, we feel safe in guaranteeing butter prices if cotton can be held for sixty days.

THE HOUSE.

WEDNESDAY.—In his opening prayer, Wednesday morning, the chaplain invoked Divine protection on the members of the house against the assaults of the insidious disease, influenza, now pervading the land. The speaker announced the appointment of the committee on rules as follows: Speaker (Chairman), McMillin, Catchings, Reed and Burrows. Burrows, of Michigan, presented the report of the board of visitors to the military academy. Referred. Oates, of Alabama, offered a resolution providing for the appointment of a standing committee on the order of business, to consist of fifteen members of which the speaker shall be ex-officio chairman which shall have jurisdiction of order in which that business shall be considered as having due regard to fairness and equity among several committees and to the transaction of public business. Referred to the committee on rules. Bartine, of Nevada, who has been absent on account of illness, appeared at the bar of the house and took the oath of office. Taylor, of Tennessee, rising, said that it was his mournful duty to announce the death of his friend and colleague, Hon. Leonides C. Houk, who died suddenly from accidental poisoning at his home in Knoxville, in May last. Mr. Houk, after serving gallantly in the war, and after having held various state offices, had been elected to the 40th congress and to each successive congress since. He had a hold on his people far beyond that of any other man or combination of men. Had he lived he could have been returned to congress as long as he might have desired to remain in public service. He died poor in this world's goods, but rich in friendship and love for his countrymen. The house then, as a mark of respect to the memory of the deceased, adjourned until Saturday.

THE SENATE.

Among the bills introduced in the senate Monday and referred were the following: For the monument to General U. S. Grant in the city of Washington; a bill amending the Chinese exclusion act so as to require Chinese removed from the United States to be sent to China, instead of the country from whence they came. It is provided further that the burden shall be on any Chinese laborer or person who shall claim the right to remain in the United States to establish such right; to repeal all laws discriminating against the circulation of state banks; to prohibit absolutely the coming of Chinese into the United States, whether they are Chinese subjects or otherwise. Mr Aldrich moved an amendment to the rule regulating admission to the floor of the senate. The amendment was adopted. The principal change is as to clerks to committee and clerks to senators. they are admitted when "in actual discharge of their official duties," and it is provided that clerks to senators "must be regularly appointed and be borne on the rolls of the secretary of the senate as such." The senate then went into executive session, when some nominations were referred to committees, and, then, at 1:20 o'clock the senate adjourned till Tuesday.

WEDNESDAY—The president sent to the senate the following nominations: To be United States circuit judges, as provided by section 1, chapter 517, U. S. statutes at large, William L. Putnam, of Maine, for first judicial circuit; Nathaniel Shipman, Connecticut, for second; George M. Dallas, Pennsylvania, third; Nathan Goff, West Virginia, fourth; Wm. H. Taft, Ohio, sixth; Wm. A. Woods, Indiana, seventh; Warren Truitt, Oregon, U. S. district judge for the district of Alaska. Memorials were presented and referred against the opening of the world's fair on Sunday, favoring women's suffrage, promoting efficiency in the life saving service, and for the election of United States senators by the people. A number of bills were introduced. Stewart gave notice that he would on Monday address the senate on that portion of the president's message relative to the coinage of silver. The senate at 12:40 proceeded with the executive business and at 1:15 adjourned as if Thursday.

There is no place in the world where a good living can be more easily made on a small farm than right here in Alabama. The trouble is that the people depend upon one crop to meet all of their necessities, the price of which is controled by speculators and capitalists more than by the law of supply and demand.—Ala. Mirror.

The Fort Worth Gazette makes a very sensible suggestion. It says: "President Polk of the Farmer's sub-Treasury Alliance says the membership has greatly increased in the current year. Mr. McAllister, late an exalted member of this Alliance, says it has fallen off. The way to settle the issue is to publish figures showing the number in good standing on the 1st of January, 1891, and the first of January, 1892."

We are indebted to Tennessee for our supplies of Turkeys, chickens, eggs, turnips and three-fourths of our sweet potatoes, to Mobile and Florida for cabbage and other vegetables, to Chicago and western cities for our corn, oats, hay, meat and meal, to Kentucky, Tennessee and Texas for our horses and mules, and to ourselves for 6½ cent cotton with a 7½ to 8 cent mortgage on every bale with a twenty-five to fifty cent attachment for interest. We are and will be a very very prosperous people under this system.—[Selma Mirror.

The news from Russia continues to be of the most heart-rending kind. The starving peasants are reduced to grass and birch-bark as a means of eking out an existence, and the deaths are increasing in number every day. To add to their misery, fuel is scarce and the winter is severe, and there is no organized means of relief. The authorities seem to be as helpless as the people, and amidst it all the officials, rob the starving poor of much of the money and provisions and clothing that are subscribed for their relief.

Mr. W. L. Hood, president of the Board of Trustees of Lafayette College, wants the patrons of the school to "pay up," and says:

Nothing will dwarf the school so quickly as a sickly financial condition. If you are in arrears, this notice is intended for you, and if you will quietly call on the Secretary and settle, there is no sort of danger of friction. For if you send and pay, the Board can hardly be drug into a dispute with you.

Well, hardly. The patrons might also do well to contribute a fund towards sending President Hood to some school until he can improve on the grammar displayed in the last sentence. We wonder if he is not a drug on the school board as well as its president.

The Columbiana Chronicle gives notice in the following that it will not be imposed upon. As the VIEW has had occasion to reject several communications of the character referred to, we republish this in order to impress upon our candidates and their "many friends" what has been a long-established custom with this office:

All communications endorsing candidates will be headed "advertisement," and will be charged for at the rate of one cent per word. When figures are used, each figure will count one word. In every instance the money—one cent for each word—must accompany the communication. Otherwise it will receive no attention. The Chronicle will pursue this course without deviation. Paying for election printing after a canvass is like paying for a dead horse. If you are not interested enough in your favorite to put cash, you can save time trouble by not sending your ications to this office pre- claims.

The Memphis Commercial pointedly says:

The remedy for most of the ills that beset them is in the farmers' own hands. If they are to prosper and get out of debt; if they are to be independent of mortgage companies and banks, they must raise on their farms all the needs of their families and demands of their households for food, except tea, coffee and sugar. They must do this and at the same time take account of the market—must become students of political economy, and must realize the force and effect of tariff laws to rob them to make rich monopolists richer. When merchants go to buy stocks of goods or replenish their stocks, they are guided by the needs, wants and tastes of their customers. So farmers when they put their crops in the ground must keep before them what the conditions of wheat or the cotton, the sugar, the rice or the tobacco markets are and sow accordingly. They must not overstock the markets. If they do they must expect the same disaster to overtake them that overtakes the merchants who buy indiscriminately or buy because they can buy cheaply. The telegraph and the newspaper are as available for the average farmer as for the average business man and merchant, and the average farmer must avail himself of them and be guided by the information as to crops in this and other countries, the stock on hand and the prices, just as the speculator on the grain or the cotton or other exchanges are guided. Farms, to pay, must be managed by men of judgment as well as experience.

South Carolina is on the verge of a great prohibition victory. A bill has passed the lower branch of the Legislature of that State, and will probably pass the higher and be signed by the Governor, making it a crime to manufacture, sell or give away whiskey in the State. Heavy punishments will be imposed on the violators of this law. Our exalted contemporary, the Montgomery Advertiser, calls this "Iron-clad prohibition," and proceeds to criticize the measure, recommending to South Carolina Alabama's method of dealing with the whisky question. The truth is, our contemporary is not in favor of prohibition at all. If it was it would certainly want "iron-clad prohibition" in preference to something not so good. The Sun hopes that our sister State may secure the prohibition she is striving after. We would recommend such a plan to Alabama, our contemporary's advice to the contrary, notwithstanding.—Lafayette Sun.

The Sun is correct. "Iron-clad" prohibition for the entire State is preferable to the Alabama article, because it would be more effectual. But of course the Sun understands that though the Advertiser is a great Cæsar on politics, yet when a great moral fight with the whisky demon comes up that paper hugs the fence and lies low.

Low Prices.

The farmers in the vicinity of Jackson, Tenn., have resolved to quit planting cotton and turn their attention to grasses and stock. If the present low price of cotton will have the same effect upon the farmers of the Southern States, and cause them to grow other crops and raise stock it may prove one of the greatest blessings to the country.

The whole word seems to be in a state of unrest and social upheaval. War is now raging in China. Europe is threatened with a general war that is liable to break out at any moment, while the South and Central American States are in a state of revolution the portion of the time.

In view of these facts it is high time for the Southern people to make their own country self-sustaining and to stop depending upon a crop, the demand for which may cease at any time. Provision crops are always in demand, and more especially in time of war.—Ala. Mirror.

Observation.

A quarrel between two persons assumes its most serious aspect when a third party comes in who has nothing do with it.

Revenge is sweet, but forgoing it is sweeter.

The rural visitor who comes to the city green usually goes out of it blue.

The egotist is in most cases the man who has the least reason to be one.

Distrust makes miserable those who cherish it. Confidence is a good thing to have even if it is sometimes abused.

Two hams in the smokehouse are worth more than two bales of cotton stored in government sub-treasury vaults.—Houston Post.

The South in Congress.

The older and most influential members of the present House of Representatives are from the South, and in speaking of the fact that Southern members hold such a prominent position, the New York World pays the southern voter a compliment and attributes the fact to these two reasons:

In the first place the Southern States, having been uniformly Democratic, had no share in the grand overturning which has sent so many new men to congress on the Democratic side, and in the second place the Southern Democrats have followed a good Southern tradition in sending brainy men to Congress and in keeping them there. These circumstances, which give the Southern members a seniority in committee appointments are worth bearing in mind at the present time. They are certainly very creditable to the political intelligence of the Southern voters.—Ex.

The New York Press has been at some pains and expense to ascertain what the will of Congress is as to a free coinage of silver measure, and finds that in the Senate, where fifty-nine votes are necessary to carry a measure over the veto of the President, thirty-five Democrats, eighteen Republicans and one Alliancer, making a total of fifty-four, are for it, and three Democrats and thirty Republicans, a total of thirty-three are against it. The free silver Senators lack just five votes of the number necessary for them to override the President's veto. In the House, where it requires 222 votes to override a veto, 171 members, 154 Democrats, 9 Republicans and 8 Alliancers, are for the measure, and 70 Republicans and 37 Democrats are opposed to it. The difference between the ordinary majority in this instance is 51, and that number of votes it will be impossible for the silver men to secure. Free silver is, therefore, doomed.

Thus cynically the Kansas City Star describes the discomforts of the only Peffer, the modest nondescript of the Senate.

The lot an Alliance Senator is not a happy one, especially when he is on duty. Senator Peffer, of Kansas, who expected to cut a swath in the Senate, is meeting with trouble at the out set of his career. He does not claim to be a Republican and is therefore assigned to no committees by that side of the House. He has appealed to the Democrats for recognition, but they are unwilling to permit him to share in their representations unless he will make an open confession of a change of heart. Mr. Ingalls would say that he is between the devil and the deep sea.

Tom Watson, a Georgia congressman, who refused to go into the Democratic caucus, but became the candidate of the third party for the Speakership, has been already called upon to resign by many of his fellow citizens. Indeed his name has become a jeer and a thing to hiss among the very people who honored him. He was nominated by a Democratic convention, and was elected by Democrats over a Republican opponent, and his treachery will not be condoned.—Nashville American.

A Democratic House may not be able to secure the enactment of much Democratic legislation, but it can be relied on to save the country from Billion Dollar legislation, force bills, gag rules and other Republican iniquities.

Educational Convention.

The teachers of Elmore and adjoining counties, and all interested in education are invited to meet in convention at Wetumpka, on Monday, Dec. 28th, at 10 o'clock a. m.

Dr. Eldridge, President of the State Normal College, at Troy, will be present and deliver three addresses.

At 10 o'clock, a. m., "True Education," 2 o'clock, p. m., "Professionalization of Teacher." At 8 o'clock, p. m., "An Educational Review."

A general discussion will follow each subject.

Entertainment will be furnished all from a distance.

Respectfully,

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

A man that puts himself on the ground of moral principle if the whole world be against him, is mightier than all of them. A man ought not to fear being in minorities, as that minorities are based upon principles.—Beecher.

The Clarksdale (Miss.) Delta Advance shows that it has not yet outgrown the influence of Thanksgiving day, and makes a happy comparison when it says we certainly ought to appreciate our condition when we think of the thousands of people who are actually starving to death in Russia.

There is nothing like making bold and brave declarations. The Nashville American says that if a crank comes into its office and demands $1,250,000, he will not get it. The same paper makes the horrible prediction that: A little drop in the mercury and the waste basket will fill with poems on the beautiful snow.

Good Looks.

Good looks are more than skin deep, depending upon a healthy condition of all the vital organs. If the Liver be inactive, you have a billious look, if your stomach be disordered you have a dyspeptic look, and if your kidneys be affected you have a pinched look. Secure good health and you will have good looks. Electric Bitters is the great alterative and tonic and acts directly on these vital organs. Cures pimples, blotches, boils and gives a good complexion. Sold at 50c per bottle.

Miss Inez Collier is spending Christmas at home.

Miss Minnie Phillips is visiting Dr. Green's family in Montgomery.

Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Holley are spending Christmas at Lowndesboro.

Mr. John Scott, of Albany, Ga., visited friends in Clanton this week.

Devon Midleton, Esq., of Hayneville, visited relatives here Saturday and Sunday.

There will be a union Sunday School Christmas tree at the Baptist Church to-night.

Mr. S. T. Nelson is preparing to build a blacksmith and upholstery shop near the VIEW office.

If you want a handsome card calendar for 1892 call at the VIEW office. We havn't time to mail them.

The editor and the "devil" are under obligations to that good lady, Mrs. O. R. Bell, for a toothsome Xmas present.

Rev. R. M. Hunter went up to Jasper, Ala., Saturday and preached at the Baptist church at that place Sunday.

On last Friday night the young folks spent a very pleasant evening pulling candy at the residence of Mr. O. A. Duke.

We are pleased to learn that Mr. J. P. Allen, who has been suffering from an attack of the grip, is up and about, and we hope to soon see him fully recovered.

We understand that Dr. A. E. Matthews contemplates building a new and handsome residence at an early day in Clanton—and the building ball keeps rolling.

To-morrow is Christmas day and this office will be closed. So if you have a Christmas present for the VIEW you can hold it over until Saturday or send it the cabin around the corner.

The Alabama Conference of the M. E. Church, which met at Selma on the 16th inst., stationed Rev. B. E. Feagin on the Clanton circuit. Rev. A. J. Briggs was stationed on the Mt. Meigs circuit.

Hons. Cecil Brown, of Talladega, and W. B. Brown, of Columbiana, paid our town a visit last week. The former gentleman stands a good chance of going to Congress from this district if Dallas county has no candidate.

Here is an epitaph which will cause business men to do some thinking: "Here lies the bones of John Jones, Esq., formerly a merchant of this city. He died in the eightieth year of his age, loved and respected by all who knew him, but the devil of it was that nobody knew him—he didn't advertise."

Notice.

I will sell my place near the "Hot Well" 8½ acres, nicely improved, also my house and lot in Clanton very low for cash. Titles to both places in my name, and perfect. MRS. L. E. PRICHETT.

Two men by the names of Tandy Howe and James Hewitt were arrested by Detective Barnes Wednesday night and brought to Clanton and jailed. They live out on Yellow leaf, and were supposed to be implicated in the recent killing of young Dave Crosby, mention of which was made last week. The prisoners were given a preliminary examination before Justice Demarus at Jemison, on Saturday, and the evidence not being sufficient to warrant holding them, they were discharged.

A contemporary asks: Did you ever pause to reflect that you are a nuisance of the first water? Do you know that the neighbor from whom you borrowed this very paper you are now reading is often very much inconvenienced by you? He subscribes and pays for the paper for his own individual use and benefit; it is not done for your pleasure, education or comfort. He may not tell you so to your face, because the class of men who subscribe and pay for a newspaper are good, kind-hearted fellows; but they do a good deal of thinking all the same when you ask for their newspaper. Stop borrowing, and you will stop making a nuisance of yourself.

The man who spends more time trying to solve his individual financial problem than he does in trying to devise a perfect government system is the one who will have money to loan to his neighbors by and by. After all our theories and beautiful formulas for bringing the Republic to a state of perfection, the prevailing rule when it comes down to actual practice, is about like this: "Every fellow for himself and the devil take the hindmost." Patriotism is all right and necessary, but the man who puts in one-half his time attending to his own business and the other half in letting other people's business alone, is the fellow who will get there in good shape.—Ex.

What a Small Boy Could Do.

A lad in Boston, rather small for his age, works in an office as errand boy for four gentleman who do business there. One day the gentlemen were chaffing him a little for being so small, and said to him:

"You will never amount to much. You can never do much—you are too small."

The little fellow looked at them.

"Well," said he, as small as I am, I can do something that none of you can do."

"Ah, what is that?" said they.

"I don't know as I ought to tell you." he replied.

But they were anxious to know, and urged him to tell what he could do that none of them were able to do."

"I can keep from swearing," said the little fellow.

There were some blushes on four faces, and there seemed to be no anxiety for further information.—Selected.

I wish you Mr. Editor, and all the readers of the VIEW a merry Xmas. I hope our young men and old men will not mar the pleasure of others or their pleasure with that dreadful demon whiskey. Here is a picture of five sweet little children sitting around the fire talking of what old Santa Clause is going to bring them, and what a nice time they are going to have when their dear papa gets back from town with the nice things he promised to bring them. That bright little golden haired boy thinks there is nobody like his father, he says when he gets to be a man he is going to be like his father. It is time for their father to come, they hear a noise at the door, they rush to it. The door opens, what do they see, a man staggering about, his eyes are bloodshot. It is their father, but they do not know him, and rush back to their mother with fear and crying, their Christmas is all spoiled. There is a gloom in that house for a long time to come. How can those sweet children get over having their hopes crushed, and that dear mother in the sorrow of her husbands fall and the disappointment of her children? What caused itall. It was the demon whiskey.

Here is an other picture, there is sitting around the fire in their cosey little room, an old gentleman and lady, their silver locks are frosted with the cares of many winters that have past over them. Their faces are wreathed in smiles to-night. It is Christmas. They have not many more days to spend in this world, and they know it, but they want to enjoy one more Christmas, for they are looking for their youngest son home to-night. They have spent a great deal of money educating their son, and they feel proud of him. There comes a knock on the door. The old gentleman opens it, and in reels their son, he is drunk. Can you not feel for that old father and mother, all their hopes for their dear son are forever gone. That son will soon send his dear old father and mother to their graves. What caused all their trouble. It was the demon whiskey. VOX.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India Missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this recipe in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. Noyes, 820 Powers Blk, Rochester, N. Y. apr16-y

A New Industry.

Guest—"So you are fond of work studying French! What is the object of that?"

Waiter—"I've been offered a steady job at big pay, over in Paris, if I learn French before going there."

Guest—"Humph! There are plenty of French waiters in Paris."

Waiter—"Y-es, but you see they can't understand French as Americans speak it."—New York Weekly.

Not Writers' Cramp.

Doctor—"From the condition of your hand and arm, I should say you are suffering from writers' cramp—too much exercise of one set of muscles."

Young Business Man—"But I never write. I employ a type-writer."

"Um—engaged to her!"

"Y-e-s."

"Do your—er—dictating with your other arm."

Commendable.

All claims not consistent with the high character of Syrup of Figs are purposely avoided by the Cal. Fig Syrup Company. It acts gently on the kidneys, liver and bowels, cleansing the system effectually, but it is not a cure-all and makes no pretensions that every bottle will not substantiate.

Deafness Can't be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

CHRISTMAS BELLS.

Ring loud! Ring long!
Hasten Christmas bells!
Gloomy gods of sin and hell
Flee away on affright before
Whose awful morn.
Angels shake and tremble sweetly
The warning tones still softly
To hardened souls forlorn.
Ring loud! Ring long!
To merry Christmas bells,
Ring loud! Ring long!

Ring low! Pray strong,
Low-lying, mourning hearts,
God's well-loved poor! By day, by night,
Make hope, give praise.
He knows thy direst need; know thou His might.
From Bounty's lavish hand,
In Plenty's garnered mass,
Pray low! Pray strong!
Christ's longing, patient ones,
Pray low! Pray strong!

Moan now, moan now
No more! On wagging couch
Gaunt spectors, tossing to and fro,
"Hideous," cry!
Christ the Consoler comes to smooth thy brow,
To light thy darkened sky,
To calm all earthly woe.
Moan now, moan now
No more! Christ stills both heart
And moan, and moan.

Ring loud! Ring long,
O strong-toned, Christmas bells!
For all—the rich, the wise, the poor,
Your welcome swells—
Ring long for Charity's wide open door!
Ring loud—a stainless name!
Ring long for Truth's bright score!
Ring loud! Ring long,
Life's hopeful, Christmas bells,
Ring loud! Ring long!

Martin's Christmas Gift.

BY HELEN FORREST GRAVES.

A gray December twilight; the leafless woods half hidden in the whirling clouds of snow that had begun to flutter through the chill air as the sun went down; a melancholy wind sighing sadly down the valley, where rocky hills rose up on each side of the steely gleaming river, and only the red light from Farmer Carey's kitchen window seemed to brighten up the somber scene. For the great log fire that blazed in the cheery throat of the huge stone chimney was sufficient of itself to light up the gloomiest winter gloaming that ever closed over the bleak New England hills.

It was a large, low room, with newly whitewashed walls, and solid wainscoting extending half way up to the ceiling; a room with small paned windows, which oddly distorted everything you looked at through their medium, and chairs and tables which were evidently manufactured in the days when wood was cheap, and people didn't mind a little extra bulk to lift around. A bright-striped rag carpet covered the floor, and the shelves of the wooden cupboard beyond the chimney were decorated with layers of newspapers, cut in fanciful shells and scollops, while divers and sundry implements of gleaming tin, hung on the walls, flashed back the brightness of the fire like so many eyes.

"Well?" said Mrs. Carey, setting down on a round pine stand the fat tallow candle she had just lighted, as her husband came in, shaking the light snow from his pepper-and-salt-covered overcoat, as if he intended to have a good storm within doors, on his own account.

"Well," answered Stephen Carey, composedly, "it's a-goin' to snow all night like furiation, an' the wind's settin' round to the east, and if it hadn't a' been for them mufflers you knit last month, my ears would ha' been clean frose off my head."

They were a curiously contrasting couple. She, rosy and fresh-colored, with bright black eyes, and a quick, fluttering way with her, like a bird; while he was tall, and slow, and ponderous, with leather-brown skin, and an expressionless, fossilized face. Yet they had been a singularly happy couple all their lives long.

"Did you get any letters?"

"Yes."

"From Martin?"

"No, not from Martin. We're goin' to have company to Christmas. Vivia Grey is coming to-morrow night."

Mrs. Carey elevated both hands in a sort of spasmodic despair.

"For the land's sake!" was her exclamation (which Stephen Carey facetiously termed "mother's swear!") "what's we goin' to do with Vivia Grey! We hain't nothin' like what she's been used to, and I don't see how on arth we're to make her anyways comfortable. We hain't no velvet carpets, nor silk sofys, like they have to her uncle's, and I don't know what should send her here."

"Because she wants to see us, I s'pose," observed Stephen, composedly. "There, there, wife, don't fret. Blood's thicker than water, and she's our foster cousin, you know. We'll make it pleasant for Martin, when he comes."

But Mrs. Carey could not take matters so easily as did her more phlegmatic spouse.

"I didn't put no store in the relation, she descend, 'cause I hadn't never a whole left for the plan, down I'd refused up the position. Twilight have sent for Deacon Beardsley's boys, if I'll only knowried in time. And there the floor in the front bedroom—I hain't no carpet for it, and—"

"Oh, bother the carpet, mother. If Vivia can't put up with what we've got, she must go elsewhere; but I'll risk her. Where's the paper?"

The snow lay white and pure, like ridges of pearl, over all the fallen logs and unsightly stone walls, fringing the solemn old cedar trees and turning the woods to cathedral arches carved in dazzling marble and alabaster, when Farmer Carey's old box-sleigh, costly lined with buffalo robes, jingled up to the door, just about dusk, and Vivia Grey ran into the kitchen, like a little fur-robed fairy, to Mrs. Carey's no small astonishment.

There was nothing so very terrible about this city visitant, after all—a delicate girl in blue merino dress, and gold brown hair falling in a rippled cloud about her oval face—a girl whose shy brown eyes looked at you as pleading for love, and whose mouth was as pert and lovely as a rosebud! Mrs. Carey threw off her wrappings in front of the huge fireplace.

"We've got a fire in the front room," began Mrs. Carey, but Vivia did not allow her to finish the sentence.

"Oh, never mind the front room," she said, coaxingly, "it's so bright and snug and cheery here. You'll let me stay, won't you?"

And Vivia had her way.

She was the brightest little sunbeam that night that ever illuminated the quiet old farm house. At least so thought Farmer Carey and his wife, as Vivia ran about, helping to clear away the table, and sweeping up the hearth and wiping the dishes as deftly as if she had been brought up to the trade, and finally settling down on a little cricket close to Mrs. Carey's side, where every gleam of the blazing fire turned her bright hair to shimmering gold and mirrored itself in the limpid depths of her hazel eyes.

"It's a little dull for you to night, my dear," said the farmer, glancing lovingly at her, as he smoked his evening pipe, "but Martin will be here to-morrow night, to spend Christmas. That's your cousin, my dear."

"My Cousin Martin!" repeated Vivia, softly.

"You'll like him, I'm sure—he's as fine a fellow as ever breathed, if he is my son," went on the old man. "And—now this is a great secret, my girl, remember—and I guess likely Martin means to surprise me with it, for I only heard on it through Deacon Beardsley's daughter-in-law, who came up last week—I shouldn't wonder if Martin should bring a wife here, one of these days, to get the old folks' blessing!"

The farmer's face was radiant as he spoke. Vivia listened with her fair head slightly turned.

"Would you like it?"

"Like it! I guess we should!"

"But you might not find his bride—"

"My Martin would never bring home a bride that we shouldn't love—of that I'm sartin," answered the old farmer, conclusively.

"Uncle Carey," said Vivia, earnestly, "will you promise me one thing?"

"Half a dozen, if you choose."

Vivia laughed.

"THERE HE IS NOW."

"I shall be satisfied with one. Promise me that you will not tell your son I am here. He—he may be vexed to think that the quiet of his home Christmas should be disturbed by the presence of a stranger."

"'Taint like Martin to feel so. He'll make you as welcome as flowers in May.'

"Yes, but promise me! It's only my whim!"

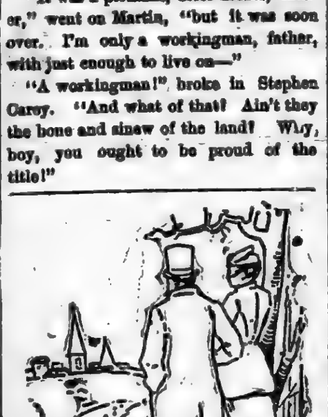
And she looked so pleadingly into Farmer Carey's eyes that he could not but promise.

The orange sunset of Christmas Eve streamed athwart the sunny fields like a beacon of promise—the woods, all hung with silver-pearled icicles, shone and glittered like enchanted palaces, as Farmer Carey drove up to the old red store at the cross-roads when the daily stage from the nearest railroad station discharged its human freight, and peered over the fur wrappings with which the careful hands of his wife and Vivia had completely muffled him.

"There he is now, walkin' up and down, with his hands in his pockets," cried the farmer, his brown face lighting up at the sight of his only son. "Martin! Martin, my lad! Why I do believe old Whitehorse knows him!"

And the next moment Martin Carey was seated beside his father in the box sleigh, cheerily conveying the import of

"CLOSE TO MRS. CAREY'S SIDE."



"WALKED TO THE VILLAGE CHURCH."

"Hear me out, father. I loved a girl who would grace the home of any man, and I had reason to believe that she returned my love. A trifling difference somehow made a coolness between us. I was in the wrong. Being made aware that I had misjudged her, I was about to seek a reconciliation, when I learned that she had fallen heiress to a fortune which lifted her far above my humble sphere. I have always said that I would never marry a heiress. Still less would I lay myself open to misconception now, when the world would say that her wealth alone brought about our reconciliation. I shall never see her again."

"But, Martin—"

"Oh, father, I am very miserable!"

One moment Martin Carey's head drooped on the kindly shoulder of the old man; then he straightened up again, erect and stately as a young pine tree.

"If you please, sir, you will not speak of it again. Let it die into the past. You would have liked her, I think. She is a distant relation of mother's family."

"Twan't Ruth Ann Wilcox, who went to York, teachin' school last fall!"

"No, sir; it was not Ruth Ann Wilcox."

And with this Mr. Carey was forced to be contented. Evidently, Martin did not like to be questioned; so, in his inmost mind, the old man came to the conclusion that it must have been "Deacon 'Siah Parson's step-daughter, that was half-sister to mother's cousin, Job Allways."

"But, Martin," he ventured to say, after they had skimmed along over the hard, frozen ground for some minutes in silence, "do you believe you young folks could have kissed and made friends if it hadn't been for the money she's fell heir to?"

"I do, father."

"There, I swow!" cried Farmer Carey, brandishing his whip-handle. "'Tain't doin' justice to her to let this consarned money part you both! Martin, boy, think twice about it."

"I have thought, sir, and my mind is unalterably decided. Could I bear to be called a fortune-hunter! Father, say no more; it only re-opens the old wounds, and, although I feel your kindness from the bottom of my heart, indeed, indeed, it can do us no good."

From the uncurtained windows the red firelight streamed out across the gathering darkness of the fast-closing night, as the sleigh drew tingling up in front of the door, and Martin Carey sprang out.

His mother was at the door to receive him in true motherly fashion, and the next instant he entered the cheery old kitchen, whose walls were all festooned with wreaths of hemlock, ivy, and shining laurel leaves, woven in with glowing scarlet berries.

"Why, mother!" he cried, "this is a genuine Christmas decoration! Who would have dreamed of there being so much skill left in your fingers."

"Tain't me!" cried Mrs. Carey, looking triumphantly round. "Dear me! I never could ha' twisted the things together so cunningly—it was Vivia."

"Vivia!"

Martin Carey's handsome face lit up with a glad smile. He threw open the door of the sitting-room, and there, in the ruddy firelight, stood the fair young girl, with downcast eyes and blushing cheeks.

"Vivia, my darling!"

"Yes, Martin—"

But here Farmer Carey thought himself of his promise to brown-eyed little Vivia, and suddenly turned the current of his words.

"And she'll be glad to see you, my boy! But, Martin, you don't look as hearty as you did last September. You're pale!"

"Am I?"

The young man was evidently a little embarrassed.

Farmer Carey dropped the reins again.

"There's nothing wrong, Martin? You haven't been getting in debt! Because if you have, my boy, we aren't rich folks, but there is the farm, and if a mortgage, or—"

"Nay, nay, father," answered Martin, pressing the old man's hand and gathering up the reins with a sad smile; "I am in no such difficulty as that; thank you all the same. Nor did I mean to cast a shadow over your quiet life with the reflection of my own sorrows. But since you have questioned me, I will confide in you freely. I have fallen in love."

"That's nothing to look sad about," the farmer answered. "Why, it's what I did myself, son Martin!"

"It was a pleasant, brief dream, father," went on Martin, "but it was soon over. I'm only a workingman, father, with just enough to live on—"

"A workingman!" broke in Stephen Carey. "And what of that! Ain't they the bone and sinew of the land! Why, boy, you ought to be proud of the title!"

"Christmas Bells.

O happy bells! through coming years
We hear, in your glad sending,
The message still of peace, good will—
All jarring discords blending.

O bells of God! ring on, our souls
To grander action nerving,
Till all our days are Christmas days
Of living and of serving.

Santa Claus in Germany.

St. Nicholas has neither sledge nor reindeer, for the Germans have no wide fireplaces through which he might descend in safety, and even a saint would find it hard to drive a team through the high, narrow porcelain stove that fills the corner of every room. So, on the evening of his festival, stockings and shoes are hung up at the window or laid by the bedside, and next morning good boys and girl find them well stuffed with candy and toys, but naughty children the good saint passes sorrowfully by and the dreadful hermit "Krampus" (hobgoblin) creeps up to the bedside and lays a long switch in the shoe.

Too Often.

Ignorant Child (to his father)—"Papa, what is a Christmas gift?"

Father (guilty)—"A Christmas gift, my son, is something you do not want returned by something you cannot afford.

Christmas Decorations.

The custom of decorating churches, dwellings and places of business with evergreen, holly, laurel, bays and mistletoe at the Christmas season has a heathen origin, being a perpetuation of an observance of the old British Druids, whose belief it was that kindly sylvan spirits sought these ornaments of living green and hovered near them, untouched and unharmed by nipping frost, until the death of winter.

Those same old Druids attached much importance to the mistletoe, investing it with a peculiarly hallowed and mystic character. They regarded it as an emblem of love and believed that it typified the beneficent feelings of their gods toward mankind. It is doubtless to this old Druidical association of the mistletoe with love that the English custom, which still obtains, of enforcing the forfeit of a kiss from any female who is caught under a branch of it at Christmas time, is traceable.

We are also indebted to the Druids for the Christmas game of "snap-dragon," which is played, as every one knows, by trying to snatch raisins from blazing brandy in an otherwise dark room. But probably few of those who have played it are aware that the old Druids were accustomed to worship a flame of burning spirits, into which they cast and from out of which they plucked certain objects.

"Yes, Martin, I will. You'll let me wish you a merry Christmas, won't you? And, Martin—"

"Well?"

She stole her little hand softly into his.

"I've got a Christmas gift for you, if you will accept it—myself."

"Vivia—stop a minute, Vivia!" he exclaimed. "Is this a dream, or are you really standing here under the shadow of the old roof-tree, lifting the weight from my heart! Vivia, my love, my darling—"

"Your wife," she interposed, gently. "Oh, Martin, would you have allowed a barrier of gold to separate us! Heiress though I am, I should have been the poorest woman in all Christendom if I had lost your love. And you need never fear the world's careless imputation of being a fortune-hunter. You did not come after me; I came after you."

And when Mrs. Carey came in, with the best damask table cloth on her arm, Martin and Vivia were still standing in front of the fireplace, rapt in one another's low, caressing words, the old lady stopped short.

"Martin—I didn't know—"

"But I know, mother!" cried out the genial voice of the farmer, close behind her. "Martin, say, lad, it's all right at last. Mother, we're goin' to have a dear little daughter, and her name is Vivia Grey!"

And when the clear, cold light of the blessed Christmas Day dawned radiantly over the glistening, snow-covered earth, and the red fingers of sunset wrote across the orient sky the sweet old words, "Peace on earth, goodwill to man," Martin Carey walked with Vivia to the village church, and there received the sweetest Christmas gift that earth could have in store for him.

He had married an heiress in spite of all his protestations—and that is the end of most men's resolutions.

I remember a Kentucky servant whose sole object in life was hunting, and whose big sight was gone by committed suicide. That gone, the world was to him the darkness of the tomb. Milton felt his blindness keenly, so in his pathetic sonnet he lets the world know, yet he did some of his greatest work while suffering under the calamity. Heine, in his six years of suffering and anguish, spent in what he himself cynically terms his "grave of mattresses," wrote some of his most touching poems.

The blind chaplain of congress—Dr. Milburn—is one of the happiest of mortals; so was the late Mr. Fawcett, postmaster general of England, and I know a doctor near Chicago who, though blind, is one of the cleverest of his profession. He not only attends to his large circle of patients, but is a writer on medical subjects as well, and operates the typewriter with the skill of a professional. In company he plays the most trying games of cards and is the brightest man at the table. After all, it seems to be a case of a man having the mind to rise superior to the troubles of life, and recognizing that even under affliction there are things worth living for.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Time Evens All Things.

Father—"My dear, this seems like a strange marriage. He is but 18 years old and you are 28. When he is 40 you will be 50."

Daughter—"No, indeed. I'll still be 28."

If your Back Aches, or you are all worn out, good for nothing, it is general debility. Brown's Iron Bitters will cure you, make you strong, cleanse your liver, and give a good appetite—tones the nerves.

The fear of future evil is in itself the greatest of evils.

"There's something behind it." That's what you think, perhaps, when you read that the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy offer $500 reward for an incurable case of Catarrh. Rather unusual, you think, to find the makers of a medicine trying to prove that they believe in it. "There must be something back of it!"

But it's a plain, square offer, made in good faith. The only thing that's back of it is the Remedy. It cures Catarrh in the Head. To its mild, soothing, cleansing and healing properties, the worst cases yield, no matter how bad or of how long standing. It has a record that goes back for 25 years. It doesn't simply relieve—it perfectly and permanently cures. With a Remedy like this, the proprietors can make such an offer and mean it. To be sure there's risk in it, but it's so very small that they are willing to take it.

You've "never heard of anything like this offer?" True enough. But then you've never heard of anything like Dr. Sage's Remedy.

How About Your Mother.

Scrofula or Kings Evil is the most stubborn of all Skin affections. Whether inherited or otherwise, it is a blood disease and cannot be permanently cured by anything but S. S. S.

A GRATEFUL DAUGHTER.

My Mother was sorely afflicted with Scrofula for three years and a half; during that time the glands on her neck burst open in five places. Three of the openings were small and healed right up, but the other two would fill up and break open anew, about every two weeks, always causing severe pain and often prostration. She was so reduced in strength, that tonics and coca wines had to be generously used to keep her alive. She commenced taking S. S. S., and improved from the start, the first bottle gave her an appetite and by the time she finished the fourth bottle her neck healed up, she is now entirely well.

"German Syrup"

A Farmer at Edom, Texas, Says:

"We are six in family. We live in a place where we are subject to violent Colds and Lung Troubles. I have used German Syrup for six years successfully for Sore Throat, Cough, Cold, Hoarseness, Pains in the Chest and Lungs, and spitting-up of Blood. I have tried many different kinds of cough Syrups in my time, but let me say to anyone wanting such a medicine—German Syrup is the best. That has been my experience. If you use it once, you will go back to it whenever you need it. It gives total relief and is a quick cure. My advice to everyone suffering with Lung Troubles is—Try it. You will soon be convinced. In all the families where your German Syrup is used we have no trouble with the Lungs at all. It is the medicine for this country.

The Crown of the Year.

In sapphire, emerald, amethyst,
Sparkles the sea by the morning kissed;
And the mists from the far-off valleys lie
Gleaming like pearl in the tender sky;
Soft shapes of cloud that melt and drift,
With tints of opal that glow and shift.

For the strong wind blows from the warm southwest
And ruffles the snow on the white gull's breast—
Fills all the sails till the boats careen;
Low over the crested waves they lean,
Driven to leeward, dashed with spray,
Or beating up through the beautiful bay,

Ah, happy morning of autumn sweet,
Yet ripe and rich with the summer's heat!
By the ruined wall on the rocky hight,
In shadow I gaze at the changing light,
Splendor of color that clothes thee round,
Huge orb of the earth to its utmost bound.

Near me each humble flower and weed,—
The dock's rich umber, gone to seed,
The hawkbit's gold, the bayberry's spice,
One late wild rose beyond all price;
Each is a friend and all are dear,
Pathetic signs of the waning year.

The painted rose haws, how they glow!
Like crimson wine the woodbines show,
The wholesome yarrow's clusters fine
Like frosted silver dimly shine;
And who thy quaintest charm shall tell,
Thou little scarlet pimpernel?

The jeweled sea and the deeps of the air,
All heaven and earth are good and fair.
Ferns at my feet and the mullein's spike,
And the soaring gull I love alike;
With the schooner's grace as she leans to the tide
The soul within me is satisfied.

In the mellow, golden autumn days
When the world is zoned in their purple haze,
A spirit of beauty walks abroad
That fills the heart with the peace of God;
The spring and summer may bless and cheer,
But autumn brings us the crown o' the year.

Great-Grandmother's Story.

Many years ago a girl and her great-grandmother sat together—the girl in tears. Said Great-grandmamma Hudson, sitting very straight, not lolling, at her 88 years, as did her great-grandchild of 18:

"Young folks think old folks are fools, but old folks know that young folks are."

"That is because you're old, grandma," sobbed Linda.

"No; it is because I was once young," said the old lady.

"But he is the only one I shall ever love," said Linda. "Papa is cruel to me. Why does he think ill of Lewis? He knows nothing about him. I shall die if we are separated."

"I was going to die, too," said great-grandmother, "but I didn't."

"Oh, tell me, please," cried Linda, "had you a lover? Did they separate you? I never knew you had a love story—that is, that kind of one."

"Yes," said the old lady. "I had a lover. You can have many lovers, but never more than one father and mother. Folks think of that when it's too late. When father said that Cecil was Lord knows who, and he should not come to see me, I remember I almost hated him for it. When mother said she didn't like him either I almost hated her. Cruel creatures that stood between me and my young lover—that was what my parents seemed to me then; and I was worse than you, my dear, ever so much worse, for it seemed wicked to me that any one should take it for granted a man was not worthy of love because he was a stranger, and I made preparations to run away with Cecil and marry him at Gretna Green.

"Everything was ready; I had my jewelry in my bosom and my little bundle on my arm, and was creeping out of a side door that led into the garden when a hand came down on my shoulder and a voice cried out:

"'My girl, is this the way you use us?' and there was my father.

"My father's face was white as a ghost and his hand shook as he held mine.

"'Oh, father, father!' I cried, 'if you would only let me have my will in this one thing. You can't make a girl love or hate by saying so.'

"He stood holding me firm and fast.

"'It is Emeline who has betrayed me,' I said, and though they would never admit it I knew the maid had proved false.

"Well, they locked me up in my room. How often I cried out 'I shall die if I am separated from Cecil.'

"I am very old, but when I think of it my old pain comes back again. His eyes were like black diamonds, and he had an olive cheek and full red lips, and your men with padded shoulders and hollow cheats wouldn't look like men standing beside him.

"It was a dreary time and my health broke down under it. I had a fever, and when I was well again the doctor said I must have a change; so mother decided to take me to the seaside; but first we were to go by stage-coach to London and visit an aunt I had there.

"It was the day of stage-coaches and the day of highwaymen.

"Going over a certain common on our way coaches had more than once been stopped. The men were armed always and the women trembled when they saw horsemen riding towards them.

"'Your money or your life,' was their word, and they kept it.

"'If we should meet the highwaymen!' said my mother; but I was not afraid. I didn't care whom we met or what happened to me.

"We rode away from our home in the bright daylight and stopped for dinner and to change horses at an inn; then we rode on again. It would be night long before we reached London. I sat in the coach with my head on my mother's shoulder, thinking of just one thing—Cecil. Should I never see him again—never, never, never? Would he not follow me and carry me off by force? Could I not somehow let him know and escape from my aunt's house in London and be married, so that no one could part us? Oh, I was so miserable—miserable. Nothing like making plans that can come to nothing and burst like bubbles when we have thought them out, for wretchedness.

"The afternoon faded out and the sun set. The moon rose.

"'See what a lovely moon!' said my mother. But I had not cared to look at the moon since I saw her over the garden wall that night I had tried to run away. Rumble went the coach, crack went the whip.

"Suddenly there was a tumult.

"'Gentlemen,' cried the guard—'gentlemen, I'm afraid we are to have some trouble here. See to your weapons, gentlemen!'

"Then the coach came to a stand.

"The shrieking women clung together. Four masked men rode to the door. The coachman and guards lay in a ditch. One of the gentlemen was bound; the other was old and lame. They were rifling his pockets while he was screaming. They took out a gold watch, a purse and his snuff-box with diamonds on it. They had already the other's money.

"Then one—the largest, the handsomest figure—leant over us.

"'Don't fear, ladies,' he said in a soft voice. 'All we want is whatever valuables you may have about you.'

"Mamma began to scream.

"The lady who sat next to her fainted.

"We could not see the man's face, for he was masked, and we were in the shadow of the coach.

"'Something shines on your finger,' he said; 'let me see it.'

"He caught at the chain on which I wore a locket with a curl of Cecil's hair.

"'Don't take that!' I cried. 'Don't take that!'

I clutched it. Our heads were close together. I saw his chin and mouth under his mask. At the same moment my face was thrust into the moonlight.

"'Amy!' I heard him whisper to himself, and I knew Cecil.

"Meanwhile something had happened. Two gentlemen had ridden up—the one who had been bound was free. For once the tables had been turned upon the robbers.

"Then one had ridden away; two were bound and one lay bleeding. This last one was Cecil.

"I knew now that my father had not been wrong. Cecil was even worse than he thought him. He was a highwayman, a bad man and the companion of bad men—a creature who cut purses on the public road.

"They were not all ignorant men, these highwaymen, by any means.

"Many had good birth, education and manners. Yes, a bad man! But how could I hate him all at once? I understood that my father had been right in parting us; but those lips had kissed me—those hands held mine.

"'The ladies need fear no longer, said one of the gentlemen. 'Those fellows are not in a condition to molest them.'

"Then he said (men didn't say such high-flown things then): 'How merciful is the gentler sex! It is compassionate to the erring as well as the virtuous.'

"For I had torn my hand from my mother's and knelt beside Cecil.

"They thought I pitied a wounded robber—that was all; but this is what we whispered in the darkness:

"'Amy, you know what I am now; but I love you.'

"And I answered: 'Cecil, I hate your deeds without hating you.'

"Those were the last words we ever spoke to each other—the very last."

"Did you ever see him again?" asked the girl. "Oh, Grandmamma! never again?"

The old woman looked into her eyes.

"He was a very bad man, my dear," she said, "very bad; and I never saw him again. I believe he died a shameful death one day at the hands of the executioner. But, you see, it was because I have been young, not because I am old, that I said you young folks are fools.

"It was a good while—yes, a good while—after that night in the stage-coach before I came to my senses sufficiently to thank dear papa for his watchfulness over me, and be really glad that I had never been Cecil's wife; but I did at last, my dear—I did at last; and I married my good husband, your great-grandfather—whom you never saw; and we were always happy. The heart of a woman is a mystery and has been since Eve, my little girl."

The Curious in Numbers.

A lover of the curious in numbers has figured out some interesting facts concerning the City of Berlin. The city has 210 miles of streets, so that a person might walk ten days in the German capital without going up or down the same street twice. If the 1,400,000 inhabitants were to turn out at a grand review, and march in double file, they would form a line 750 miles in length, a column long enough to reach nearly entirely across France. If the citizens should all determine to start on a journey on the same day and at the same time all the cars in Germany would accommodate but two-thirds of their number. If formed in a single file, each with his hand on the other's shoulder, the column would be nearly 2000 miles long. If separated until only within speaking distance of each other, the column would be a human telegraph line long enough to reach from Berlin to Calcutta, India.—[St. Louis Republic.

BILL ARP'S LOGIC.

He Says Every Man Owes His Ancestors.

He Speaks of His Book Just from the Press, and Talks of Diamonds and Pearls.

Dr. Jonson said to Boswell that every man was in debt to his ancestors. In debt for science and art, discovery and invention, for improved methods of agriculture and better modes of living, for history and poetry and romances, and a thousand things too tedious to mention. And as we can't pay the debt to those who are gone before we should pay it to those who are to come after, pay it to posterity. "Therefore," said he, "every man should do something for the comfort or the pleasure of those who survive him. He should write a book, or preach a sermon, or plant a tree, or a vine, or leave behind him a good example." I was ruminating about this when I saw the bushels of apples that were gathered from the trees I planted many years ago, and that will continue to bear long after I am dead. So much for that. It is not uncommon nor is it generally unselfish. For forty years I have been planting trees and vines to please Mrs. Arp and her posterity, and my debt on that line is paid.

And now I have written a book and the Constitution Publishing Company has placed it before the public for better or worse. Mrs. Arp told me a long time ago that some of my letters were better and some worse, and so in making up this book I invoked her better judgment, and she says she tried to winnow the wheat from the chaff, but as they [illegible] will be found in the pages. "However," said she, "I think the beautiful cover will make up for that. It is the binding that sells a book nowadays. It looks so pretty on the parlor table."

"Just so," said I. "I have long observed that it is fine dressing that makes the lady. It doesn't matter what her contents are provided she is gilded and garnished on the outside." Mrs. Arp looked at me with one of her looks, and I continued my broken remarks by saying: "I allude, of course, to those fashionable ladies who are stuffed and padded at the milliner's until you can't tell where cotton ends and flesh and blood begin."

"What business have you to know?" said she.

"None—none at all, said I. It's all hearsay, and it may be a mistake—a slander. Women love ornament by nature, and I love to see them arrayed in beautiful garments that come high and hang low. If I were rich you should wear diamonds and pearls and dress in silk velvet and Siberian furs, but as I am not rich, I don't like to see any lady dress finer than you do, but still I don't consider it a sin for a woman to dress fine and wear jewelry if she can afford it. You remember that Isaac sent Rebecca a pair of ear rings that weighed half a shekel each and cost about seventy-five cents."

"Extravagant lover!" said Mrs. Arp.

"And you know," I continued, "that the fields are dressed with flowers and the heavens with stars and the birds with plumage."

"Yes," said she, "the male birds are very fine—the rooster and the peacock, for instance. The hens have to go in their every-day clothes and do all the work and scratch for the chicks, while the males go strutting around in their fine clothes and do nothing." This unexpected comparison upset me for a moment—Mrs. Arp always upsets me in an argument. But I rallied to my position and said: "Just so, just so; exactly, and it is because birds are of the earth earthy, and so is man, but woman was not made out of dust; she didn't evolute from the animal—Dame Nature finished up with her said quit—

"Her 'prentice hand she tried on man,
And then she made the lasses, oh."

Mrs. Arp smiled one of her smiles and said: "That will do now. Burns wrote beautiful poetry and I loved all womankind. If he had been faithful to one it would have been better for him and for her. But what about your book? Do you expect to make any money out of it, or are you just publishing it for fame or for fun?"

"A little money," said I, "a little fame and some fun. You know that the author of a book don't get much money. I hope to realize 25 cents a copy and to sell enough to keep you in missionary money. One copy a week will do that, won't it?"

She never said anything. She seemed to be reading a paper—the missionary paper. She must have read something tender and pathetic, for suddenly she looked at me and remarked: "Well, I hope the book will sell and bring you enough money to make you easy and comfortable. If the people like your letters I should think they would like the book, for your best ones are all in there, and the illustrations help out the stories. 'Uncle Barker's Fight with The Blacksmith' is a splendid story, and so is the 'Horrel Heir' and the chapter on music, and the 'Savannah Cousin' and the 'Georgia Cracker and you driving the carryleg. Any one of them is worth the subscription price. I have half a mind to take an agency myself and sell the book. It looks hard for the author to get only 25 cents and the agent who sells the book gets more, but I suppose that is business."

"It is hard on the book agents, too," said I, "for they get none of the fame and none of the fun and are never invited to stay to dinner."

She continued to comfort me with hopeful forecasts and some willful praises of my rambling literature and a tender reminder that "Aunt Dorothy" was coming on to both, and soon, very soon, we would have to lay down the needle and the pen, and depend on grandchildren for support. And then she began to talk about Carl and Jessie and wondered how many days they could stay when they came next Christmas. She soon became quite silent when the other children left us, and the sun's rays up there [illegible] the last of the year. It mostly works out that way. When [illegible] and grandchildren and great-grandchildren [illegible] in the daily economy of Uncle John Bunyan's home. "Who do you think is most like you, I [illegible] she said, after my reflections. "I feel so sorry for Ruth, the eldest. I know how she must love him. I do wish it could be so that Ruth would divide her time with [illegible] when they would all make friends just for the child's sake."

And so when I came home with the morning paper and saw her look of inquiry, I told her it was all settled just as she wished, and everything was calm and serene. I think she rejoiced almost as much as the little girl's kindred. "I wish," said she, "that every motherless child had an aunt so loving and so able to care for her and bring her up to womanhood. There is many an orphan that nobody wants and nobody will take except Dr. Jacobs, at the Thornwell orphanage. We must send those children a nice Christmas box this time. There isn't a member of our church who can't put in something—something to wear or some books to read. Our own grandchildren may be left as poor and pitiless some day, and maybe what we do for orphans now will be paid back to them. There is an awful responsibility upon us all, but the rich people don't seem to know it. They wait for misery to come to their doors and beg, but they never hunt for it."

That is a fact. And misery won't go in many cases. Misery had rather suffer than to beg. Misery will sleep cold rather than ask for a blanket. Christmas will soon be here and then we will gather our flocks together and be happy, but there are thousands to whom Christmas is no more than any other day. Let all do what they can this time to make the poor and the friendless happy.—BILL ARP, in Atlanta Constitution.

P. S.—So many friends are writing me about the book that I wish to say that the price is $1.50, and if the money is sent to the Constitution Publishing Company, Atlanta, Ga., the book will be sent by mail with its covers and pictures and wheat and chaff, and if it don't save you a doctor's bill I can't help it, I have done my best. THEY ARE READY

To Take the Convicts Back to Their Respective Camps.

A Nashville telegram says: Everything is now apparently in readiness for a move on the branch prisons in East Tennessee. J. M. Liddell, the new warden at Briceville, says he has completed his guard of fifty men, and is only awaiting orders. Superintendent Wade on Saturday appointed William T. Ridley, of Williamson county, warden for Coal Creek. Mr. Ridley was a member of Capt. Battle's old regiment, and is said to be a very determined and fearless man. He is selecting his own guards, and he is to take twenty-five to Coal Creek. The required military force has been secured. Colonel Kellar Anderson will be in command at Briceville, with the twenty-five militia, and Colonel Spurr at Coal Creek with twenty-five. The former is to have command of the whole military force. Superintendent Wade says that the militia, guards and convicts will go to East Tennessee at the same time. All of the guards will be armed with the latest improved Winchester rifles, which have been ordered for their equipment.

CONFEDERATE RECORDS

Wanted by Compilers of War History at Washington.

A New Orleans dispatch of Saturday says: General John B. Gordon, commanding United States confederate veterans, has issued an order in which he says:

At the request of officers of the government, who are compiling the records and history of the war, the general commanding desires that all officials of this association, and officers and members of every camp will take steps at once to obtain everything of an official nature which belong to the history of the war and send same to these headquarters to be transmitted to Washington with the view to publication in the confederate records of war. The attention of all ex-confederate soldiers is called to the meagerness of the confederate side in the volumes of the records that have been recently published, and asks their prompt and earnest aid in this matter, which is so important in assisting to carry out the historical feature of this association. Any books, papers or matters will be carefully returned, after being used, if so desired.

RIOT AT PERNAMBUCO.

An Encounter Between Troops and the People—Sixty Killed.

A dispatch received at London from Pernambuco states that a popular uprising occurred in that city Saturday against the governor of the province. The streets quickly filled with throngs of riotous people, and it was found necessary to call out troops to quell the disorder. The officers in command of the soldiers, seeing that no other means would avail, gave the order to fire upon the mob and sharp fighting followed. It is reported that sixty persons were killed or wounded during the conflict.

A BOILER BURSTS

Killing Two Men and Fatally Wounding Another.

A dispatch from Springfield, O., says: A boiler, used by some stone contractors near Baldwin shanties on St. Louis street, exploded Saturday morning, killing Engineer Phillip Dark and Assistant Engineer Robert Bass, and fatally wounding George Green, a laborer. The explosion was caused by turning a stream of cold water into the boiler while iron hot and nearly empty.

TRADE REVIEW

As Reported by the Mercantile Agency of Dun & Co.

The business failures occurring throughout the country for week ended December 18, as reported by R. G. Dun & Co., number for the United States, 307; Canada, 28; total, 335; against 320 last week. As the end of year approaches general trade slackens, and there is perhaps not more than the usual disposition to defer large transactions until after stocktaking and the holidays. The holiday trade is now in full blast, and throughout the country is quite large. It is satisfactory to see that from nearly all points reports which note inactivity usual at this season, also observe the prevalent and strong belief that the business of the coming season will be unusually large and profitable. These expectations have warrant in the fact that the quantity of products marketed during the past few months has been large beyond all precedent, while money markets are well supplied in nearly all parts of the country, and undisturbed by any alarm. Commercial credits and confidence are in a satisfactory shape for the transaction of an enormous business early next year.

The iron trade shows greater strength and larger sales of pig than for a long time, but extraordinary weakness is shown in some finished products. In boots and shoes there is much business but little noise, shipments being still 8½ per cent behind last year. In dry goods, orders have been placed for December, but the prospects are not unfavorable. Wool is steady, fleece and territorial being more active. Trade in cotton goods is improving, and print cloths are firm at 3 cents.

Prices of breadstuffs have declined, wheat 1½ cents, corn 7 cents, and oats 2½ cents, receipts continuing large beyond precedent. Cotton receipts also exceed last year and the price has dropped an eighth. Coffee is an eighth stronger, and pork products slightly stronger, but the general level of prices has fallen remarkably during the week and month thus far.

Elegant buckles come into play upon the belts worn with comfortable and stylish belted blouses.

The postoffice department may not be ready for one-cent postage, but the country is undoubtedly ready for it. The question is settled by the fact that the present letter postage produces a surplus.

We agree with the Florence Banner, when it says that "a little mean whiskey, mixed up with a thimble full of brains, makes the biggest all-round fool in America. This is distressingly true, and to be regretted, but such is the case."

The Scottsboro Citizen contains announcements of candidates for office as follows: Six for Probate Judge; five for Circuit Clerk; six for Sheriff; four for County Treasurer; ten for Tax Assessor; seven for County Commissioner; five for Tax Collector; three for the Legislature; three for Superintendent of Education, and one for Coroner.

Great Thoughts for the New Year.

The secret of being lovely is in being unselfish.—J. G. Holland.

The best way to live is to cast away troubles and contentions, which cannot be cured by fretting. In justice to the requirments of the present, you should not look back and make yourself wretched over things that cannot be undone.

Such help as we can give to each other in this world is a debt to each other, and the man who perceives a superiority or a capacity as a subordinate, and neither confesses of assists it, is not merely a withholder of kindness, but the committer of injury.

The history of the past is a mere puppet show. A little man comes out and blows a little trumpet and goes in again. You look for something new, and lo! another little man comes out and blows another little trumpet and goes in again, and it is all over.

It is not poverty so much as pretence that harasses a proud mind—the struggle between a proud mind and an empty purse—the keeping up a hollow show that soon must come to an end. Have the courage to appear poor and you disarm poverty of its sharpest sting.

How many occasions of doing good, in greater or less measure, are passed by from irresolution! while we are saying to ourselves: "Shall I, or shall I not?" the moment flies away, and the blossom of joy which we might have given to it is withered, and often cannot be revived by any years of repentance.

Marriage enlarges the scene of our happiness and miseries. A marriage of love is pleasant; a marriage of interest easy, and a marriage where both meet happy. A happy marriage has in it all the pleasure of friendship, all the enjoyments of sense and reason, and indeed all the sweets of life. Those marriages generally abound most with love and constancy that are preceded by a long courtship. The passion should strike root and gather strength before marriage is grafted on it.

Too many of us look forward to happiness in the future years instead of getting all the enjoyment possible out of the present. It will be well to remember that the time never will come in this world when we shall have everything we want just where and when we want it. The only way to be happy is to enjoy all we have to the utmost as we go along. It is right to lay up for old age in youth; right to prepare for a rainy day; but it is not right to bend all our energies to this end, and put off until the future the happiness we might enjoy every day.

Young men are generally introduced to the vice of drunkenness by the company they keep; but do you carefully guard against ever submitting yourself to be the companion of low, vulgar and dissipated men, and hold it as a maxim, you had better be alone than in mean company? Let your companions be such as yourself, or superior; for the worth of a man will always be rated by that of his companions. You do not find pigeons associate with hawks, or lambs with bears; and it is unnatural for a moral man to be the companion of blackguards.

For Associate Justice.

Judge J. B. Dowdell, the present able and efficient judge of this circuit, has been announced by the Lafayette Sun as a candidate for Associate Justice of the Supreme Court. We would have some regrets at losing such a man as Judge Dowdell as circuit Judge. His work on the bench, which has come within our observation, has been most wholesome and effective of good, and as that is the prime object and purpose of law, it cannot be denied that Judge Dowdell is pre-eminently fit, capable and deserving of promotion to the Supreme Bench. A second thought reminds us that it is about time that this part of the State had a representative in our higher court. Judge Dowdell would conscientiously appreciate the great responsibility accompanying this high honor, and being otherwise fit and capable why should not he be promoted?

Why Times Are Hard.

Waco (Texas) Day.

To depreciate the times and call them hard is the fashion, and why is it? Step into any grocer's establishment in Waco and examine his stock. "There is a heap of Irish potatoes in sacks, very fine, too—where did you get them?"

"From California," replied the grocer.

"Blushing apples, rosy, sweet, juicy, by the dozen barrels—were they picked from a Texas orchard?"

"Oh, no," the grocer replies; "we ordered those from Kansas City."

In the corner of an Austin avenue emporium of edibles is a pyramid of baskets filled with grapes, beautiful blue, filled with nectar, wholesome, excellent.

"Where do you get your grapes, Mr. Grocer?"

"Those are El Paso grapes" replied the dealer.

"Well that is better, for El Paso is in Texas, but grapes grow well in McLennan county. How about those onions?"

"They came from El Paso, too. They were shipped over the Southern Pacific, Texas & Pacific and Missouri, Kansas & Texas. Their price is doubled by the freight charge, and yet onions grow as well in the Brazos lands as they do in the Upper Rio Grande valley. I don't see why onions are not raised nearer at hand, concludes the grocer.

"Where did you get that celery?"

"From Kalamazoo, Michigan."

"Will celery grow in Texas?"

"Luxuriantly. It is indigenous on the Texas coast," replies the grocer.

"Where did that bacon come from?"

"From Kansas City."

"And those brooms?"

"From Chicago."

"Do they make brooms in Waco?"

"Oh, yes, good brooms are made here. But nobody calls for them. They are sent away mostly and sold in other markets."

"What is that in those cans?"

"It is milk."

"Where is it from?"

"It was packed in Michigan."

"Do they have cows in Texas?"

"Oh, yes, lots of them, but very few of them are milked. It is troublesome to keep cows and have them milked."

Just then a farmer came in and had sold a bale of cotton for $45.

He purchased a side of meat made in Chicago, a ham cured in Cincinati, a keg of molasses raised in Lousiana, a peck of apples grown in Kansas, a can of condensed milk from Detroit, a broom made in St. Louis, a plug of tobacco manufactured in Lynchburg, an axe handle turned in New York, then he loaded his goods in a wagon made at Milwaukee. Next he got a pint of Tennessee whiskey in a flask blown in Wheeling, W. Va., and that night while in camp in a wagon yard waiting for daylight to drive home, he was robbed. He caught the thief, turned him over to the officers, and the fellow proved to be a New Yorker.

The fact is, Texas does not depend upon itself for anything; even its thieves are imported.

Read and Heed.

Here is a bit of philosophy from the Atlanta Constitution that is worth much fine gold to him that heeds: "With rare exceptions, a fortune is a thing of slow growth. To most of us it will never come. The prizes of life with the majority are a good name, a comfortable living, a modest home, and a little money laid by for a rainy day. Strive for those through hard work and economy and be content. A genuine man is fit for better things than piling up riches anyhow!"

SHOT DOWN

LIKE CATTLE — OUTLAW BOB SIMS TURNS UP AGAIN.

Seven Of His Followers Sack and Rob a Farm House. The Occupants Riddled with Bullets When they Flee.

Revenge Follows Quick and Fast, and Eight of the Minutes are Lynched.

SHUTUBA, Miss., Dec. 24.—The notorious outlaw, Bob Sims, has returned to Choctaw County, Ala. John McMillan, a merchant of Choctaw County, was receiving a load of merchandise from the river landing, and Bob Sims leveled a Winchester rifle on the driver and made him unload them at Sims' house, and sent McMillan word he would burn his house and kill him. McMillan's house was guarded that night, but last night at 11 o'clock seven of the "Simiters," all armed with Winchesters, fired on McMillan's house and shot the occupants as they ran out.

Charley Utsey, escaped unhurt.

Fluellen Utsey was shot, but not mortally wounded.

John Kennedy, father-in-law of McMillan, was killed.

John McMillan was shot three times and will die.

A 12-year-old nephew of McMillan was killed.

A 10-year-old nephew was shot in the house and burned up.

Miss Belle McKensey, a school teacher, boarding at McMillan's was shot twice in the neck.

They then opened McMillan's store, robbed it of what goods they wanted and left it lighted up and open, scattering shoes along the road. They remarked that they would burn out and kill Dr. Brown and Frank Tato to-night. Sims' daughters were dressed in men's clothing and armed with Winchesters at Sims' house yesterday, and are supposed to be a part of the seven. A large body of men are after the gang, and will never stop until they catch them.

THE TERRIBLE SEQUEL.

Thursday morning a large body of determined men followed Sims and three of the gang to Sims' house, and surrounded the house. Firing from the citizens and also from the Sims house, continued at [illegible] from then until 3 o'clock Christmas day.

Several conversations were had between the Sheriff and Sims before he surrendered, Sims making demands he could not agree to. At an hour named he agreed to surrender on condition that they be protected and carried to Butler jail.

The Sheriff promised the best protection he could give under the circumstances. Sims selected twenty-five men and the sheriff twenty-five and started with them to Butler. About one mile from Sims' house a body of men, from one to two hundred, took them from the guard and and Sims expressed fears that he would never reach the jail dead or alive when he was placed in the buggy for the fatal ride. He refused to be blindfolded, held out his hand and asked them to feel of his pulse to see if he was frightened. The women were turned loose.

THREE MORE HANGED.

MOBILE, ALA., Dec. 28.—Neal Sims and forty men are reported near Womack Hill and threatened to burn the town.

Five hundred citizens are hunting him. They found John Sims, Tom Mosely and a negro all of whom were engaged in the first massacre and all three were hanged.

They are hunting for others, and fears are entertained that a clash between Neal Sims gang and the citizens in pursuit will occur.

Judge James R. Dowdell, of Chambers, is an announced candidate for Supreme Court Judge. He is at present Judge of the Fifth Judicial Circuit, and has made a reputation for learning and wisdom that gives him a leading position among the many candidates for the exalted position which he now seeks. He will have a strong following from all sections and especially from East Alabama, where he lives and enjoys the universal confidence of the people.—Age-Herald.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Democratic Victory.

Touching upon the recent primary election in Jefferson county the Age-Herald well says:

In only one rural precinct did Governor Jones make a speech. He got nearly one-third the vote there. Before an effort was made there on the stump, it was practically solid for Kolb. All the newspapers in Alabama could not have effected any change. We conclude therefore, what we long ago gave as our opinion, that if the farmer vote is to be turned from Captain Kolb, it will be done by such a campaign as Alabama never saw. A campaign by speakers in country precincts, speakers in whom the people have confidence, speakers who will meet the voters face to face.

A Wonder Worker.

Mr. Frank Huffman, a young man of Burlington, Ohio, states that he had been under the care of two prominent physicians, and used their treatment until he was not able to get around. They pronounced his case to be consumption and incurable. He was persuaded to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds and at that time was not able to walk across the street without resting. He found, before he had used half of a dollar bottle, that he was much better; he continued to use it, and is to-day enjoying good health. If you have any throat, lung, or chest trouble, try it. We guarantee satisfaction. Trial bottle free.

The Equitable Life Assurance Society

OF THE UNITED STATES.

In selecting a company in which to insure, why not take the best instead of being persuaded by the eloquence of representatives of weaker companies to take what is less advantageous? It is the company, not the agent, with whom the insured must deal after the policy is once taken. It is the company, not the agent that pays the dividends and meets claims when they mature. It costs no more to secure in the best and strongest company than any other established on a sound business basis; therefore, we again ask, WHY NOT TAKE THE BEST?

[illegible]

There is [illegible] stopping the fast [illegible] has taken on considerable growth during the past six months notwithstanding the general tendency to "get money." The six new residences of Messrs. Collier, Johnson, Morgan, Kemp, Stanfield and Evans will be followed by yet others and a new school building is now a probability of the near future. The town has also gained some good citizens during the year.

Mr. J. P. Allen, whom we all knew at Jemison, has opened a new store and has drawn considerable trade in this direction. As a citizen Mr. Allen has not yet cast his lot with us, as he still makes his home at Jemison. Mr. A. is one of those men of whom it can be said "there is always room for more" in any community, and we hope he will yet move down with his good wife, and bring another new residence with him.

Mr. W. H. Merritt has moved up from Lowndes and established himself in the mercantile and lumber business. Chilton has drawn a good many citizens from Lowndes, and we have yet to see one that is not an all-round tip-top good citizen; and it can be said of Mr. Merritt that he is one of the most energetic, enterprising and unselfish that has come here from that great county. A gentleman of the very first water in spite of his red head.

Mr. R. Ehrman has been drawn back. And it is enough to say that a shrewd and far-seeing business man like Mr. E. would not have come back except for business and trade.

Lowndes county has also contributed two charming brides to our town recently, and we desire to say that there is room here for more of that class of citizens also.

We mention these encouraging facts as evidence that our town is not going "to the demnition bowwows," but is steadily growing and improving all the while; and as we enter upon a new year to-morrow, the retrospect should make the prospect brighter.

The Rain Making Nonsense.

The rain making experiment in Texas is pronounced a failure, Melborne in Kansas has convinced the people he is a success. In some counties he has been engaged for next summer to produce rain fall, as required, at ten cents an acre. The experiments in Texas have gotten more ridicule than compliments from the papers, some of them charge them with holding back their experimenting until the indications, as reported by telegraph, showed that the conditions were favorably for rainfall. In the few cases where rain came after their explosions followed their efforts it was evident that rain was coming anyhow, as it generally extended over large areas of country. Mr. G. E. Curtis, who was sent out of the Smithsonian Institute to witness and report the experiments says that after several weeks with experimenting with balloons and kites, Dyrenforth and his men thought of the rackarock, and one day when the clouds were very near the earth, they exploded a few charges of it. A few drops of rain followed. After the preliminary trial of this explosive, to see whether it was of good quality, a slight shower followed sixteen hours after the explosion. This was telegraphed all over the country as a howling success. The explosion had absolutely nothing to do with the drops of rain that fell. There were slight showers all over Northwestern Texas that afternoon, hundreds and hundreds of miles from the scene of the trial. Ex-Senator Farwell, of Illinois, who owns a great deal of land in Texas, and is a firm believer in the production of rain by artificial means, got an appropriation through congress, and Dyrenforth was appointed to be the head of the expedition. The whole thing is devoid of practical and commercial value.

The apparent success of Melbourne in Kansas will no doubt be explained in some way, after he gets to work next summer.--[Indiana Farmer.

Eighteen hundred and ninety-one years ago the angels announced unto the shepherds glad with the good news that a Savior was born. And again the angels last came to rejoice, while a large assembly at Rocky Mount Church had the pleasure of listening to a blind man, Rev. J. M. Forrester, last Friday deliver a Christmas sermon. He showed us the beauty of holiness, and how to celebrate the anniversary of the birth of the world's Redeemer.

At Jemison, on the 22d inst., Mrs. Elizabeth Noblet, after many months affliction was gently carried by angels across the last river. She crossed over to join her husband and little son who crossed over last winter. They leave two sweet little girls. God be with them, till they all meet again.

To the editor of the View we extend hearty good wishes, for a prosperous new year. May prosperity attend him and his. A MOTHER.

Verbena Items.

Rev. J. P. Sanders and Mrs. Sanders, are visiting relatives in Eufaula.

Rev. J. P. Sanders will be pastor of the M. E. Church here for another year. The petition sent up to the Conference by the Clanton church to place Verbena and Clanton under one pastor did not materialize.

Messrs. William Caffey, of Columbia, Tenn., and Frank Caffey, of Harvard College, and Dr. and Mrs. Hugh Caffey, of Jemison, spent Christmas with the family of Dr. H. W. Caffey at this place.

Messrs. Eugene Barrett, of Clanton, and Lucien Zimmerman, of Shelby, have been spending Christmas with their many friends in our city.

The numerous friends of Miss Fannie Nix are glad to see her out again after quite a serious spell of sickness.

Your printer omitted my item last week mentioning Miss Fannie's sickness.

Miss Kate Campbell, of the Capital City has been visiting relatives here.

Married, near Verbena, on the evening of the 22d, Miss Mollie Barrow to Mr. William Johnson.

Prof. Sam Strock, of Shelby, has been visiting his father, Mr. W. B. Strock.

Miss Inez Northington, is spending Christmas with friends in Autauga.

Miss Sallie Barnett, who is attending school at Tuskegee, is spending the holidays at home.

Miss Lucy Bell Mitchell and Miss Mackie Dickinson, two Lowndes' lovely young ladies, were the guests of Miss Mary Powell during Christmas. Dr. Clifton Powell and lady, Mrs. M. L. Powell, and Mr. Howard Powell, all of Lowndes, have also been spending the holidays in our city.

There was a sociable at Mr. F. A. Gulledge's on the evening of the 28th. It was a most enjoyable occasion. All those that attended had a pleasant time. Bountiful refreshments were served to the guests by the charming young hostess, Miss Lilla Gulledge.

Stanton Notes.

At a regular convention of the Knights of Pythias held in Fraternal Lodge No. 69, last Tuesday night, the following officers were elected for the ensuing term: W. W. Little, C. C.; H. H. Lassiter, V. Sexton, C. W. Plant, Wm. M. Broadhead, Trustees. The Lodge at this place has a large membership, and is in a flourishing condition. The Knights will give a big oyster supper on New Year's night.

Mr. Richard Coe, president of the Gregory and Coe Lumber Company had the good fortune to receive a few nights ago, a Christmas present of a sweet little girl baby.

Mr. Thomas Harris, Stanton's worthy and prosperous blacksmith was married to Miss Hambrick last Sunday morning.

Mr. D. C. Gandy, the manager of the Alliance store, wedded Miss Jones, of Perry county, on the 19th. This makes the second marriage of Stantonites this month.

Mr. Percy Smith, of Wilcox, is visiting relatives in Stanton.

Messrs. Charlie, Kirk, Willie and Robert Jackson spent Christmas here with their sister, Mrs. W. H. Phillips.

Mr. O. R. Bell has been visiting relatives in Montgomery for the past week.

Mr. C. N. Dennis, a fat and jolly farmer of Cooper's Station, made us a pleasant call to renew his subscription last week.

[illegible]

Rev. [illegible] Sunday to a large congregation at Rocky Mount Church. The subject was the Revolutionary War. The Americans and British armies were contending in Pennsylvania. General Washington was in the neighborhood of Manheim, Lancaster County. General Lee with two or three aides-de-camp, rode in advance, and stopping at a wayside inn, informed the landlord that General Washington and his staff officers would quarter at the home for the night.

This news, of course, caused great confusion among the inmates of the establishment. They wanted to do honor to the beloved commander, and bustled about to have all things in readiness on his arrival.

"Here, you," said the genius who presided in the kitchen to General Lee, ignorant of his rank in the army, "just go to that woodpile and split an armful for me. I must hurry up this fire or I want to get a good supper for General Washington."

The officer, enjoying the joke obediently took up the axe, and soon the chips were flying in all directions. He was busily working away, when Washington and his staff rode up to the tavern.

"Why, General Lee," said the commander-in-chief, "what in the world are you doing?"

"Oh," replied he, lifting his head, "I am helping the maids in the kitchen. General Washington and his officers are coming here for supper to-night."

Both generals burst into a hearty laugh, in which their companions joined; and even the landlady, who had set the general at work, enjoyed the joke after she recovered somewhat from her mortification. —Youth's Companion.

Mr. Frank Hester and family visited relatives here last week.

CONSUMPTION CURED.
An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India Missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this recipe in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. Noyes, 820 Powers' Blk, Rochester, N. Y. apr16-y

Old Bullion (sadly)—"An appetite."—Street & Smith's Good News.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer $100 for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. CHENEY & Co., Toledo, O.

ALLIANCE TALKS.

NEWS OF THE ORDER AND ITS MEMBERS

Reform Press Comment and Items of Interest to Alliancemen Everywhere.

L. F. Livingston, as chairman of the committee on constitution at Indianapolis, made a good fight for economy and the reduction of running expenses by the National Alliance.

The Clinton Caucasian is not surprised that the press should misrepresent and Wall street give money to check the Alliance, since they saw 5,000,000 voters represented at the Supreme Council at Indianapolis.

The Iowa Tribune and several smaller papers have combined. The total circulation is 11,520 copies. It has an able corps of editors and will make things hum for the alliance in that State. Gen. J. B. Weaver is one of the editors.

It is reported that Hall, McAllister & Co., the anti-Sub-Treasuryites, have indefinitely postponed their convention at Memphis. We thought that would be the outcome of their little blowout. They had better hire somebody to kick them across the country now.—Progressive Farmer.

The Progressive Farmer says: According to some of the papers a few sub-alliances in Georgia have disbanded. Nearly two thousand have not disbanded. But still a few will fall from grace. If you would give some people a pass to heaven they would light their pipe with it before they got two hundred feet from the earth.

The sub-treasury plan was adopted in the national meeting unanimously by a rising vote. This is evidence that the Order is not divided, but to the contrary is working together with a unity of action that will sooner or later bring success. Such a unanimous indorsement after the past year of mendacious opposition speaks volumes for the completeness of Alliance education. Let it be continued vigorously during the coming year.

The following are the officers of the South Dakota State Alliance, selected at its recent meeting: President, H. L. Loucks, re-elected; first vice-president, A. V. Van Doren; second vice president, A. T. Adams, re-elected; secretary treasurer, S. M. Harden, re-elected. Executive Committee—A. Lawrence, H. W. Smith, and S. J. Hoffman. Delegates to Supreme Council—H. L. Loucks, J. R. Lowe, M. M. Price; alternates—F. F. Meyer, J. E. Kelley, and J. W. Hardin.

The Alliance Herald (Montgomery, Ala.) says: This country is in the throes of a money famine, and the masses of the people can realize no prosperity until it shall be relieved. How this relief shall come and how it shall be secured, are the questions for the publicists of this country to settle. The Republican idea is to reduce the volume of currency. The Cleveland idea is to destroy the "dishonest money," which means the same thing. The masses of the people do not embrace either of these remedies, for they are not remedies, but aggravators of the malady. It would seem to be monumental cheek an intelligent people, but these are the two leading ideas as political panaceas for the ills from which the body politic is suffering. It requires very little perception to realize that the demand is not met and can never be fulfilled by either of these remedies.

The Alliance Sentinel (Rogers, Ark.) says: The people are in the midst of a revolution, and revolutions never go backward, in the midst of a campaign, which, if successful, will result in the good of all the people. Hence, there is no place to halt now until the race is completed. If the Alliance is successful good government will be the result, but if bossism should overthrow the Alliance and fasten its fangs upon the vitals of the government, in the future as in the past, constitutional government, so far as the Union is concerned, will be at an end. We are not an alarmist, but simply call the attention of the people to a fact. It would be best for the people to look the surroundings fully and squarely in the face. Let the people be honest and truthful with each other; in fact they can not afford to be otherwise. This is a time of governmental peril, and the people should act wisely in the premises.

COLD FACTS.

Under the above heading the National Economist, in its last issue, says: "The hurrah existence of the Alliance has passed and gone. Further growth and progress must be the result of cold-blooded calculation and vigorous education upon correct economic principles. The excitement and enthusiasm which always wait upon new conquests must give way to that cool deliberation which alone can hold and develop the fruits of victories already won. Such changed conditions will be the crucial test of membership. It will disclose who are the true reformers, and who are only time-servers; who have joined the Order for the good of the human race and stand ready to make personal sacrifices in that endeavor, and those who come in for personal gain or lack the courage of conviction. Even now this process of realignment is going on. Nine-tenths of the criticisms and objections to Alliance doctrines and methods come from those seeking an excuse to avoid further responsibility in alliance reform, and at the same time make their return to old party allegiance as easy as possible. The old politicians have played the waiting game, the most dangerous of all, and are just now doing some effective work. Experience has taught them not to expend their strength in fighting a reform during the hurrah and excitement of its first appearance, but to wait until the inevitable settling of conditions comes about and then begin operations in earnest. When this stage in all reforms is reached there is sure to be found differences of opinion in regard to methods, disappointments in regard to official preferment, jealousies, mercenary motives, and plottings to revenge real or fancied injuries. All this discord and bitterness is utilized by the politician to discover the traitorous and ambitious. When found the work of disruption and ultimate destruction is undertaken with a cool, deliberate calculation that has seldom failed. Indications of this kind of work have been in the past to a limited extent, but will increase, no doubt, rapidly in the immediate future. A presidential election is at hand which always brings out the worst and most unconscionable politicians, the trafficking tyrants of the corruptionist and the fetich infamies which unite upon party lies will be used to their utmost to induce members to leave the Alliance and fall into line with the old parties. When one is found willing to comply his name is given out in the press and for the moment he is seemingly a hero. Such methods, it can not be denied, will prove successful in many instances and each will be magnified in order to induce the belief that a general stampede is imminent. Desertions of this character, if considered in their true light, are a benefit pure and simple. It is a separation of the real from that counterfeit that strengthens instead of depletes. The difficulty lies not so much in the discouragement which follows the loss of such members as in the knowledge that human nature is so frail and manhood so easily turned into merchandise. Some of these conditions confront the Alliance at the present time. There are no more States to organize, or but few at least. The opposition is contending for every foot of territory with a mendacity never equaled. The press has been subsidized until it is a unit its contest against the Order."

Corporations, trusts and monopolies, with all the cunning and craft that money can purchase, are seeking to destroy its power. Both political parties are uniting against it, and the whole power of government is being used in the same direction. To retain the present membership under such conditions will be a task of no little magnitude. To meet this opposition squarely requires courage of the highest type. There is no room for cowards. Brave men and true women can alone bring ultimate triumph to Alliance principles. The coming year is full of danger, hard work and many disappointments. Instead of being discouraged let each resolve anew to redouble all previous efforts to serve the order by defending its principles and aiding those who are engaged in the work of education. A united effort of this character would strengthen the weak, convince the doubting, and bring defeat and confusion to the opposition.

A dispatch from Syracuse, N. Y., says: Supervisor Thomas J. Welch was, on Tuesday morning, fined $250 and sentenced to the penitentiary for thirty days [illegible] Welch is the man who took the third ward returns to Albany when he should have given them to the inspectors for correction.

Daniel Hand, the philanthropist whose princely gift to the American Missionary Association for education of colored people in the southern states, was the talk of the country a few years ago, died Thursday morning in Gulford, Conn., his birthplace, of old age. He was ninety years old last July.

A New York dispatch says: The conviction of Peter J. Clazsen and James A. Simmons, who wrecked the Sixth National bank, were affirmed Monday by the supreme court, and unless pardon is granted the prisoners will begin to serve their terms in a few days. They both go up for six years.

A cablegram of Sunday from Rome, Italy, says: It is stated on good authority that diplomatic relations will shortly be re-established with America. Baron Fava will not be returned to Washington, but will be transferred to some other diplomatic post, and some other diplomat be sent to Washington.

A conference between the representatives of the Jefferson Davis Monument Association and the Southern Press Association took place at Washington Saturday, for the purpose of perfecting arrangements, by which the two organizations can work together in raising funds for the erection of a monument to the conferate president.

A dispatch of Tuesday says: A crazy man in Venton, Ia., named Dan Bales, in a demand for $10,000 from S. A. Griffin, a wealthy physician, on threatening his life, appointed the postoffice as a place of meeting. When the man appeared at the postoffice the police were in readiness and arrested him. He is now in an insane asylum.

A London cablegram states that a largely attended meeting of English holders of the Virginia debt was held Friday, and after considerable discussion it was decided by a vote of 39 to 17 to accept the agreement effected between the Virginia state debt commission and the Olcutt committee for the settlement of the Virginia state debt.

Exports of specie from the port of New York for week ended Dec. 19, amounted to $227,208, of which $61,000 was gold and $166,208 silver. All the gold and $9,550 in silver went to South America and $116,558 in silver went to Europe. Imports of specie last week amounted to $1,085,180 of which $985,962 was gold and $99,218 silver.

A London cablegram of Tuesday says: The duke of Devonshire, who died at Holker hall, Milnethorp, Monday night, owned 198,000 acres of land laying in fourteen counties. The rent roll of his estates amount to over one hundred and seventy thousand pounds per year. The marquis of Hartington, his son, succeeds to the title and goes to the house of lords.

A dispatch of Tuesday from St. Louis states that the venerable Archbishop Kenrick is seriously ill. Ever since the sudden attack of weakness, which seized the aged prelate during his daily walk about two weeks ago, and which showed that the exciting events of the jubilee celebration had told heavily on his enfeebled constitution, he has not been able to leave his bed.

A Washington dispatch of Tuesday says: The first assistant postmaster general, Whitfield, has received information that during the last several weeks the postmaster at Baird, Calahan county,

FUNERAL OBSEQUIES

At the Capitol Over the Body of Senator Plumb.

A Washington dispatch says: On Monday the United States senate, house of representatives, executive and judicial departments of the government, representatives of foreign powers and his many friends among the Washington public paid the last tribute of affection and respect to the memory of the late Senator Preston B. Plumb. At 10 o'clock the casket was borne from the house to the hearse by eight of the capitol police under direction of Assistant-Sergeant-at-Arms Merritt. The casket was removed from the hearse and carried up the white marble steps of the senate wing. At the entrance to the building the remains were met by Sergeant-at-Arms Valentine, who escorted them through the lower corridors of the building and upstairs to the marble room in the rear of the senate chamber, and only a few feet from the vice president's chair. There they were placed on a black catafalque in the center of the room, and all persons requested to retire.

IN THE SENATE CHAMBER.

When the senate met at noon the chamber was partly arranged for the funeral obsequies. The desk and chair of the late senator were heavily draped. tors, except the diplomatic and vice-president's galleries, which were reserved for Kansas. In the opening prayer Rev. J. G. Butler, chaplain, referred in a feeling manner to the death of Senator Plumb. On motion of Mr. Manderson the reading of the journal was dispensed with and Mr. Peffer rose to make the formal announcement of Mr. Plumb's death and to offer the usual resolutions. The senate then, on motion of Mr. Sherman, took a recess till 1 o'clock p. m. At 1 o'clock p. m. the senate was called to order by the vice president. During the half hour's recess the work of preparing the chamber for the funeral ceremonies had been completed. The public galleries had, in the meantime, become crowded to their utmost capacity, and even the halls and corridors leading to them were packed with people seeking to gain admittance. Shortly before 1 o'clock the cabinet officers and assistant secretaries of the executive departments began to arrive.

Exactly at half-past 1 o'clock Captain Bassett announced the presence of the president of the United States and his cabinet. The senators and spectators stood up to do them honor (as they had done also in the cases of the diplomatic corps and of the supreme court.) The committee of the two houses escorting the body of the dead senator appeared at the main entrance, and while all in the chamber stood up, the procession moved up the aisle, the chaplain reciting the opening sentences of the funeral service. The chaplain finished from the clerk's desk the reading of the funeral services and appropriate selections from the scripture. Then, with the whole assemblage standing in respect for the deceased, the procession was re-formed, and the body of the dead senator was borne out, to be taken to the railroad station. The senate, without any formal motion, standing, adjourned till Tuesday.

THE SENATE TUESDAY.

Several Nominations Sent in by President Harrison.

In the senate, Tuesday, after the introduction of a number of bills the resolution heretofore offered and reported back from the committee on contingent expenses for the increase of the messenger force of the senate was presented and agreed to, Mr. Platt withdrawing the objection which he had previously made to it, and remarking that he found the increase asked for to be absolutely necessary, if the senate was to utilize the Maltby hotel property, which he was very sorry had ever been bought by the government.

The president sent to the senate the following nominations: Thomas H. Miller, postmaster at Tuscaloosa, Ala.; Mrs. Martha Brown, Fort Valley, Ga.; Rosalas Boyd, Kosciusko, Miss.

The senate in executive session confirmed the nomination of S. B. Elkins to be secretary of war.

Fire at Truckee, Cal., did $50,000 damage, Monday.

The Mississippi cotton planters met in convention in Memphis, Tenn., Monday.

The Piedmont bank at Gordonsville and the bank at Waynesboro, Va., closed their doors Monday.

On Monday the South Carolina house of representatives recommitted the world's fair bill, after a lengthy discussion, by a vote of 43 to 40.

At Atlanta, Ga., Tuesday, Judge Clarke dismissed the petition for a new trial in the case of Steve Ryan, now in Fulton county jail under a sentence for contempt.

A cargo of 800 bales of cotton on board the lighter belonging to the Ocean Steamship company, of Savannah, Ga., was destroyed by fire Sunday evening in Brooklyn. The damage was about $25,000.

Messrs. Cohn & Co., tobacco dealers of New York city, have purchased the Dickerson Buck warehouse at Bainbridge, Ga., for $3,000. They will employ 500 hands packing and assorting the weed for shipment.

Professor R. M. Ramsay, a few years ago principal of an East Tennessee seminary, near Sweetwater, committed suicide at Chattanooga Friday by jumping from the middle span of the county bridge into the Tennessee river. Despondency was the cause of the act.

At Lewisburg, Tenn., Tuesday night, burglars secured about five hundred dollars in money and stamps by blowing open the safe in the postoffice. All the drawers were removed from the safe, and these, with the papers of no money value, were found in an adjacent blacksmith shop.

A telegram from Columbia, S. C., says: On Tuesday the house of representatives rejected the bill to provide for the representation of the state in the world's fair. The bill provided for the creation of a commission composed of seven white men, two women and one negro, and appropriated $15,000 to pay the preliminary expenses.

A San Diego, Cal., dispatch says: The first full car load of American tin ever produced from an American mine was received Tuesday from the Temescal mines. The shipment consisted of over 26,000 pounds of tin. The output of the Temescal mines is being rapidly increased, and American tin will be regularly put on the market in carloads.

A Nashville dispatch says: Rotton or poisoned souce came near causing the deaths of all the members of Mr. E. J. Vaughn's family. Saturday Mr. Vaughn purchased several pounds of souce in the market house, and he and his wife and three children, ate heartily of it at dinner. In less than thirty minutes all were taken ill and for three hours two physicians worked with them before they were out of imminent danger.

A Nashville telegram says: The Knoxville and Ohio railroad on Saturday brought suit in the United States circuit court against the state officers, to enjoin Comptroller Allen from certifying the assessment of its property to the officers of the counties through which it passes, and to enjoin him or his successor from attempting to collect the taxes. The road was recently assessed at $800,000. The Knoxville and Ohio is the successor of the Knoxville and Kentucky, which when chartered by the state was forever exempted from taxation. The amount of taxes involved is about $10,000.

A Raleigh, N. C. dispatch says: Governor Holt, on Friday, received a score of telegrams and letters earnestly protesting against the execution of Alfred Downs, the negro burglar, at Charlotte. One was signed by leading lawyers and the editor of The Daily News, Mobile, Ala.; one by ex-Mayor Barton Myers, of Norfolk, Va.; one leter from one of the noted Virginians, who in the name of justice and the people, protest against the punishment as barbarous. There are reasons for belief that out of this noted case there will grow a change in the law regarding burglary.

ANOTHER WARRANT

Issued for the Arrest of the Festive Broker Field.

A New York dispatch of Saturday reports that another warrant had been issued and placed in the hands of Warden Dunlap, of Ludlow street jail, for the arrest of Edward M. Field upon the indictment against him for forgery, should Field succeed in being admitted to bail in the civil suit under which he is now a prisoner. Field will probably be arraigned to plead to the indictment for forgery at once. The investigation of the books of Field, Lindley, Welchers & Co., by the district attorney will be resumed, and it is expected that still other indictments for forgery will be found against Field.

One of the most interesting exhibits at the World's Fair, Chicago, Ill., will be the models now being made by the Smithsonian Institute showing the various phases in seal and walrus catching and killing in Alaskan waters.

What is a "straight angle?"

Ask the first ten people you meet what is a "straight angle," and see how many of them do not show up that hopeless look which implies a belief that there is a joke, but an admission that they can't see it. Educated men and women, even boys but lately out of the high school, will admit that a straight angle is something they never heard of. Webster, a dictionary of some standing even in court, defines an angle as a bend or corner, the meeting of two lines that run in different directions. But now comes modern education, the great selling agency for text books, and it proclaims that a straight angle not only is, but is an important factor in geometry.

There is no difference between a straight angle and a straight line—not a bit. The line A B C is the angle A B C. An angle is a straight line, a "bend" has no bend to it, and a corner is as open as all outdoors. But modern education finds in the theoretical angle of 180 degs. something to puzzle the children, and so we have a new geometry, a reconstruction on the customary basis of doing things differently from the old way.—Hartford Courant.

"August Flower"

What Is It For?

This is the query perpetually on your little boy's lips. And he is no worse than the bigger, older, balder-headed boys. Life is an interrogation point. "What is it for?" we continually cry from the cradle to the grave. So with this little introductory sermon we turn and ask: "What is AUGUST FLOWER FOR?" As easily answered as asked: It is for Dyspepsia. It is a special remedy for the Stomach and Liver. Nothing more than this; but this brimful. We believe August Flower cures Dyspepsia. We know it will. We have reasons for knowing it. Twenty years ago it started in a small country town. To-day it has an honored place in every city and country store, possesses one of the largest manufacturing plants in the country and sells everywhere. Why is this? The reason is as simple as a child's thought. It is honest, does one thing, and does it right along—it cures Dyspepsia.
